A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, [illegible] Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

AN INFANT CREMATED.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING OF A FAMILY IN THE TERRITORIES.

A Man's House Burns to the Ground When the Thermometer is 20 Degrees Below Zero—Frozen and Burned.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 31.—From Regina comes a terrible tale of suffering and death, the victims being William Thompson, an ex-Ontario farmer, and his family who have a homestead a few miles west of Regina.

About 6 o'clock Friday morning, Thompson got up and started a fire in a box stove and then returned to bed and fell asleep again. The stovepipes getting overheated set fire to the paper and cotton with which the room was ceiled and almost in an instant the whole building was in flames. Jumping out of bed he ran to open the door but had considerable trouble to get out. Before his wife could reach the door with one of the children she fell down suffocated, with her night dress on fire. Thompson dragged her out and tore [illegible] burning night dress, and rushed back [illegible] the flames for his two children. [illegible] youngest one was burned all over [illegible] and died shortly after. The eldest [illegible] badly burned and is in a very dangerous condition. The mother is badly burned about the body.

Thompson, who was perfectly nude, with the thermometer registered nearly 20 degrees below zero, hastily put the sufferers in the hen house and started to run over to John Grant's, one and a quarter miles away, without a stitch of clothing on. After running a short distance his feet started to freeze. Returning, all he could find to clothe himself with was an apron and two pieces of women's garments, which he tied around his feet and head. Starting out again he struggled forward to within 100 yards of the house, when he fell down, almost frozen. Fortunately, he was seen as he fell and carried into the house. Thompson's feet and hands are badly frozen, and they may have to be amputated. His wife and the surviving child are suffering terribly, both from burns and frost bites, and they are in a dangerous condition.

26 DROWNED.

The Oseco Driven Ashore in the Darkness at Holyhead—All Efforts to Reach Her Fail.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British barque Oseco was wrecked in a gale at Holyhead early Sunday morning, and with her perished her entire crew of 26 men.

The Oseco was driven ashore back of the Holyhead breakwater. Her signals of distress were first heard by the coast guard about 4 o'clock in the morning. At that time it was pitch dark and great waves were washing over the breakwater. In spite of the danger of being washed into the sea, the guard proceeded along the breakwater and having rigged up the rocket apparatus, began firing life lines in the direction of the wreck.

BROKEN IN TWAIN.

The faint light of the rockets soon disclosed that the vessel had broken in two midships and that the mainmast had fallen, crushing the lives out of several of the crew. A few survivors could be seen clinging to each half of the vessel and their piteous cries for help could be heard above the storm. After many failures the coast guard succeeded in firing a line over the wreck, but by that time all on board had perished. A lifeboat vainly tried again and again to approach the wreck. Not a vestige of the barque could be seen today and there is no prospect of any salvage.

NUMEROUS CASUALTIES.

Reports of stormy weather continues to be received from all parts of Europe. Numerous small wrecks and casualties are reported in Great Britain and Ireland. Many lives were saved by lifeboats.

A severe gale is blowing on the Baltic, and navigation is suspended at Copenhagen.

A heavy snow has fallen in the north of Scotland, and two railway trains have been blocked on the tracks.

FATALITIES AT A HOTEL BLAZE AT ALBANY, N.Y.

The Delevan House a Seething Cauldron of Fire—Seven Are Missing—Several Guests Dead and Injured.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 31.—The Delevan House, the centre of all big state political events for 40 years, was completely destroyed by fire at 9 o'clock last evening. The outburst of flames before an alarm could be given to arouse the inmates of the rooms was something appalling.

Up the elevator shaft there shot a solid column of flames and up the stair case near this shot another column. As the mass of white and hot flames reached each of the five floors it branched out into tongues of leaping destruction and it seemed as though the whole interior of the structure was a seething mass.

There was a rush for the stairs and in a few minutes a mass of humanity came tumbling down.

A SEETHING CAULDRON.

Within ten minutes after the first note of alarm at least twelve persons were dangling on the insufficient rope fire escapes or hanging on to the window sills. Although five storeys high, and the only means left for the people in the cut-off rooms was to use the rope fire escapes.

The hotel takes in the entire block, about 110 by 140 feet, and this was one seething cauldron, only bound by the four walls. Of the 100 or more guests at the hotel none are known to have saved more than the clothes on their persons.

The Delevan house is 50 years old, and one of the most famous hotels in the country. The total loss is estimated at $500,000, with an insurance of $300,000.

ON THEIR BRIDAL TOUR.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hellman were on their wedding tour. He jumped through a window to escape the flames and is dead. His wife, who was in the room with him tried the fire escape, but it either broke or else she failed to hold to it, for she, too, came to the pavement heavily. At the hospital it is said that she will lose her reason. She has been put under opiates and every endeavor made to save her.

Mrs. H. A. Foakes, of Dayton, O., jumped from a window and was killed. A number of guests and servants and one fireman were injured more or less seriously.

SEVEN ARE MISSING.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 31.—Later developments in the Delevan House fire last night show that at least seven servants are unaccounted for. They are: Mary and Nora Sullivan, chambermaids, who are sisters; Bridget Fitzgibbon, pantry girl, two colored cooks whose names have not been ascertained, and a man named [illegible], employed in the steward's department. The others are supposed to be domestics. The pay roll has not yet been fully verified and it may be that others have perished.

INSP. BYRNES RESIGNS.

HE SAYS NEW YORK'S POLICE DEPARTMENT IS ROTTEN.

He Said He Made His Fortune, Estimated at $350,000, by Speculation—Inspector McLaughlin Also Accounts for His Wealth.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Saturday night the Lexow Investigating Committee adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman. Just as he was through answering Mr. Goff's probing questions, Superintendent Byrnes handed a letter to Chairman Lexow and said that it was a copy of one that he had sent to Mayor-elect Strong early this month. It was his resignation from the force, of which he has been a member for the last 32 years. The superintendent said that on two occasions since he was appointed he was on the point of resigning, owing to the continued conflict between the commissioners and himself. The superintendent, he said, should have absolute charge of the discipline of the department, but that all his efforts in that direction were frustrated by the commissioners.

WHERE THE CURSE IS.

This department was honeycombed with abuses, which had been growing for thirty years, and they could only be remedied by radical legislation. Local politicians, he claimed, were the curse of the department, and as long as politics was a factor in the force such a state of things would exist. Although he had done his utmost to procure substantial information as to corruption and bribery, he was unable to get it, and the whole department was pregnated with the belief that promotion had to be bought and merit was of no avail.

He paid a tribute to Dr. Parkhurst, who, he said, manufactured public sentiment, without which it would have been impossible for the committee to have acquired the information it did. His wealth, which he estimated at $350,000, was made by speculation, he said, through the instrumentality of Jay Gould and his son, George Gould. His purchases in real estate were also very profitable and he claimed not to have a bank account.

THE CHIEF'S STORY.

Inspector McLaughlin, the chief of New York's detective force, was also on the stand today, and told the story of his financial progress. He had $6,000 when he joined the force; he made $40,000 from a patent switch; his wife made plenty of money; by his own figures he showed that his equity in real estate today is worth $102,175. He strenuously denied ever having received a dollar for protecting gamblers or proprietors of houses of ill-repute, and the levying of blackmail, he said, was unknown to him.

GREEN GOODS SCHEME.

IT WAS WORKED VERY SUCCESSFULLY IN TORONTO.

An Orillia Farmer is Buncoed Out of $200 by a Clever Green Goods Operator—Was to Get $1,000 in the "Long Green" for that Amount.

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—The desire to get something for nothing, or for less than its legitimate value, is one of the most prevalent of human failings, and the many warnings which have been given by the losses and troubles of those who will risk even their good name and liberty to become possessed of illegal gain appear to have little effect in deterring others from running themselves into danger. Every little while the police learn of attempts being made to put bogus bills, popularly called "green goods" or counterfeit coin, into circulation, and in spite of the severe penalties which the law provides and the courts award upon conviction of either manufacturer, dealer or purchaser, this particular form of crime shows little, if any, sign of diminution.

HE BOUGHT $1,000 WORTH.

The latest victim of the green goods merchant to be heard from in Toronto is a young farmer named Walter H. Orser, who hails from the neighborhood of Orillia. For some little time past he has been in communication with a horse trader of somewhat extensive acquaintance among the liveries and dealers of the city, and finally arrangements were made by which the horse trader was to supply Orser with a package of bogus bills of the face value of $1,000, and receive in exchange $200 in lawful currency. In pursuance of this agreement Orser came down from Orillia last week and met the horse trader by appointment and Saturday afternoon in a downtown hotel, where preliminaries were satisfactorily arranged and considerable "bowling up" indulged in, so much in fact that Orser became very much the worse for his libation.

OUT EXACTLY $200.

The pair then adjourned to a small room in the rear of John O. Wood's drug store, 101 York street, where a third man joined the party, and was introduced by the horse trader to Orser as a friend of his, who had possession of the converted packet of spurious wealth. This friend thereupon produced some alleged samples of merchandise, and succeeded so well in satisfying Orser that the latter produced his wad and counted out the $200 agreed upon. This was quickly gathered up by the confederates, and one of them retired to fetch the packet. In a few minutes the other made some excuse to go out, and the young farmer was left alone. After waiting some time he began to realize that he had been duped, and going out into the street he began to raise a commotion. The constable on the beat succeeded in partially pacifying him by advising him to lodge a complaint in the detective office, but he was in such a befuddled condition that he could not at that time make a coherent statement. It is anticipated, however, that he may communicate with the authorities this morning, when action may follow.

PROMOTION FOR STEWART.

Sir John's Late Private Secretary to Succeed J. G. Moylan.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—It is understood that Mr. J. G. Moylan, Inspector of Penitentiaries, will shortly be superannuated, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Douglas Stewart, private secretary to the late Sir John Thompson. Mr. Stewart is one of the most efficient officers in the service, and his promotion will be heard of with great pleasure by his hosts of friends.

In the friendly hockey match at Ottawa, when the champion M.A.A.A. team were beaten by 4 to 1, Benedict put in his first appearance on the Capital seven. He was not fast, says an Ottawa paper, but is a hard tussle was sure to get the puck, and he is not so steady in shooting on goal.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 31, 1894.

Good morning!

A key is given to each patron of a London restaurant, as he enters. Before he passes out, after paying for his meal, he tries to open a little casket with his key. There is only one key that will open it. He who is lucky enough to secure the proper key takes the contents of the casket—a £5 note.

At a fair in Cumberland, Me., a yoke of oxen, weighing 3,220 pounds, were matched against twenty men, whose combined weight was about the same, in pulling a drag on which were granite blocks weighing 4,959 pounds. The men easily moved the drag ninety-five feet in two minutes, while the oxen only moved it 85 feet in the same time.

Travelers in France must be careful about their silver change. Not only are the foreign coins, which were formerly current, no longer accepted, but the French two-franc and one franc pieces issued before 1964 have been called in, and are now worth only their weight in silver, less than half their face value.

A shepherd who can tell from seeing a patient's hair what his disease is and whose cures are miraculous, attracts hundreds of people daily to the village of Radbruch, near Harburg, in Germany. To protect his own health he refused to see more than a fixed number daily, who must hold tickets which were distributed by the local constable, till a firm of speculators bought them all and sold them for high prices. The police authorities are investigating the matter.

Sir Henry Acland, Bart., Regius professor of medicine at Oxford, who accompanied the Prince of Wales in his visit to America in 1860, has sent in his resignation, to take effect at the end of the year, when he will be 80 and will have served the university 50 years. He was appointed reader in anatomy in 1845, Radcliffe's librarian in 1851, Regius professor in 1858, and was created a baronet in 1890. He is the uncle of the Right Hon. Arthur H. Dyke-Acland, Lord Rosebery's Minister of Education.

While there has been no official announcement yet, the impression is general that there will be another session of Parliament before the general election is called on. The best proof that this is the programme is the fact that there is to be a by-election in [illegible]berland over Hon. A. R. Dick[illegible] of state. With [illegible] general election in contemplation, the bye-election would be unnecessary. Mackenzie Bowell evidently wants to get a better idea of where he is at before pressing the button.

Vice-Admiral Brine, who has just retired from active service in the British navy has had a distinguished career. Nearly half a century ago he was engaged in the war with China, and in the suppression of piracy in Chinese waters. Subsequently he was engaged in a similiar warfare on the east coast of Africa. He went to Mandalay on a diplomatic service, and as a younger brother of Trinity house and nautical assessor he has of late years fought his battles in the law courts rather than at sea.

HYPNOTISM AS A DEFENCE.

The "temporary insanity" plea for murderers having been worn out, they have invented and put into operation a new one in Kansas. To that State belongs the distinction of being the first in which hypnotic suggestion has been successfully set up as a defence for the crime of murder. A man named Anderson Gray was recently found guilty at Wichita of the murder of Tom Patton, and sentenced to death. It appears that the shooting of Patton was actually done by a man named McDonald. McDonald was tried for the crime, but pleaded that he committed the act under hypnotic suggestion from Gray, who had gained complete controll over him, and on this plea McDonald was acquitted. A dangerous precedent is here established, which, it might be expected, will be taken advantage of by Blixt, the murderer of Miss Ging, at Minneapolis, Minn, who has confessed that he committed the crime under hypnotic suggestion from one Hayward.

Hypnotism is a subject on which the majority of people have but the most vague notions and no positive knowledge whatever. Even those who have made a special study of it hold diverse opinions. One expert says hypnotic influence cannot be exerted at a distance, but that there must be a personal contact or at least the glance of the eye. Another says that neither these conditions are necessary, but that the operator cannot control his subject for more than two or three hours after the two has separated. Another says that no person can be hypnotized against his or her will, and the subject must voluntarily yield to the influence sought to be exerted, and that the slightest resistance will inevitably make the experiment a failure. The average juryman knows nothing about thes things He cannot discriminate between the claims and theories of the experts. He is in a state of ignorance as to whether or not there is any such thing as hypnotism. He must take everything on faith, or reject the mystic element altogether in considering cases brought before him. And the average juryman is in these respects just like the great mass of mankind. In the present state of physical research the courts would do well to exclude all testimony relating to hypnotic control. To admit is simply to grope in the dark, if not to fall into traps of impudence and devices of fraud. It is not likely that the Kansas method of trying murder cases will ever be adopted in Canada.

MY BOB SLED.

Made it all myself, you see; it wasn't much for fine;
Fellers all began to laugh at that old sled uv mine,
When they see me climbing up their hill we used to slide
A-draggin' it along behin', already for a ride
Then they shouted so rude like: "Say, Jimmie, what is it?"
Didn't feel like sayin' much, so 'tended to my biz;
Just let 'em keep on laughin' an' a-tauntin' me until
I squared my old bob sled around for my first slide down ther hill.

The runners was of hickory, and the top was made uv oak.
When I got her finished; wa'n't no part to be broke,
But the other fellers' sleds were all so [illegible] up slick an' fine,
Kinder knocked the spots all off that home made one uv mine;
The bottoms was so slippery, an' polished up so bright,
Was ready to bet she'd go ahead uv everythin' in sight;
But I never answered back a word, an' was mighty quiet, till
I laid right down an' hugged her tight, for my first run down ther hill.

Didn't have a mite uv paint on bottom sides or top;
Knew if she once got started, though, 'twould be mighty hard to stop.
'Twas seasoned stuff she was made uv, an' jus' ther shape for speed.
Might keep a-pokin' lots uv fun, I knew she'd take ther lead
There was Flipper, Comet, Reindeer, an' Dexter there an' Dart,
All lined up on ther hillside and ready for the start.
My old bob sled didn't have no name, I'se bound she shouldn't till
I found out which would suit her best, by my first slide down ther hill.

An' then we shouted: One, two, three an' altogether, Go!
Gee whiz! The way that bob sled flew was anythin' but slow;
She shot ahead like a rocket that's got lots uv powder behin';
None uv the rest was in it, when you look back up ther line
She beat 'em like a thoroughbred, if she did look like a scrub.
'Twas my turn now to laugh an' shout "Gimme yer heads to rub"
"Say, Jimmie, won't you let us ride?" and I said "Come on! I will."
For they owned my bob sled beat them all, a-slidin' down ther hill.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for January.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY for January, just out, is really a holiday number, with regard both to the character of its reading matter and its richness in illustration. The leading article, "St. Andrews and Andrew Lang," by Mr. Leicester Addis, is a charming account of the university career and literary life of this versatile author, also of the quaint little Scotch city of his Alma Mater, where the faddish game of golf has been played on its native links ever since the Middle Ages. Frances Smith gives a glimpse of "Miss Gould at Lyndhurst," illustrating the occupations and amusements of an American chatelaine; and Frances Courtnay Bayler contributes three suggestive chapters "On Entertaining." In the way picturesque travels and exploration, there are "America's Egypt" (Yucatan), by Mme. Le Plongeon; "Finland and the Finns," by Herbert Montague Donnor; and "A Dash into Pineapple Land," which is South Eastern Florida. Lydia Hoyt Farmer contributes an interesting paper upon "Jerusalem in the first Century," and Charlotte McIlvain Moore writes sympathetically of "Old Kentucky Homes." "Chiming Bells," by S. H. Ferris, is a seasonable topic, thoroughly treated; and a full page engraving of Boutigny's picture of the death of Marshall Lannes at the battle of Essling furnishes the motive for some interesting historical pages about Napoleon ant Alexander I. of Russia.

THE VOICE OF LOVE.

The voice of love came stealing, with its tender, thrilling note,
And found my heart a-wearying in a gloomy spot remote,
And with its gentle cooling it eased the wounded spot
And planted 'mongst the bitter tears a sweet forgetmenot

The voice of love came singing that song of hopeful bliss
And swept out all the troubling with a smiling, happy kiss
The shadows that had covered o'er the sky now fled away;
And shadows slipped their holding at the fast approaching day.

The voice of love brought gladness in its joy inspiring tone
To the dreary scene of sadness, to a heart left all alone,
And with its magic touching it eased the sobbing sighs
And sprinkled rays of brightness with the teardrops in my eyes.

—E. N. Wood in Atlanta Constitution.

ALL'S WELL.

"All's well!"

"All's well!"

The musical cry floated down from the two black figures that stood vaguely outlined through the mist, high above the vessel's deck.

It floated down in ever widening ripples, round the great black hull and over the tossing waters. It was caught by the waves as they dashed from the vessel's prow and raced past her tall sides and foamed and splashed and eddied in her wake. It was caught up and thrown back and carried on again and swept out into the night—out into the night and shrouding mist and the rolling waves of the Atlantic, and there the ripples of its sound quivered for the last time and died away.

It floated down, already muffled by the mist, over the long wet decks to the ears of a man who paced to and fro in the after part of the vessel. It floated down and struck upon his ears and vibrated in them like the ringing of a bell

And the man turned in his restless walk and paced back again, with the cry still echoing in his ears, "All's well!"

He even repeated it to himself, softly, slowly, like one trying to reassure himself of some good news, too good to be as yet believed. He murmured it to himself with half closed lips each time that he paused in that monotonous pacing to and fro. His footsteps fell upon the deck and beat out the rhythm of the same two words. And each time that he murmured them, each time that his listening brain caught that sound in the rushing of the wind, or the whistling of the ropes, or the steady tramp of his own footfalls, there was a smile upon his face that was not good to see.

His fellow passengers on board the ship knew him as the Silent Man No doubt he had some other name, no doubt the captain knew it, and the ship's books held it written down in full, but to all the passengers who knew him he was known only as the Silent Man. And there were few on board who knew him not; few who had not noticed the tall, gaunt figure that strode incessantly to and fro and up and down upon the deck; few who had not shrunk insensibly from that haggard face and the lips that murmured forever to themselves, but could hardly be brought to frame an answer to another; few who had not wondered who this man was, with his murmuring lips, and his taciturnity, and his ceaseless tramp on the ship's deck, who had not speculated on the business that brought him on that voyage of the Amsterdam across the broad Atlantic.

Once more the bell sounded and the voices rang out through the darkness. And the Silent Man still paced, with bowed head and folded arms, up and down, to and fro, in the gathering mist.

Once again the bell was almost due to sound, but the cry that broke then from one of the two motionless figures on the lookout bridge was not the same—a cry of sudden fear, of wild alarm, with waving arms and frantic gestures and hands pointing out into the darkness, pointing into the darkness no longer now, pointing at something vast and shapeless, like a cloud rising from the water; something that came swiftly, noiselessly, loomingly out of the fog, ever nearer and nearer or towering high above the vessel's masts, lit with a strange glimmering light; something that a moment later, with a noise of crackling ice, with a horrible, rending, grinding jar, with a blow that made the great ship quiver like a compass needle, crashed into the bows of the Amsterdam.

For an instant she remained reared up against the iceberg, held fast in the jagged cleft that her prow had cut, then slowly, with a rushing swirl of water, slid back into the waves.

She was sinking in mid-Atlantic!

One of the first boats that were launched contained the Silent Man. He had taken his place quietly, almost mechanically. He was rowing now, and the beat of his oar in the rowlock seemed to him as he gazed back at the misty outline of the sinking ship to be still grimly, darkly, ominously echoing those words, "All's well!"

All that night they rowed, menaced incessantly by masses of detached ice, by floating wreckage, by foam topped surf that broke over the open boat—all that night and the next day and for many days after.

Who can tell the horror of those days?

Of days when the shrouding mist robbed them of all hope of rescue; when the sun beat down through the damp laden atmosphere for hour after hour on their uncovered heads; when no cloud in the sky came to screen them for an instant from its scorching, dazzling rays; when they drifted they scarcely knew whither and [illegible] afar off the fog signals of vessels passed them unheeded in the mist, while arms ached and strength was failing, and hunger and thirst were doing their fell work, and courage and hope together were well nigh spent.

Of nights when the rising breeze blew through their saturated clothes and chilled the very life within them; when other boats, the companions of their fate, were missed and lost sight of; when the great rolling swell threatened in the darkness to overwhelm them, and each giant wave as it passed seemed only to delay the death that the next must surely bring; when the misery and anguish and despair were made deeper and blacker and more intolerable by the darkness; of days and nights later on when the heat and thirst and weakness had done their work and men began to rave and sing aloud and say wild unmeaning things; when fever and death came among them; when it was no longer a strange sight to see dead men—their bodies stripped that their clothing might afford protection to the living—cast over into the gray waves without a prayer, almost without a thought; when the number of the living on board that little boat shrank awfully from day to day.

When there were at last but six alive—but five—and then one dim, gray morning only three!

The Silent Man still lived. Through all those days he lived—silent, unmoved, uncomplaining, working at his oar like a tireless machine, possessed, as it were, of a very greed of life; through all those days he lived, untouched by hunger or thirst, by heat or chill, by fatigue or exposure or despair; through all those days, unheeding everything around him, living in a sort of dream.

He had dreamed the same waking dream that night when he paced to and fro on the deck of the Amsterdam. He had dreamed the same dream, but not quite all of it, had seen the same figures, sleeping and waking, for 12 months past, but now, in his weakness and the horror of his daily life, with madness and delirium and death all around him, the figures gathered color and vividness and substantiality; they became to his disordered brain as living comrades, living and moving with him in a different world.

The scenes of the vision always recurred in the same order

A cottage lying at the end of a long shaded garden. The sun shining on the red tiled roof, and the white muslin curtains in the little windows, and the rustic porch of trellis work, on which a rose tree climbs stragglingly The garden bright with flowering lilac and drooping arbors of laburnum and all the uncultured profusion of English country flowers. The air around filled with the fragrance of the blossoms and the spring songs of the countless birds. And over all a sense of brightness and happiness and home.

A little 3-year-old child, toddling with open arms and laughing eyes, down the gravel path.

A fair haired young mother, that runs and catches up the little girl and bears her, with merry laughter, held aloft in her arms, down the path to meet the dreaming man. A moment of exquisite happiness, of mutual love, of joy so boundless that it seems to fill the soul and brim over. A time of happy rest, of unimpaired content, when those two sit in the rose twined porch, with the child playing at their feet, and watch the sun as he sinks to his rest.

A shadow that falls like a knife between the dreaming man and his wife.

A shadow at first thin and gray, that seems, for all it is so slight, to rob the sunshine of all its warmth and brightness and leave the evening cold and cheerless. A shadow that grows quickly broader and blacker and icier until it blots out the figures of the wife and child and darkens the little porch, that steals up quickly, like a cloud of deadly vapor, round the red tiles of the cottage roof and wraps all the picture at last in an impenetrable shroud.

A shadow that somehow gathers itself gradually into the form of a man's face—coarse, thick lipped, sensuous, with gloating eyes and a false smile—a face that might for all its coarseness be made attractive by that luring smile, yet in itself cruel and dissolute and evil looking.

Slowly the face emerges from behind that shadowy curtain. Slowly the features come dimly forth as one by one they recur to the tortured mind of the man in his waking dream. Slowly the eyes of the dream face turn and gaze down upon him mockingly.

Then a great surge of blood red light floods over the gibing face and hides it from view, and there is only the gray shadow left.

So far the vision has always been the same, but lately, since the Silent Man had taken his passage on board the Amsterdam, there had been something more which followed it—another ending to the never ending dream.

An ending in which he sees a scrap of paper, traced over with trembling characters—a letter dated four weeks before from 96 Omaha avenue, Lumberville, U. S. A.

The characters range themselves unerringly before his mind:

I have sinned, and God knows I have repented. I do not ask to be forgiven. That cannot be. But for our child's sake, for little Goldie's sake, come quickly She who was once

Your Wife.

The Silent Man's hand steals into the breast of his coat and touches something there—something hard and cold, made of metal; something that he touches softly and caressingly, looking at his fingers afterward to make sure that the sea water has not reached it; something that in the darkness of the night, as he lies crouching in the bows of the tossing boat, he takes from his breast and examines and weighs in his hand.

And he listens to the washing of the waves as they splash on the boat's side and laughs softly to himself as they, too, seem to bear the same message, "All's well!"

All was yet well—for what he had to do.

The morning dawned at last, when there were but two living souls besides himself on board the boat—dawned with a glorious uprising of the sun to show that the deathly fog had rolled away; that all was clear as far as the horizon line; that a sailing ship was standing down toward them.

They were saved!

Who shall say what those men felt? Who shall describe the weeping and laughter intermixed, the incoherent cries of joy, the frantic waving of the emaciated arms, the wild ejaculations of confused thanksgiving and imprecation that burst from their blackened lips? Who shall wonder that but for their failing strength they would have cast themselves into the waves and struggled to gain the boat that was lowered to rescue them; that in the moment of their preservation from a death but few hours distant their minds became distraught?

All save the Silent Man.

He alone was calm. To him alone their rescue seemed not unexpected. To him alone it was not a miracle like the raising from the dead. To him alone it was but the fulfillment of an omen.

The sailing ship that picked them up was bound for Rio, but the Silent Man was destined to dream that strange dream many a time yet before land was reached. For several weeks they beat about on the Atlantic. They were delayed by head winds, thrown out of their course by constantly recurring gales, becalmed for three whole days on the equator. It was close upon two months from that glorious dawn when the little boat had been espied drifting on the waste of tossing waters that they first saw the coast of Brazil, like a streak of bluish cloud rising behind the sea line, opening out before them.

Their voyage was nearly at an end.

The bluish cloud resolved itself into dark green masses of vegetation, growing down to the water's edge. The vegetation became dotted and broken by the white roofs of buildings. The buildings collected themselves together, tier beyond tier, and blocked out the vegetation. A great concourse of masts and spars rose before the buildings They were entering Rio harbor.

It was long yet before the Silent Man resumed his journey. There were inquiries to be made—inquiries wherein the object of that journey was sought for but not revealed. The story of the loss of the

FORTY BURNED TO DEATH

A HORRIBLE HOLOCAUST AT A CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

The Overturning of a Lamp in a Small Entertainment Hall Results in the Death of Forty-One Persons—Two Firemen Killed.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ogn., Dec. 29.—News has just reached here that a most horrible holocaust occurred at Silver Lake, Lake County, Oregon, on Christmas eve, in which forty-one passengers were burned to death and sixteen badly injured, five of whom will die. A large crowd had assembled in Christman Brother's hall to attend a Christmas tree festival. While the festivities were at their height some one climbed on a bench from which to get a better view of what was going on. In doing so his head struck a lamp hanging from the ceiling, overturning it. The oil immediately caught fire. Everything being of a dry and inflammable nature the room was soon a mass of flames.

Some one shouted: "Shut the door and keep quiet; it can be put out."

By this time the confusion was so great that people began scrambling in a wild endeavor to reach the door. Women and children were trampled under foot, and as there was only one exit to the hall, and the fire being between the majority of the crowd and the door, many rushed headlong into the flames. Silver Lake is a small village in Lake County, Oregon, of about 100 inhabitants, and it is about 150 miles from the nearest telegraph office.

TWO FIREMEN KILLED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—At a fire this morning in the five storey factory at 124 and 126 West 24th street, Chief John J. Bresnan and Assistant Foreman John J. Rooney were killed.

STOLEN FROM MISSISSIPPI.

A Child Trained to be a Thief and Sold to an Indian Tribe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A Herald special from Victoria, B.C., says numerous arrests last night by the local police reveal the strangest case in the criminal history of the province. Peter Bellinger, a number of years ago stole a child, Arthur Moore, from his home in Chassell, Miss. He brought the boy to British Columbia, and educated him as a thief, instructing him to bring all his plunder to the gang with which the boy lived. The boy frequently disobeyed Bellinger, and the latter finally sold him as a slave to the chief of the Daakelner Indians, the most degraded tribe of aborigines in British Columbia. Young Moore told his story to a party of white men whom he met, and through the efforts of the police he was recovered from the savages. The authorities believe the chain of evidence connecting the persons now under arrest with the crime is complete and they hope to secure conviction.

THE G. O. M.

He Was Eight-Five Years of Age on Saturday Last.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Mr. Gladstone celebrated his eighty fifth birthday today and was the recipient of hundreds of letters and telegrams of congratulation and parcels containing birthday gifts. Mr. Gladstone was in remarkable good health and spirits and despite the stormy weather drove through the village of Hawarden to the church, where he met a deputation of Armenian Christians from Paris and London.

On behalf of Mr. Gladstone, the deputation presented a silver chalice to the church. The chalice was presented to the Rev. Stephen Gladstone, son of the ex-Premier and rector of the Hawarden church, in recognition of the interest his father has taken in the Armenian outrage. The deputation took luncheon with Mr. Gladstone at Hawarden Castle.

The Prince of Wales and Lord Aberdeen were among those who telegraphed their congratulations to Mr. Gladstone.

Mr. Gladstone, in his reply to the deputation's address, said that it was not their duty to assume that all the allegations of outrages were true, but rather to await the result of the inquiry which had been instituted.

He had been silent, he said, because he had full confidence that the Government knew its duty. If the allegations made should prove true, it was time that the execration of humanity should force itself upon the ears of the Sultan of Turkey and make him sensible of the madness of such a course as was being pursued.

TALK UNITED STATES

THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE COMPARED WITH THE ENGLISH.

A London Publication Calls Attention to the Difference In the Names Applied to Ordinary Articles—With Some Exceptions We "Speak United States."

"I am free, white, 21, and I speak United States," is the modern declaration of independence of every native adult American citizen.

The traveled American—everything by turns and nothing long—who aims at cosmopolitanism and invariably misses the target altogether, and the naturalized creature of indefinite origin, may not proclaim for "United States," but they adopt it all the same, in deference to the subtle power politicians call the vis major.

The American language used to be English, of course—English pure and simple, if English ever was either pure or simple—but it has prospered on its own account, like other things American, and now the English language is being Americanized, like the English nobility, and its vivacity is considerably benefited by the process.

That English is still the basis of "United States" the most thoroughbred American will not deny—the thoroughgoing American never denies facts, the game not being worth the candle, and he never plays games in the dark. The language is the same, with a difference, and in that lies the root of the matter and this article, for though London and New York speak a common, very common, Anglo-Saxon, if we forget for the moment the veneer of French, Latin, Greek and other languages with which it has been polished, yet the meaning of many words, from which language derives its significance, is considerably modified and altered in their passage across the Atlantic, and they become nearly if not quite as unintelligible as the cockney would find the dialect of a Northumberland village.

Thus, if a Londoner is fortunate enough to cross the Atlantic and be introduced to a sky which has not been discolored by smoke, a sun which has not been dimmed by fog and an atmosphere which the powers have not forgotten to dry and is as stimulating as champagne, but is unfortunate enough to have to buy a frock coat—a most expensive article—or to order one—as a rule, quite a different matter—he must call it "a Prince Albert."

Prince Albert coat it is in republican America, whatever it may be in monarchical England, where "Albert the Good" is occasionally remembered when the anniversary of his death comes round.

If he wants a billycock hat, he will never get it if he asks for it by that name. He must request the shopman to bring him a derby.

Should the coverings of his feet be worn out and he orders a new pair of boots, he will be given Wellingtons, which are "boots" in the American language. If he wants English boots, he must ask for "shoes," while if he likes to show pretty socks and wears Oxford shoes he must call for "ties," or "low cuts," and "slippers" if he needs pumps.

He will find, too, that he does not buy articles in a shop, but at a "store," and he will be sent to its different departments by a "floorwalker," not a shopwalker.

If he would travel in the city, and he desires to use the most derided of New York's public conveyances, which luckily for those whose time is valuable ply only up and down aristocratic Fifth avenue, he must forget that such an abomination as an omnibus ever existed and hail a "stage," while if he wishes to go by or talk about what he would at home call a tram he must be careful to say "surface car" or "street car," for trams have no existence in the American vocabulary. If, further, he would, when in Rome, do what Rome does, let him forswear the use of railway until he returns home and train himself to say "railroad," and let him never forget that he walks on the "sidewalk," not on the pavement.

Should he unfortunately happen to get ill, let him boldly declare that he "feels sick," entirely heedless of what he would be understood to mean home, or it will be taken that he is nauseated, for the words sick and ill mean just the reverse of what they signify in London, and if his doctor gives him a prescription let him not ask to be directed to a chemist, or he will be sent off to a manufacturer of chemicals, if any one knows the address of such a firm, but let him seek for a "pharmacy" or "drug store."

Instead of a draper's shop he will find a "dry goods store," and if he desires to go to one of the upper floors he will take the "elevator," though, as is so frequently the case, the reverse is the truth, for he will certainly not discover a lift, while, if his wife has requested him to buy her some hairpins, hooks and eyes, cottons or other small articles, he will find them at the "notion counter."

As, being a stranger, he will not have his own carriage, he will, if he wants a drive, "ride" in a "wagon," which is not a cart for carrying packages, but a very comfortable, light, open vehicle, or else in a "buggy," an equally light conveyance with a hood, but open at the sides. If he prefers a single horse brougham, he will do well to call it a "coupe," and if he asks for a "carriage" he will get a Victoria with a pair of horses.

In the evening he will naturally go to the theater, but he must be careful to ask for "orchestra seats" if he wants stalls, while if his tastes are not for drama proper, and he prefers a music hall entertainment, he should invite his friend to go to a "variety show."

If a play is advertised as a "farce comedy," and he imagines he will see a farcical comedy, he will be doomed to disappointment, for a farce comedy is only an alleged play in which the characters are taken by variety show "artists" who introduce their "specialties"—song and dance—in season and out of season. In other words, it is cousin german to a music hall entertainment without the diversity in the programme.

In its pronunciation United States is a law unto itself, and if the aforesaid Londoner gets "busted" or wants employment as a clerk let him not call himself a "clark," for people will open their eyes at his peculiar occupation, and let him also remember that he wears a derby hat, not a darby.

Above all, let him avoid as he would a plague the nasal twang which passes current for the American accent on the London stage unless he hankers after being mistaken for a denizen of the "wild and woolly west," or as hailing from Oshkosh or Kalamazoo, both of which places, in spite of a popular belief to the contrary, will be found on the map of the country over which the stars and stripes float and the baldheaded eagle screams.—London Saturday Review.

THE SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, OF CANADA

From the TRADE BULLETIN, Montreal,

The report of the business of this leading Life Insurance Company of Canada for the past year may well be a source of gratification alike to the shareholders and the assured, the accession to its business during the year exceeding even the phenomenally large increase of the year previous. The marvellous growth and success of the Sun Life is due to the absolute security which it guarantees the insured, the prompt settlement of all its claims and the generous treatment which it invariably pursues towards its policy-holders, even in cases where quibbles might be taken advantage of for the purpose of deferring or even shirking the payment of claims. Instances have come to our knowledge in which the Sun Life could have well stood out against meeting certain claims in conjunction with other companies; but no! it preferred to take a more magnanimous and charitable view of what were said to be suspicious circumstances, and paid the full amount which the policy called for without a day's demur. The phenomenal success therefore which continues to attend the onward march of this deserving home life assurance company is well merited.

Mayor Kendry Elected By Acclamation.

He Makes an Address Stating that He will Retire at the Expiration of the Ensuing Term.

There are Thirty Candidates For the Council in the Field—All the Old Council Nominated With the Exception of Messrs. Hall, McIllwaine and Kelly—It Looks Like a Red-Hot Contest in Every Ward—A Complete List of the Nominations for Councillors—School Trustees Elected by Acclamation—The Nominations in Ashburnham—Reeve Burnham Declared Elected—Eight Candidates in the Field for Municipal Honors and Seven for School Trustees.

For Mayor—Mr. James Kendry, Elected by acclamation.

At 10 o'clock in the Council Chambers yesterday morning nominations for candidates for the mayoralty took place, Clerk Armstrong presiding. Mr. James Kendry was placed in nomination by Mr. Wm. Claxton, and Mr. H. S. McDonald seconded the nomination.

Mr. A. McNeil then proposed the name of Mr. A. P. Poussette, but that gentleman declined in a short address in which he referred to municipal affairs, taking up the question of union with Ashburnham in which matter he thought the town had been extremely vacillating. He also mentioned the financial condition, asserting that its improvement as shown in the recent statement was due to the fact that the town had borrowed $10,000. He touched briefly on the sewer muddle, deprecating the large expense the arbitration had involved, amounting to some thousands of dollars which would come out of the revenue of 1895.

At one o'clock no other nominations had been made, and Mr. Kendry was declared elected by acclamation, the announcement being greeted with applause.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Mayor Kendry in a short address thanked the citizens for the honor conferred upon him and the confidence imposed in him, as well as for the mark of approval of his past efforts. In brief he reviewed the important issues that had come before the Council during the past year, and characterised the period as an eventful one. He mentioned the outfall sewer matter, the union with Ashburnham, the improved equipments of the Street and Bridge department and the Fire department, the question of the distribution of charity and other matters both settled and pending. In regard to the arrears of taxes the Mayor said: "The matter of arrears of taxes is one that has been looked into by the Council, and especially by the Court of Revision, and recommendations have been made that will be carried out and which will save the town from any danger of loss in regard to arrears in the future." Referring to the financial position of the town, he continued: "The town's financial position has always been and is now a good one, as it has substantial assets that amount to much more than its total indebtedness. The Council this year has, by carefulness and economy, met the expenditures of the year out of current revenue and has a balance on the right side, although it had to pay a portion of the floating indebtedness that was an accumulation of former years. This is very satisfactory, and with continued carefulness the same satisfactory state of affairs will, I have no doubt, exist at the close of the year we are now about to enter upon."

In conclusion Mayor Kendry said:

"I have great reason to thank the people of Peterborough for their repeated evidences of confidence. The position of Mayor is an honorable one, but it is also one of responsibility, and if I am spared to the close of the term of 1895 I will retire from this position in which you have in your kindness placed me for the fourth time.

I hope I have not wearied you, and I again tender you my heartiest thanks and wish every citizen a very Happy New Year.

STRUCK GAS.

A Barrel of Fun at the Opera House Last Night.

The Marks Bros.' Comedy Company opened a week's engagement at the Opera House last night, to a large audience.

The Company presented at their initial performance in Peterborough, the laughable four act comedy entitled "Struck Gas," which proved to be a veritable button-burster and kept the audience in a continual uproar. Between the mirth provoking scenes and thrilling situations a few excellent specialties were introduced, which kept up continuous interest and excluded any possibility of a drag. The personnel of the company is remarkably well adapted to comedy, there being Tom Marks and Fred Wilson, two comedians of high merit, while Miss Myra Collins is equally at home in emotional or comedy "parts" The performance is sterling value for the price. At the matinee this afternoon "The Gold King" will be presented. In the evening "A Wife's Peril," a society comedy drama in four acts, will be produced.

Death of John W. Clarke.

The death of John W. Clarke, of Norwood, brother of Mr. A. N. Clarke, accountant of the Peterborough Water company, occurred last Friday night. Deceased was 54 years of age. At one time he was treasurer of Norwood.

Accused of Theft.

Jeweller Duffield, of Norwood, has been missing numerous articles of jewelry from his store of late. Suspicion rested on a young man named Peter Hickerson, by reason of the latter having in his possession a pin similar to one stolen. When accused of the theft, Hickerson denied, then admitted his crime. He returned all the goods and so far has not been arrested.

A Pointer for Peterborough

There are now fifty-five towns and cities in England which destroy their garbage and solid refuse by burning, using an average of about ten furnaces each for that purpose. The combustion of the material is used for the generation of steam, by which the streets are electrically illuminated, and other cities are reported to be considering the propriety of reducing their municipal expenses by this means.

A Farmer Tries Smuggling.

The other day a farmer residing in the neighborhood of Mille Roches who had recently infringed the revenue laws by importing three lamps from New York State without the knowledge of the Customs officers was surprised by a visit from Customs Detective Crites who confiscated the lamps. The farmer was glad to secure ownership by paying the customs their full value.

Deranged by a Wound.

On last Friday Mr. John A. Jamieson, town, employed in the St. Anthony Lumber Company shanties in Renfrew, was rolling logs when he was struck on the head by a heavy log. The pain inflicted was intense, but soon passed away. On the following day he was taken seriously ill. Mr. Harry Breault, Peterborough, working in an adjoining shanty, was sent for to attend the injured man, whose mind became slightly deranged. Mr. Breault decided to bring Mr. Jamieson home, and in a day or two the latter had sufficiently recovered to begin the journey. On the way home Mr. Jamieson was taken ill again, and for 40 miles Mr. Breault carried him through the snow and thick woods on his back. During the journey homewards, which took five days, the sick man, in a fit of insanity, drew a revolver and fired at Mr. Breault, the bullet passing through the latter's coat sleeves. Mr. Jamieson is now at the Little Windsor hotel in a precarious condition.

SHEARER ON TRIAL.

A Thief but Not a Perjurer Was His Lawyer's Plea.

Peter Shearer, whose arrest for stealing a coat in a Muskoka "shanty" camp, was published in yesterday's issue, was up in the Police Court yesterday morning.

Mr. E. B. Stone appeared for the prisoner and Mr. G. W. Hatton conducted the case on behalf of the plaintiff, George Hawe, of Ashburnham. Mr. Robert Shearer, father of the accused was in court.

Shearer is a very simple-minded young man; not altogether sound in the upper story. This, together with corroborative evidence in support of his statement that another man took his coat and told him to take the coat he stole, might have secured his dismissal, had not Mr. Stone placed Shearer in the box. During his cross-examination by Mr. Hatton, Shearer admitted that he stole a vest and a pair of pants as well as the coat.

"Why didn't you tell me that," angrily spoke up Mr. Stone. "Why didn't you tell me that you were a thief instead of the cock-and-bull story you did, and I wouldn't have wasted so much time on you."

Turning to the Magistrate the lawyer continued: "We have here, your worship a strange case. Here is a thief, but not a perjurer. I think, your worship," facetiously, "that he deserves to be sent down for the way he treated his lawyer, but I'll waive my right to have him sent to gaol on that charge, and ask you to exercise leniency on the charge of stealing the coat."

Shearer was remanded a week on reserved judgment.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Write it 1895.

A Happy New Year.

New Year resolutions should be made today.

A number of Peterborough young ladies will "receive" this afternoon.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated in St. Paul's church on January 13th.

A night watch service, commencing at 10 o'clock was held in George street Methodist church last night.

Young men should remember that many New Years calls means a "big head" on the first day of the New Year.

The Young People's Society of this town will hold a union prayer meeting in the Y.M.C.A. parlor this morning.

The Y.M.C.A. will hold a reception this afternoon and evening. All young men are invited. Refreshments will be served.

At Cobourg Chief Rankin has commenced a seige against young men who have neglected to pay their poll tax for the year 1894.

A good way of beginning the new year is to subscribe to THE TIMES, thereby being abreast with the times all during the new year.

There will be a reception held this afternoon and evening in the Y.W.C.A. parlor, to which the young ladies of the town will be made welcome.

How will the busy little moth
  Employ each long, long day,
Until the flannels and the furs
  Are once more packed away?

There was one sad family in Iroquois on Christmas. The body of John Fisher, a resident of "the point," was found in the lock basin the night before. It appears he was going home heavily laden with Christmas supplies, and in the darkness missed the narrow bridge that spans the chasm and walked into the canal.

I've a secret to impart,
  Sweet Marie.
Though I fear 'twill break your heart,
  Sweet Marie,
For the hired girl's been rash,
And has married her last mash,
And you'll have to cook the hash,
  Sweet Marie.

It is reported that a town in Texas, settled by infidels, 15 miles southeast of Texarkana, was named Ingersoll after the infidel leader. Lately an evangelist went there and conducted a meeting which resulted in 215 professions of faith. The people proceeded to change the name of the town to Elson and they have voted out all the saloons.

A lonely man, with aspect wan,
  Sat in a country store;
Rough was his beard, unkempt his hair,
  A seedy coat he wore.
Hard were his hands, empty his till,
  Expressionless his eyes;
Nor could one wonder at his plight—
  He did not advertise.

At present there are 27 prisoners confined in the Cobourg jail, the largest at any one time for a great many years. On Christmas day the inmates were treated to a right-royal repast. Roast goose was served at dinner, together with plenty of other good things, and Governor Snelgrove entertained his company in a manner that many of the inmates wish to put in the balance of the winter at his domicile.

ILLICIT LIQUOR SELLING.

A Hotelkeeper Summoned for Selling Without a License.

The Chief of Police served a summons upon Timothy Cavanagh, of the Balmoral hotel, to appear in the Police Court on Jan. 9th, 1895, to answer to a charge of selling liquor without a license.

About 30 young men of this town will be subpoenaed as witnesses and this startling information is creating the greatest consternation among the aforesaid young men.

FOR THREE DOLLARS

Is an American Tracked From Michigan to Cobourg.

On Saturday last Sheriff Kellam, of the city of Pontiac, Oakland County, Mich., was in Cobourg. He came over to Newcastle after a man named John Stein, who is charged with bringing stolen property into Canada. He followed his man to that place, and when satisfied that his man was there, handed a warrant to the village constable to arrest Stein.

The sheriff had business in Toronto and instructed the constable to notify him in that city when the warrant was executed. This the constable did but before the sheriff returned Stein's lawyer frightened the constable into releasing the prisoner, who at once made his escape and has not since been seen. Sheriff Kellam came on to Cobourg, and after consulting with the Crown Attorney and Chief Rankin, a new information was laid, and a warrant placed in the hands of a constable that will serve Stein, if he can be found, and not be frightened by the bluff of a country lawyer. Stein is said to have stolen an overcoat, suit of clothes and three dollars in money.

WEDDING BELLS.

Miss Hagerman an Mr. E. Leslie Barrie Married.

Two very popular young people of Peterborough were made one yesterday afternoon when Mr. E. Leslie Barrie led to the Hymeneal altar Miss Hannah Hagerman, only daughter of Mr. John Hagerman, King street, the pleasing ceremony taking place at the residence of the bride's father.

The bride was prettily attired in a travelling costume of brown and mauve and carried a bouquet of cream roses. She was attended by Miss Hattie Wilson, of Toronto, who was beautifully costumed in a gown of brown silk, carrying a bouquet of pink roses, while Miss Stella Love, also of Toronto, was maid of honor, wearing an empire gown of crepe dechene and carrying a wand and basket of cream roses.

The Rev. W. B. Young, in whose church the young bride has been a soprano soloist for some time, performed the ceremony in the presence of a small circle of friends.

The newly wedded pair received many handsome presents. They left on the 5.15 G.T.R. for Toronto and the eastern states.

WITH THE SPORTS.

The Slavins In Montreal Looking for a Match.

Prospects for the big Hamilton curling bonspiel are excellent, as the bay is already frozen over.

A. A. Zimmerman, the American 'cyclist, will receive $8,000 next season to ride a certain style of wheel it is said.

Efforts are being made to arrange a match between Jake Gaudaur and Henry Peterson for the sculling championship of America.

Bill Slavin and Jack Slavin, the brothers of Frank, who fought, perhaps the hardest fight that Peter Jackson ever put up, are in Montreal. They called at the Gazette office Friday afternoon, and were hunting round for Martin Costello. There seems the probability of a match at gloves or without them in the near future if Costello's backers will show the color of their money.

An organizer wanted for every county.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 161 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE BODY AT HALIFAX.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. BLENHEIM AT THE PREMIER'S NATIVE CITY.

Thousands View the Chamber Where the Late Premier's Remains Lay in State—Many Floral Contributions—A Solemn Occasion.

HALIFAX, Jan. 1.—At 10.45 this morning the minute guns announced the arrival of the Blenheim in Port. At 12 o'clock the ship dropped anchor opposite the ordnance yard.

The two sons of the late Premier and a number of intimate friends went on board, accompanied by Rev. Father Murphy, who read the libra and accompanying prayers beside the body. Only the two sons of the dead were present at this brief service.

TAKEN FROM THE WARSHIP.

At half-past two the coffin was removed from the warship and placed upon a gun carriage, and, immediately after, the procession to the Parliament building started.

When the casket had been deposited in the chamber of the Provincial Building, the Governor General and Lady Aberdeen knelt side by side, and bowing their heads above the coffin, spent some minutes prayer. The incident was most touching.

ALONE WITH HER DEAD.

In the evening the body was removed to the residence of Mr. John Pugh, in order to secure absolute privacy to Lady Thompson's audience with her dead.

The body will lie in state all day tomorrow, and the following will act as watchers in turn: Hon. Mr. Curran, Mr. White, of Shelburne, Sir Frank Smith, Mr. Stairs, Hon. T. M. Daly, T. E. Kenny, Hon. Mr. Ives, H. F. McDougall, Sir C. H. Tupper, Dr. Cameron, Dr. Kaulbach and Mr. McDougall.

VIEWING THE CASKET.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 2.—The Legislative Council chamber was open to the public at 8 o'clock this morning and notwithstanding the cold snap which succeeded yesterday's storm, the approach to the building has been crowded with people all the forenoon, patiently waiting their turn to get in. Ten thousand people have already viewed the casket this morning and from appearances double that number will visit the lying in chamber this afternoon.

THE CITY CROWDED.

The city is already crowded with visitors from all parts of the country. Last night Governor Howlan, Chief Justice Sullivan, Bishop McDonald, Senator Ferguson and fifty others arrived from Prince Edward Island. All the Senators and members of Parliament of the Lower Provinces are here. Hon. Messrs. Foster, Costigan and others arrived on a heavily laden special train this morning.

The lying-in chamber presents a gorgeous appearance. No finer chamber for the purpose could be found in Canada. It is exquisitely draped and the floral tributes are simply superb and greater in number and more beautiful in design than those given at the death of Sir John Macdonald.

ANOTHER FROM THE QUEEN.

The number was added to at noon by the unpacking of another magnificent wreath from the Queen. It is ovel in design, is five feet in diameter, and composed of holly white flowers and sago palm. There were also wreaths from the Marquis of Ripon, the staff of the Colonial Office and others.

SAVAGE BUTCHERY THIS.

THE ATROCITIES OF THE TURKISH FIENDS CONFIRMED.

Men, Women and Children were Shot Down and Butchered to the Number of 15,000—No Quarter Shown—The Investigation.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—A letter has been received here from Turkey which says:—"The Armenians, oppressed by Kurds and Turks, said they could not pay pay taxes to both Kurds and Government. Plundered and oppressed by the Kurds, they resisted them; there were some killed. Then false reports were sent to Constantinople that the Armenians were in rebellion. Orders were sent to exterminate them root and branch.

No quarter was given, no mercy shown. Men, women and children were shot down or butchered. The most probable estimate is 15,000 killed, 35 villages plundered, razed and burned. Women were outraged and then butchered. Every effort is being made to falsify the facts and pull the wool over the eyes of European Governments."

The Armenians of Boston sent the following cablegram this afternoon to Mr. Gladstone:—"Armenians of Boston thank you for your sympathy and aid."

AN ASSASSINATION.

CONSTANTINOPLE Jan. 2—It is reported that the Governor of Bitlis, Tachin Pasha, who commanded the military operations in the Sassoun district, where so many outrages have been reported, has been assassinated by an Armenian, who afterwards committed suicide.

SUSPECTED INCENDIARIES.

Suspected Fire Bugs Arrested by Toronto Detectives.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—All the detectives are of the opinion that they now have in custody the "fire bug" who has been the cause of the numerous conflagrations in the north western portion of the city during the past three months. His name is Thomas McKenzie, alias Hallern, and he lived with his parents at 5 Lennox street.

NONE SINCE HIS ARREST.

There have been over forty fires in that vicinity recently, but since the arrest of McKenzie—a week ago—none have taken place. He was arrested on a charge of breaking into the house of William Taylor, 4 Johnson avenue, and stealing $5 in cash and a watch and chain. He was convicted and will be sentenced after the other charges against him, which are as follows, have been dealt with:

THE CHARGES.

Burning a stable in rear of 145 Brunswick avenue belonging to J. L. Pincombe.

Burning stable in rear of 540 Spadina avenue belonging to Robert Darley.

Burning stable in rear of 298 College street belonging to Hugh Salmon.

Burning stable in rear of 912 Manning avenue belonging to M. S. Kane.

All the blazes took place on Christmas Eve. The motive ascribed is pure "devilment." He will be tried next Wednesday.

It is announced that the Russian Government has decided to settle the Pamir question in the most amicable manner.

A HOT BED

Of Corruption Unearthed by the Lexow Commission—What Has Been Done by the Great Committee—A Summing Up of the Evidence.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Lexow Committee, which ended its labors last night, will always be referred to as the most memorable investigating body that was ever appointed. It was appointed Jan. 31 last and consisted of Senator Lexow, chairman, four Republicans and two Democrats. It was empowered to investigate charges of corruption made against the New York city police department and the police courts.

A number of citizens came forward with a guarantee of financial assistance, Gov. Flower having vetoed the committee's appropriation, and John W. Goff, assisted by W. Travers Jeromh and Frank Moss took charge as counsel. Since then hardly a day has passed, when the committee was in session, that some astonishing tale of blackmail and corruption has not been developed.

WHAT THE RESULT IS.

As a result of the committee's work John T. Stephenson, ex captain, has been sentenced to three years and nine mouths and a fine of $1000 for bribery. Two ex captains, four ex sergeants and four ex wardmen have been indicted and dismissed from the force. One Captain, Schmittberger, and one ex wardman are now under indictment. One ex captain and one ex wardman have been dismissed. Serious charges of corruption or incompetency, or both, have been brought out before the committee against two commissioners, two ex commissioners, three inspectors, one ex inspector, fourteen captains, three sergeants, three detective sergeants, three detectives, eight ex wardmen, nine patrolmen and one police surgeon.

THE S. S. SARNIA SAFE.

SIGNALLED ON THE NORTH COAST OF IRELAND IN TOW.

"All Well on Board"—A Signal That Took a Burden From Many Anxious Hearts—Safely Anchored in Belfast Lough.

LONDONDERRY, Jan. 2.—The Dominion line steamer Sarnia, Capt. Couch, from Portland, Maine, and Halifax, N.S., for Liverpool, passed Tory island at 5.55 this morning, in tow of an Allan line steamer, and signalled "All well aboard." She has 80 saloon passengers.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The steamer having the Sarnia in tow is the Allan liner Norwegian, Capt. Christie, from Glasgow, December 29th, for New York. Three tugs are accompanying the Sarnia. All the vessels passed Main Head, the northern-most extremity of County Donegal, Ireland, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A tug has landed the Sarnia's mails at Moville. Off Main Head the Norwegian turned the disabled steamer over to the three tugs, and they are now towing her to Liverpool.

BELFAST, Jan. 2.—The disabled Dominion Line steamer Sarnia has been towed into this harbor by tugs. She was towed as far as Main Head by the British steamer Norwegian, Captain Christie, which sailed from Glasgow December 29th for New York. When the tugs made fast to the disabled vessel the Norwegian proceeded on her voyage.

BELFAST, Jan. 2.—The Sarnia's mails were forwarded this afternoon, via Dublin to Holyhead. Her passengers will be put on board the steamer Calorie and sail from here for Liverpool tonight.

CANADA'S PREMIER KNIGHTED.

The New Year's Selection for Her Majesty's Favors—No Peers Created.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Among the New Year honors announced is the conferring of the Order of the Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George upon Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Premier of Canada. Mr. W. H. Harris has been appointed a Companion of the Third Class of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, in recognition of his services to the British section of the Chicago Exposition.

The Hon. Cecil Rhodes, Premier of Cape Colony is appointed a member of the Privy Council, and Mr. George Newnes, member of Parliament for the Newmarket division of Cambridgeshire, and the editor of Tid Bits, the Strand Magazine, and the Westminster Gazette, and Prof. James Emerson Reynolds, M.D., F.R.S., president of the Royal College of Physicians, have been created baronets. In addition, Mr. John Jackson, the contractor who undertook the work of the Tower bridge, has been knighted, and the same honor has been conferred upon Mr. A. C. Mackenzie, principal of the Royal Academy of Music. Baron Cromer (Evelyn Baring), the British Agent and Consul General in Egypt, is made a K.G.C.B., and Mr. W. H. White, Chief Constructor of the Navy, is made a K.C.B.

The Times, commenting on the selection made, says: "The colonial statesman or the Englishman who finds his career in the colonies must do far greater things than the Englishman who stays at home in order to win his way to that essentially imperial distinction, membership of the Privy Council."

"The absence of peerage is everywhere commented upon. Lord Rosebery's sense of the ridiculous is too keen to allow him to add new members to the House he desires to abolish."

The Freeman's Journal complains of the absence of Irish names from the list of persons honored by the Queen on New Year's day.

A CANADIAN

Among the Victims of the Albany, N.Y. Holocaust.

BUFFALO, Jan. 1.—Among the victims of the Delevan hotel fire at Albany, as told yesterday, was Miss Wilson, an employe of the hostelry. Miss Wilson was a native of Canada, her home being at Atwood Ont., a small town about 120 miles from Toronto.

Miss Wilson came to Buffalo from Canada about four years ago and was for some time employed at the Genesee here. From the Genesee she went to the Delevan at Albany. Miss Wilson had visited her home at Atwood last summer, remaining there for some time. She was about 23 years of age.

One of the guests at the Delevan, reported as missing, has since turned up, leaving the total number of the dead at 15 instead of 16.

A judge in Cincinnati, Ohio, has refused to order the return of an alleged murderer from Kentucky without the promise of the Governor of the latter state that the alleged criminal will not be lynched.

CHARGED WITH ARSON.

TWO WELL-KNOWN BUSINESS MEN PLACED UNDER ARREST.

A Sensation in the Village of Blenheim—A Store Twice on Fire Arouses the Suspicions of the Authorities—Evidences of Incendiarism.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 2.—There was a great sensation created in Blenheim yesterday when John E. Powell, who conducts a boot and grocery business, and his brother-in-law, Joseph Cramb, of Owen Sound, who was visiting him, were arrested for arson.

Saturday night, at about 11.30, Powell's grocery store was discovered to be on fire. The fire was immediately put out, and on examination the ceiling and goods were found to be smeared with kerosene. The keys were taken from Powell, but were returned Monday, and Tuesday morning about 4 o'clock the store was again discovered to be on fire by Charles Vongunten jeweler, who resides next door.

The fire was again put out and again evidences of incendiarism were found. Powell and his brother-in-law were at once arrested.

POWELL EXPLAINS.

Yesterday Crown Attorney Douglass went out and the accused had a hearing. Mr. Powell said himself and his son Frank had a key to the store, but he believed his son was in Chatham.

The accused said he knew no one who had a grudge against him. He left the store with his brother-in-law about 10 p.m. on both nights, and at the time the alarm was raised he was at home. He said his son had no money as far as he knew, and his only method of raising any would have been to take it from the till.

Mrs. Powell corroborated her husband's evidence and swore that her husband did not leave the house till after the alarm was rung.

The residents of the village are highly excited over the affair, and as there was $1,900 of insurance on the stock and store, the officials are satisfied that the motive was money, as the business has not been paying lately and Powell had made over most of his stock to one of his largest creditors.

The case has been adjourned till some trace of the son, Frank Powell, can be found.

WORE HIS WATCH.

Hendershott's Time Piece Found in the Possession of Welter—After the Murder He Evidently Rifled His Victim's Pockets.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Provincial Detective John Murray has returned from St. Thomas and brings with him the axe found in the woods. It will be examined by Professor Ellis, to try and decide whether the stains are of human blood. He returns to St. Thomas today and the Police Court examination begins on Friday morning.

It will be remembered that the prisoner, Welter, said young Hendershott was running for his vest to save his watch when he was killed. The effects of deceased were given to his uncle, Duncan Hendershott, a Fingal barrister. Deceased's father, David Hendershott, took the watch found among them, rolled it in a handkerchief and gave it to his wife. When they looked at it on Sunday they saw it was not their son's.

Welter was wearing a watch. County Crown Attorney Donohue and Detective Murray visited him in jail, and he said it was his own, and that he got it in a trade with an unknown man in the Penwarden House, several weeks ago.

When the watch Welter had was shown to David Hendershott he identified it as his son's.

MARCHING ONWARD.

Japan Continues Her Victorious Encroachments Upon China.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Herald's special from Shanghai says:—After defeating Gen. Sung at Niuchwang, the Japanese continued their march without occupying the foreign settlement of the city. This they did in deference to the wishes expressed by the foreign consuls at Niuchwang. Gen. Sung barely escaped being made a prisoner.

One hundred breech-loading field guns and several thousand of new rifles have reached Tien Tsin overland from Chin Kiang. They are destined for the equipment of Wu Taching's troops at Shan Hai Kwan.

A serious rebellion is raging at Kinchow to the north of the Gulf of Pechili. Taotai Tan has been despatched with 2,000 of Li Hung Chang's troops to quell the insurrection.

The Censor, An Wei Tsin, with ten other officials of high rank, recently impeached the Empress Dowager on a charge of exercising undue influence upon public affairs. An Wei Tsin has since been punished for his temerity.

A fortnight ago the Empress Dowager caused 40 lashes to be administered to two of the Imperial concubines, sisters, named respectively Chin and Chen, for the offence of offering their advice to the Emperor.

HORSES BURNED.

Five Valuable Animals Cremated in a Bradford Stable.

BRADFORD, Ont., Jan. 2.—This morning about 1 o'clock the stables of the Queen's hotel of this village were destroyed by fire and an adjoining stable, owned by Mr. W. J. Walker, was gutted.

In the stable was a large quantity of hay and five valuable horses which were in training for coming races by Mr. W. Ketchum. The horses lost belong as follows: Ogier, Ferguson, Cookstown; Lottie Bruce, Wm. Thompson, Lloydtown; Reta, Henry Bowes, Bradford; Young Bookmaker, Harry Stoddart, Bradford; Young Hamilton, Wm. Huckridge, Bradford.

The fire had gained such headway before it was discovered that it was impossible to remove anything from the building. The firemen did good work, as the stable burned was in a nest of wooden buildings.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 3, 1895.

Good morning!

Now, then, pick your favorites for the Council of 1895.

To be a good Councillor it is not necessary to be either a teetotaller or a drunkard.

Out of the Candidates nominated on Monday a fairly good Council can be chosen.

"Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K. C. M. G.," looks well in print, but it won't do for common use. We'll have to call him "Sir Mac."

John Burns is hoarse from much speaking. His hoarseness is but one of the many indications of the fact that Mr Burns has been talking too much.

Carnegie has again reduced wages, but the warning of the Pullman strike was not lost upon him, for he reduced the rents of his employes at the same time.

Cutting down the licenses was about the silliest thing done by the Council of 1894. It accomplished nothing in the direction of temperance, and deprived the town of a large revenue. The new Council will do well to rescind that by-law

Li Hung Chang's cup of woe is full to the brim. He has now been deprived of the command of the Chinese forces, but he may take cheer from the fact that his successor wishes to give up the task after only a few days in office

Two-thirds of the people in the five counties in Nebraska are dependent on charity for the means of living. No such picture can be found in this country. There is want in some of the larger Canadian cities, but in none of the rural sections is there any lack of food at all events.

An important change has been made in the postal regulations, the general public now have the right to send any sort of a card through the mails, instead of a post card, by sticking a one-cent stamp on it. The question that always arises when departures of this sort are announced is: How is it that the Government can afford to carry a card for a cent, when it professes itself to be unable to carry a letter for less than three cents?

Taxes in France are the heaviest in Europe in proportion to the population, amounting to $17 50 a head. Though the general taxes for the German Empire are only $6 25 a head, they must be added to the taxes of the individual States: the average Prussian German, for instance, pays $15 50. Next comes Austria with $12 37 and Hungary with $12 12. England's rate is $11 50, so is Holland's; that of Belgium is $11, of Italy $10 50, of Greece $10, of Spain, Denmark an Roumania $9, of Sweeden $5 50 and of Servia $5 25. In Switzerland the general government receives $9 a head, but the individual cantons tax as well. In Russia the rate is the lowest, $4 25, as a large proportion of the revenue comes from the State's domain.

UNWELCOME DISCOVERIES.

Modern science has made many a wonderful discovery, but unfortunaty not all its discoveries are welcome. It has revealed the beautiful processes of nature, but it has also revealed her destroying agencies. The more closely man has studied, the more complicated has he found conditions and the more dangers has he recognized. Where all is outwardly lovely, he has found inward harm. The microscope has disclosed minute horrors, none the less horrible because minute. The telescope, as it sweeps the heavens with its far-seeing eye, has foretold stupendous catastrophes. Much that was thought beneficial has been proved dangerous, and much that was thought harmless has been proved fatal. It has been been demonstrated that hand in hand with benefits stalk injuries. Great good is always attended by satellites of little evils.

Years ago people lived in calm confidence that whatever is, is right. They had faith in all things. To-day people have faith in nothing. They are like pilgrims walking the valley of the shadow of death, feeling thich about them horrors they could not see. They have learned that the very air, once considered a life-giving necter, is peopled with ferocious microbes seeking whom they may devour. They imagine their insidious enemies perched on restaurant chairs, sitting atilt on the passing coin, flying from shoulder to shoulder in the jostling crowd. They have learned that the water they drink swarms with life and carries germs of dread disease. They have learned that one article of food is bad for the nerves, another heats the blood, another is hard to digest, and so on through all known menus. They have learned that imperfect sanitation and ventilation endanger health, and that proper conditions are, moreover, very rarely attained. Nor is it in everyday affairs alone that science has pointed out the dangers that await man. Through all the realm of human interest it has conjured up evils. Its warning cry runs the gamut of calamities from the danger of not exercising enough up to the danger of race multiplying too fast for the earth to support it and the equally danger of the earth flying from its orbit and rushing into the warm embrace of the sun.

Sensitive souls are reduced to a state of abject terror when they think of the small chance a man has for life, health and prosperity, in the face of these ogres of science. What shall they eat, wherewithal shall they be clothed, what can they in safety do, when in all things lurk death and disaster? They dare not indulge their pet weakness for coffee. They eschew their favorite dainties. They fear to come in contact with their fellows or to touch the railing, counter, or car strap, touch by all sorts and conditions of men. They fear contagion in the doctor's office and blood poisoning from his knife. They fear a thousand things in daily life. Meanwhile they still live

Certainly science has evolved much truth, and its warnings are worth the heeding. But the warning of science, like all other advice, should be referred to a judicious committee on common sense. It should be remembered that doctors sometimes disagree, and the verdict of one authority, or a half a dozen is not necessarily the verdict of science. Moreover, a truth may be too sweepingly applied. Circumstances and individuals differ and what will hold good in one case needs modification in another. It seems to the hardened and incredulous that if life be really so beset with danger, it is passing strange that generation after generation should have lived and thrived in their midst, and this also without a knowledge of their existence. If our ancestors, knowing nothing of the wonderful discoveries of hidden evil, managed to avoid the pitfalls, why not we? Does mere knowledge of danger make one more susceptible to its effects? Where is the wisdom that should accompany increasing knowledge? Natural living and confidence in nature are the best safeguard against such evils. Common sence is the best disinfectants and work the best of remedies.

LITTLE BOY BLUE.

The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and staunch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket moulds in his hands.

Time was when the little dog was new
And the soldier was passing fair,
And that was the time when our Little Boy Blue
Kissed them and put them there.

"Now, don't you go till I come," he said,
"And don't you make any noise!"
So toddling off to his trundle bed
And dreamt of the pretty toys

And as he was dreaming, an angel song
Awakened our Little Boy Blue—
Oh! the years are many, the years are long,
But the little toy friends are true.

Aye! faithful to the Little Boy Blue they stand
Each in the same old place,
Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
The smile of a little face.

And they wonder, as waiting these years through
In the dust of that little chair,
What has become of our Little Boy Blue
Since he kissed them and put them there.

ALL'S WELL

(Concluded from yesterday)

Amsterdam and of the awful days that followed it had to be told and told again. A sum of money was raised and paid to him.

At last he was embarked for New York.

Then followed more days of dazzling heat and glittering water and the rising and falling of the ship's deck, days in which he lay inactive, watching the feathery clouds that floated across the sky, tracing the ship's wake as it wound over the glassy surface of the sea, nights in which he again saw the chill shadow creep up the cottage wall, and the face fashion itself out of the shadow, and the dash of blood that ended it all. And then his hand would seek the thing that he carried in his breast, and he would look at it stealthily in the moonlight and laugh exultingly to himself.

Once more he was on land, in the crowded streets of New York. He wanted to get to Lumberville. It is a long distance, almost half way across the continent. But he had got plenty of time to do that which he had come to do.

His money would not suffice to carry him the whole way. For two days he traveled by the railroad, fancying in the motion of the car that he was still at sea, expecting almost as he looked from the windows of the car to see the leaden colored waves, and the gray mist, and the tangles of floating seaweed. Then his money was gone, and he must walk.

Rough, loosely made roads, thick with sand and grit. Long days' tramps under the broiling sun, when the little hillock or the stunted tree that looked so close at hand across the unbroken level of the prairie was only reached after half an hour's weary walking. Starlit nights, when he cast himself down on the long, coarse grass, to sleep the deathlike sleep of exhaustion, to dream once more that never changing dream. Homesteads of hewn timber, where he was made welcome in a rough yet kindly fashion, where he was allowed to sleep perhaps on a bed of straw in the empty barn, where round eyed children brought him milk and hunches of bread and staid behind to stare at the silent, uncouth man. Cities of six months' growth, proud in their uprising buildings, which never would be finished, and their mighty streets, which never would be built. Cities in which he was received with cold suspicion, as another competitor in that struggling throng of hungered humanity, whence he was watched on his departure with unconcealed relief.

More homesteads, more aspiring cities, more of the rolling boundlessness of the prairies.

And then—Lumberville.

It was half past 3 in the afternoon when the limping figure, his clothes torn and grimed with dust, his face and hands scorched and seamed and blackened by exposure, slouched up under the shade of the eucalyptus trees that skirted Omaha avenue.

His right hand was hidden in his breast. His hungry, bloodshot eyes scanned the houses furtively as he passed.

No. 26.

The man faltered. His hand trembled, even twitched once or twice convulsively, beneath his coat. His eyes turned involuntarily, as it were, toward the house and met the eyes of the woman who was sitting in the porch.

A middle aged woman with a pleasant, comely face, who lay back in her chair, fanning herself and rocking gently to and fro in the shadow of the veranda. As the eyes of the Silent Man met hers in a vacant, wild looking stare she ceased rocking and smiled, but not unkindly.

"Well, you're a pretty figure anyhow," she said.

There was a pause. The Silent Man still looked at her. His hand still fumbled beneath his coat.

"Seems to me you've been doin a bit of walkin," continued the woman, still smiling, "and by 'pearances it's been pretty rough. Are ye hungry?" she inquired suddenly, with a jerk.

The Silent Man said nothing. The woman recommenced her rocking and went on talking in her quiet, even voice:

"If so be, I s'pose I could give ye a bite and a drop of ice water and not hurt myself."

The man wet his lips with his tongue and spoke all at once, hoarsely, in a curious, gabbling whisper:

"Is there a man living here—Spencer?" he said.

The woman looked at him keenly.

"What has that to do with ye anyhow? Are ye a friend of Mr. Spencer's?"

He started, and a sudden light came into his filmy, bloodshot eyes.

"Then he does live here? I am a friend of his."

What is that hand doing that works nervously to and fro beneath his coat, that seems to be clutching something in its grasp, yet never comes from his breast?

The woman does not see it. She is looking across the road at a patch of golden sunflowers that grow in a hedge opposite. When she turns again to the Silent Man, the hand is still.

"Well, Mr. Spencer don't live here now, so ye're just wrong," she answered, with some asperity, rocking herself a trifle more energetically. "And not much loss either. And if ye're a friend of his I don't envy ye, not much. A man who could go and leave his wife or who was a wife to him anyway, whatever she was, with a sick child and nary a dollar in the house, leave her an go clean off, he's what I'd call a skunk. See there!"

The man had to moisten his lips again before he could speak.

"And she?" he muttered.

"She? D'ye mean Mrs. Spencer? Well, she's dead, poor soul!"

"Dead!"

He would have fallen but for the stem of the eucalyptus tree. He leaned against it, shivering. His eyes gazed dreamily at the sunshine in the road—at the sunshine, and the clump of nodding sunflowers, and the white pinafore of a little girl who was playing round their tall stalks. He even followed with his eyes the flight of the scarlet butterfly as it fluttered quiveringly from flower to flower. It seemed as if his brain was numbed and unable to think. Try as he would, he could not think.

The woman looked at him compassionately.

"I'm sorry if I've skeered ye," she said more gently. "I didn't know as ye were acquainted with Mrs. Spencer or I wouldn't have bluffed it out like that. But it's the truth anyway, so it'ud have had to come out all the same, one word or a thousand. Maybe ye'd like a drink of ice water," she added quickly as she rose from her chair.

The man motioned to her with his hand. It had fallen from his breast now.

"No, no," he whispered. "Tell me—how it was."

The thoughts were coming back to him now—black, evil thoughts, that he shuddered vaguely to remember, thoughts of what he had come there for, thoughts of how it had all ended with that woman's word, "Dead!"

"Ye'd best have something, for ye do look real bad," the woman persisted. "But there, if ye won't, I s'pose ye won't. Well," she continued, settling herself once more in the chair and folding her ample arms, "I've said this yer Mr. Spencer was a skunk, and a skunk he was to her! And she was frit of him, downright frit—couldn't a-bear of him, far's I could see, and yet daren't speak to him hardly, she was that frit. Well, sir, I told ye that they had a child"—she was getting loquacious now in her placid, droning manner, and rocking herself with a steady swing that seemed to stimulate her conversation—"anyway there was a child with them, though I never could understand exactly whose 'twas, and he was more of a skunk to that child than it's in the natur' of man to be to his own, and the child was took sick with the diphthery. That was when he bolted. Sick as sick the child was, poor little mortal! And then Mrs. Spencer come out—come out pretty strong too. I hadn't had much of a notion of her while the man was with her—I don't mind confessin—with her dolly face and fool ways and no more spir't than a chipmunk, but when she come out as she did come out I kinder changed my ideas of her. Yes, sir! The way she nursed that child and sat up with her day and night and Sundays and workdays and never took no food, so's she could buy medicines for the child, and got sick herself and didn't care, but went on nursin just the same—well, it was pretty strong! And I—ye'd just as well change your mind and have somethin," the woman interposed earnestly, "ye're lookin that skeered."

The man shook his head irritably.

"Go on."

"Well, there ain't much more to tell. She took the diphthery then, as I said, and took it bad. And there was no one to nurse her, 'cept what I did, and that wasn't much, and she'd sorter taken the grit out of herself with all the nursin and watchin and starvin herself, and she couldn't seem to stand out against it. And so—she died. That's all."

There was a long pause. The woman was very quiet. There was a gleam in her eyes as she looked away across the sunny fields, as though tears were standing there. The man still leaned against the stem of the eucalyptus tree, twisting in his hands a fallen leaf that he had caught as it fluttered down.

"And the child?" he said at last. "Did she die?"

"No, sir," the woman answered, still very quietly; "she didn't die. I guess the nursin saved her. When she come round," she continued presently, "there was no one left to take care of her, if ye understand, so me and my husband, considerin the lonesomeness of the poor little critter, kinder 'dopted her, not having any children of our own. And she's settled down with us just wonderful. It's real good to have her. Goldie," she cried, "come here, dearie!"

The man turned quickly, shaking with a strange spasmodic tremor.

"Goldie," she called again softly "Goldie!"

The little girl, who was playing in the hedge by the patch of sunflowers, rose and turned toward them. For an instant she hesitated, shyly, wonderingly. Then suddenly she stretched out her little arms and began to run across the road.

"Daddy!" she cried.

* * * * * * *

The last tinge of golden light was fading from the crest of the waves. The last faint flush of the sunset was fading from the western sky. A tall, grizzled man and golden haired girl, ripening into womanhood, were standing on the hurricane deck of the ocean steamer, watching the flush as it paled and died away.

He was a rich man from out west, everybody knew; had been mayor of Lumberville, some said, and had made a great fortune in live stock and grain. A self made man, who had risen from nothing, but deserved his success by straightforwardness and hard work. And the girl was his daughter.

The flush faded from the summer sky. The stars came out one by one, shining brightly in its clear depths. The man and girl turned from where they stood on the vessel's stern and began to walk slowly back—in the direction where the sun, when it rose on the morrow morn, would rise on the rocky headlands and rugged cliffs that the man had last seen from the deck of the Amsterdam as they faded into the blueness of the sky, close on 14 years before.

And as they turned the clear voices rang out once more over the silent waters:

"All's well!"

"All's well!"—All the Year Round.

To Test Water.

A test for the purity of water, which can be easily applied and which gives a fair idea of the presence or absence of organic impurities, is made by using a solution of permanganate of potash in the proportion of one grain to two ounces of water.

Use this test as follows: Take a long, clear glass, fill it with pure or distilled water and add to it as much of the testing solution as will tinge it pink. Then do exactly the same to a glass of the water you suspect and watch and compare the colors of the two samples. If the pink color does not disappear, or if it does not turn brown, in the suspected water, you may conclude that it is safe to use it. If, on the other hand, it disappears quickly, probably animal matter is present, and if slowly vegetable matter. In either case the water is not above suspicion.—Family Magazine.

Where Printers Work In Chicago.

In this city (Chicago) there are at least four printing offices and barber shops combined occupying the same room. There are also two printing firms sharing the same quarters with carpenters.

One office is located in a butcher shop, another in a show window and one in a bakery.

A printing office on the West Side is in the same room where "Philadelphia scrapple" is being boiled, and the proprietor of another place increases his income by raising pups, nailing boards on the frames of his imposing stones for doghouses.

On Halsted street there is one in a church, the presses standing not 20 feet from the pulpit. Another is being carried on in the office of a livery stable and another among marble cutters.

One is in the fourteenth story of a skyscraper, and another is under a sidewalk.—Inland Printer.

Charcoal For the Mouth.

If there is a disagreeable taste in the mouth in the morning, a dose of powdered charcoal will remove it. It is wise occasionally to brush the teeth with a mixture of powdered charcoal and powdered orris root, which is both whitening and preserving in its effects. Charcoal is of too coarse a grain, however, for daily use. A semioccasional polishing with powdered pumice stone made into a paste with water is also good for the teeth, but used with frequency it scratches the enamel.

INSP. BYRNES RESIGNS.

HE SAYS NEW YORK'S POLICE DEPARTMENT IS ROTTEN.

He Said He Made His Fortune, Estimated at $350,000, by Speculation—Inspector McLaughlin Also Accounts for His Wealth.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Saturday night the Lexow Investigating Committee adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman. Just as he was through answering Mr. Goff's probing questions, Superintendent Byrnes handed a letter to Chairman Lexow and said that it was a copy of one that he had sent to Mayor-elect Strong early this month. It was his resignation from the force, of which he has been a member for the last 32 years. The superintendent said that on two occasions since he was appointed he was on the point of resigning, owing to the continual conflict between the commissioners and himself. The superintendent, he said, should have absolute charge of the discipline of the department, but that all his efforts in that direction were frustrated by the commissioners.

WHERE THE CURSE IS.

This department was honeycombed with abuses, which had been growing for thirty years, and they could only be remedied by radical legislation. Local politicians, he claimed, were the curse of the department, and as long as politics was a factor in the force such a state of things would exist. Although he had done his utmost to procure substantial information as to corruption and bribery, he was unable to get it, and the whole department was pregnated with the belief that promotion had to be bought and merit was of no avail.

He paid a tribute to Dr. Parkhurst, who, he said, manufactured public sentiment, without which it would have been impossible for the committee to have acquired the information it did. His wealth, which he estimated at $350,000, was made by speculation, he said, through the instrumentality of Jay Gould and his son, George Gould. His purchases in real estate were also very profitable and he claimed not to have a bank account.

THE CHIEF'S STORY.

Inspector McLaughlin, the chief of New York's detective force, was also on the stand today, and told the story of his financial progress. He had $6,000 when he joined the force; he made $40,000 from a patent switch; his wife made plenty of money; by his own figures he showed that his equity in real estate today is worth $102,175. He strenuously denied ever having received a dollar for protecting gamblers or proprietors of houses of ill-repute, and the levying of blackmail, he said, was unknown to him.

26 DROWNED.

The Osseo Driven Ashore in the Darkness at Holyhead—All Efforts to Reach Her Fail.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British barque Osseo was wrecked in a gale at Holyhead early Sunday morning, and with her perished her entire crew of 26 men.

The Osseo was driven ashore back of the Holyhead breakwater. Her signals of distress were first heard by the coast guard about 4 o'clock in the morning. At that time it was pitch dark and great waves were washing over the breakwater. In spite of the danger of being washed into the sea, the guard proceeded along the breakwater and having rigged up the rocket apparatus, began firing life lines in the direction of the wreck.

BROKEN IN TWAIN.

The faint light of the rockets soon disclosed that the vessel had broken in two midships and that the mainmast had fallen, crushing the lives out of several of the crew. A few survivors could be seen clinging to each half of the vessel and their piteous cries for help could be heard above the storm. After many failures the coast guard succeeded in firing a line over the wreck, but by that time all on board had perished. A lifeboat vainly tried again and again to approach the wreck. Not a vestige of the barque could be seen today and there is no prospect of any salvage.

NUMEROUS CASUALTIES.

Reports of stormy weather continues to be received from all parts of Europe. Numerous small wrecks and casualties are reported in Great Britain and Ireland. Many lives were saved by lifeboats.

A severe gale is blowing on the Baltic, and navigation is suspended at Copenhagen.

A heavy snow has fallen in the north of Scotland, and two railway trains have been blocked on the tracks.

PROMOTION FOR STEWART.

Sir John's Late Private Secretary to Succeed J. G. Moylan.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—It is understood that Mr. J. G. Moylan, Inspector of Penitentiaries, will shortly be superannuated, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Douglas Stewart, private secretary to the late Sir John Thompson. Mr. Stewart is one of the most efficient officers in the service, and his promotion will be heard of with great pleasure by his hosts of friends.

In the friendly hockey match at Ottawa, when the campion M.A.A.A. team were beaten by 4 to 1, Smellie put in his first appearance on the Capital seven. He was not fast, says an Ottawa paper, but in a hard tussle was sure to get the puck, and he is not so steady in shooting on goal.

OLD SCOTTISH CURES.

Remedies That Were Recommended In the Days of Auld Lang Syne.

A baldheaded man would hesitate before following Sir John Moncrieff's advice to "make a lee of the burnt ashes of dove's dung and wash the head well," although there is some consolation in learning that the same beneficial results would accrue from using "the ashes of little frogs." The hair, according to this authority, may be changed to a golden tint by using a simple lotion composed of the ashes of the ivy plant. Ladies who sigh for a fair complexion may secure it by such a pleasant method as washing the face with "the distilled water of snails," and the application of "liver of a sheep, fresh and hot," will make the whole face well colored.

Should the nose unfortunately bleed and the familiar remedy of thrusting a bunch of keys down the back of the neck fail of the desired result, then the assured styptic is to put into the nostrils a mixture of the hair of a hare and vinegar. Sir John bears testimony, "I myself know this to be the best of anything known." Blood flowing from a cut may be instantly stanched by simply holding a jasper in the hand or by putting cow's blood into the wound. The reader will be apt to remark that neither of these is a handy remedy for such an emergency. An ointment made of earthworms will cure paralysis if the affected parts be anointed with the compound.

Sleeplessness, so common an ailment in our own time, can be removed, according to Sir John, by applying "living creatures to the head to dissolve the humor," and Sir John narrates that for measles "many keep an ewe or wedder in their chamber or on the bed, because these creatures are easily infected and draw the venom to themselves, by which means some ease may happen to the sick person." In a similar manner, if the trouble be colic, a live duck or frog applied to the part "draws all the evil to itself and dies." Epilepsy may be prevented by wearing a girdle of wolf's skin. Should any one have been so negligent as to omit this necessary precaution, "powder of a man's bones burnt, chiefly of the skull that is found in the earth, cures the epilepsy. The bones of a man cure a man. The bones of a woman cure a woman."

Lethargic individuals should follow the sage Moncrieff's advice: "Burn the whole skin of a hare with the ears and nails. The powder thereof, being given hot, cures the lethargy perfectly." Deafness may be removed by pouring a mixture of onion juice and ants' eggs into the ear, and "the blood of a wild goat given to ten drops of carduus water doth powerfully discuss the pleurisy."—Gentleman's Magazine

PECULIAR CHINESE DISHES.

Some of Them Are Palatable, but More of Them Are Not.

Some of the dishes were extremely nice, notably the little shreds of roast mutton, excellently seasoned, such as I learned ever after to call for with confidence at Chinese inns. On the other hand, the chicken was made uneatable, and the eggs on this occasion, I am bound to say, were inexpressibly nasty. The taste for them as eaten in China had need to be acquired no doubt, for I had been told at Vierny of the wonderful pains and expense at which Chinese gormands preserve their eggs till they are black and putrid, and of which they are as proud when many, many years old as an English squire of his crusted port. I have, moreover, a vague impression, which for the moment I cannot verify, that I somewhere tasted these ancient delicacies and found them good; but on the present occasion my notebook condemns them utterly.

The rissoles of pork sausage were tasty, and so were the French beans, peas and hearts of cabbage stalk cut in slices and the mandarin oranges preserved in sirup. We helped ourselves to these delicacies as we pleased, but our host every now and then with his chopsticks placed on the plate of one or other of his three guests a choice morsel, which, mercifully, it was not a matter of unbending etiquette that one should eat. It was polite, of course, occasionally to return the compliment and help him to tidbits with one's knife and fork.—Philadelphia Times.

Swamp Plants.

It should be well known by this time that swamp plants, as a rule, will do much better in comparatively dry land than in the swamps where we naturally find them. Even the rice plant, which usually grows in water, will grow well and produce a fair crop of seeds in common garden ground. The reason for this has been fully explained in scientific serials. It reads oddly in a report just issued by the United States department of agriculture, suggesting that the common swamp rose mallow, Hibiscus moscheutos, would possibly grow in dry land, as an experiment was made to test this fact on the Delaware river 25 years ago. The plant is growing in every well ordered herbaceous ground and is one of our most popular border plants. It is a weakness of the United States department of agriculture that it is so often behind the times in its publications. One of the best tasks for that department would be to make an index of what has been placed on record in the many serial publications of our country during the last half century. Dr. Franklin B. Hough did something of this work in forestry when he was in this department. It is much to be regretted that such useful work has not been given a broader scope.—Meehan's Monthly.

A Horse Has Little Brains.

The mental peculiarities of the horse are much less characteristic than its physical. It is indeed the common opinion among those who do not know the animal well that it is endowed with much sagacity, but no experienced and careful observer is likely to maintain this opinion. All such students find the intelligence of the horse to be very limited.

Although some part of this mental defect in the horse, causing its actions to be widely contrasted with those of the dog, may be due to a lack of deliberate training and to breeding with reference to intellectual accomplishment, we see, by comparing the creature with the elephant, which practically has never been bred in captivity, that the equine mind is, from the point of view of rationality, very feeble.—Professor N. S. Shaler in Scribner's Magazine.

How She Said Grace.

Little 4-year-old Ida was visiting her aunt. She was always restless at the table during the silent blessing, so her aunt explained to her why they bowed the head and kept quiet before eating. One day little Ida kept unusually quiet during grace. Finally she lifted her little head and looked up in her aunt's face and said: "Aunt Emily, do you know what I was saying? I was saying, 'Reddy, get your hair dyed, hair dyed green.' "—Philadelphia Record.

THE SUN
LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, OF CANADA

From the TRADE BULLETIN, Montreal,

The report of the business of this leading Life Insurance Company of Canada for the past year may well be a source of gratification alike to the shareholders and the assured, the accession to its business during the year exceeding even the phenomenally large increase of the year previous. The marvellous growth and success of the Sun Life is due to the absolute security which it guarantees the insured, the prompt settlement of all its claims and the generous treatment which it invariably pursues towards its policy-holders, even in cases where quibbles might be taken advantage of for the purpose of deferring or even shirking the payment of claims. Instances have come to our knowledge in which the Sun Life could have well stood out against meeting certain claims in conjunction with other companies; but no! it preferred to take a more magnanimous and charitable view of what were said to be suspicious circumstances, and paid the full amount which the policy called for without a day's demur. The phenomenal success therefore which continues to attend the onward march of this deserving home life assurance company is well merited.

CROWDED HOUSES.

Marks Bros. Comedy Company Meet With Great Success.

On New Year's afternoon the Marks Bros. Company gave a matinee performance, producing "The Gold King." In the evening "A Wife's Peril" was put on the boards. Long before the curtain went up the Opera House was crowded to the doors.

Last night the audience was a repetition and crowds admitted were on the understanding that standing room only could be had. The play presented was the favorite and well known Irish comedy drama, "The Rose of Kerry.

The company is giving great satisfaction. The performance is the best for the price of admission ever given in Peterborough. Tonight the play will be "Esmeralda."

ECHO OF NEW YEARS.

How the Day was Spent in and Around Peterborough.

The Salvation Army members were the first to welcome the advent of the new year. Shortly after 1 p.m. the army turned out in force and paraded the streets with banners streaming, the band playing vigorously and 100 lusty voices joined in song.

In St. Luke's school house on New Year's eve, the annual Christmas tree and distribution of presents were held. The children were there in force, and a very merry time was spent. An entertainment preceded the distribution.

A night watch service was held in George street Methodist church on New Year's eve. A large number watched the old year out and the new year in.

On New Year's day the Little Lake presented a gay scene with several hundred young people gliding over its congealed surface. The rink was also well patronized. Those who did not skate went out cutter driving and in the afternoon it was impossible to get a rig at any of the livery stables.

And lastly but not least, and after THE TIMES was issued early on New Year's morn, THE TIMES staff, from the irrepressible "devil" up to the weary pencil pusher, repaired to McCallum's restaurant and enjoyed a dainty prepared "spread."

FASHIONS READY FOR '95.

The New Year Will Usher in the Reign of Extravagance.

Exaggeration is the keynote of the styles for the coming year.

So says Worth. So say Felix, Pingat and every one else whose opinion in the matter is of the slightest consequence. Have shoulder seams been sloping downward lower and lower for the past year? During the coming year they will continue to descend, until by next Christmas shoulder seam and elbow will probably coincide. Have sleeves been so broad that their wearers have had to slide through doors sideways? They are to be broader. Everything is to be exaggerated.

The last year has seen the gradual development of the skirt from a comparatively simple structure of moderate proportions into a complex affair of imposing dimensions. This year the good work will go on. She who has been wearing a skirt only five yards wide around the bottom will look before the twelvemonth is ended on eight yards as a rather meagre allowance. She who has stiffened her skirt with canvas will advance to hair cloth, and by and by the time will come when not even hair-cloth will suffice, but whalebone bands will be sewn into the skirt, still further to distend it. For so have the great makers of fashion decreed.

In her hair also will woman continue to show how far she can carry a thing without overdoing it. For the last year it has drooped over the tips of her ears and been gathered in graceful twists at the back or in spiral coils at the top of her head. The hair in 1895 will be parted and drawn over the face, so that a goodly portion of my lady's cheek, a bit of her eyebrow and her entire ear will have disappeared from view. Veils will be at a discount. Dusky or golden locks will suffice to hide the features. In the back the one-time graceful knot will become the mammoth bun, and the slender coil on the top of the head will grow into a sort of minaret arrangement. For in the coming year the keynote in dressing is exaggeration.

There has been during the last few months a notable tendency towards lengthening sleeves. Any close observer will have marked that the actresses, those unfailing signs of the way in which styles are trending, have been wearing sleeves coming below the wrist, sometimes ornamented with a little Van Dyke projection which reaches almost to the knuckles. This means not only long sleeves but the gradual and insidious return from the trimmed cuff. From the Van Dyke flap falling over the hand it is but a step to the flap which would fall over the hand were it not tacked back and from that to every variety of cuff known throughout the history of sleeves is but a little way.

The collar in its present condition is a thing of projections. It has large "ears," which stand out on each side. It has another straight projection in the rear. It has frills or flowers fastened in front. It is made of silk, velvet, chiffon or anything else rich and beautiful. It is paving the way, both by its size and the variety of materials employed in its manufacture, for the Elizabethan collar, the Medici collar and all the other picturesque and ornate neck pieces of antiquity. Jewelled and gold embroidered stuffs, silks, stiff with silver thread and glittering with artificial gems, lace wrought with divers stones, feathers and every conceivable rich and sumptuous thing will be used to make the picture collars of the coming year. The "ordinary" collars will continue to be a crush affair, with ever lengthening side projections.

The girdle will also have its share in forming the fashions of the coming year. It will broaden out, in some cases, into a modified corselet, which will have the effect of shortening the waist and making the Empire styles more or less popular. This will be the case particularly with evening gowns. The waistless will rule, and every woman whose avoirdupois will permit her to do so will indulge in a filmy gown hanging from her shoulders and drawn in below her bosom by a broad, slightly shaped band of heavily embroidered silk or velvet. The same richness of material which will characterize the picture collar will also characterize the picture belt.

This prominence given to rich goods will make such things as sleeveless Zouave and Eton jackets popular. A sleeveless Zouave, stiff with gold thread, heavy with silk embroidery, sewn with tiny seed pearls or small stones of any sort, is as ornate and rich a thing as one can wear. Already there are a good many such jackets displayed in the shops and their numbers will be legion as the season advances.

From the organ plait to the draped skirt is not such a long distance. Only a master in the gentle art of dressing can make organ plaits look well. A skilful novice can drape a skirt. The organ-plaited skirts hang with so many folds and fulness that the most natural thing in the world is to advance from them to draperies and thence to overskirts. The overskirt, moreover, gives opportunity for the display of more rich materials. Brocaded petticoats or underskirts are likely to come in with the overskirt and the coming of the "panel" is already prophesied in the popularity of the stole. Stoles hanging from the belt to the hem of the skirt divide the skirt in a way that suggests panels at once. And panels will follow, for they afford still another opportunity for the introduction of rich stuff.

Exaggeration in styles and extravagance in materials will be the most marked characteristics of the coming year. There are women who will protest but it will be in a still, small voice, which will not carry far. Meantime they will tangle themselves up in yards of unnecessary material, carry about pounds of unnecessary weight and wait for the reaction of the next year.

HINTS TO ADVERTISERS.

All sorts of men must advertise,
  From patriarchs to lads;
The baker always needs his puffs,
  The carpenter his adze.

The length of each advertisement
  Needs cogitation solemn;
The angler only needs a line,
  But the general wants a column.

The tenor of their ads besides,
  Needs long deliberations;
The old maid seeks "Help Wanted, Male,"
  The playright, situations,

The printing, too, requires some care
  As one cannot deny;
The baby likes his in small caps,
  The housewife uses pie,

So each and all must advertise,
  Each find his missing link,
The babe, the maid, the boy, the man,
  Baptized in printers' ink.

FELLED BY A BLOW.

Michael O'Brien Struck by a Cutter Shaft and Knocked Insensible.

A very serious accident befell Michael O'Brien, an old man living in Ashburnham yesterday afternoon.

O'Brien was crossing Water street on Simcoe. A horse and cutter was approaching from the south side and in trying to avoid it O'Brien got directly in the way of a horse and cutter coming in the opposite direction. The driver, Mr. James Davidson, of Smith, quickly reigned his horse, but was too late to avoid running the old man down. The point of the shaft struck him in the temple, felling him to the ground. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried into the police station, where he soon regained consciousness.

Dr. Yelland attended the injured man, and dressed an ugly wound on the temple. Then O'Brien was taken to his home.

The extent of his injuries have not yet been determined. As he is nearly 80 years of age, they may result seriously.

THE OWNER WANTED

Of the New Year's Resolutions Which Were Found on Little Lake.

These are a few notes from a small, fresh Russia-leather diary picked up on Little Lake:

"First—I have lain awake many nights worrying over my conduct at dances and the like. I have been remorseful about flirting. Resolved, the new year shall see a change. I will harden my conscience and decline to worry.

"Second—My most serious fault is getting into a rage whenever I fail to get my own way. Resolved, I shall not be enraged in future, but shall make quite sure of my own way.

"Third—The most trying moments of my life during the past year have been those in which once fond swains have confided to me the existence of a charmer and consoler. Resolved, to keep the fond swains of the future, so far as possible, from seeking consolation elsewhere; to make them believe that better is misery with me than content with another.

"Fourth—I have been much annoyed by the ingratitude of servants to whom I have tried to be pleasant and the insolence of clerks to whom I have been polite. Resolved, not to be annoyed in the future; I shall not be pleasant or polite.

"Fifth—My dressmakers', milliners' and other bills have been extravagant, and I have been put to great inconvenience to pay them. Resolved, I shall not be put to inconvenience in the future. All my bills shall go direct to papa.

Nearly every family needs a little additional furniture every year, and it is an advantage to know where you can get what you want and know that you are getting value. A. Clegg has just what you need. He is buying for you every day. Always looking for best values for you, he knows that goods well bought are half sold. If you need furniture you cannot afford to buy until you have seen his stock and learned his prices. WITH THE SPORTS.

Carlers Were Out in Force on New Year's Day.

Fourteen rinks of the Toronto Curling club played on New Year's day. President Maddison and Vice-president L. M. Jones led the opposing teams and the match was for barrels of flour, to be given to the city charities by the losing side. The president's team won by the large majority of 41 shots.

BY THE TEE

The curling season was opened in Galt by a match between the Galts and Galt Granites, the latter being defeated by 11 shots.

In a curling match between Niagara Falls and Niagara-on-the-Lake, two rinks a side, the Falls won by 10 shots.

The Thistles and Granites, of Winnipeg, played on New Year's day and the Thistles won by a score of 138 to 130.

The Hamilton Victories match resulted in a defeat for the vice-president's team by 36 shots.

THE LIMESTONES WON.

At Kingston on New Year's day Malcolm Chace's team of American College Hockey players were badly beaten by the Limestones. The first half of the match was devoted to the American style of play and resulted in a tie. In the last half the Limestones scored six goals without giving the visitors a point. In the evening the Americans were banqueted at the British American hotel.

NOTES.

James A. Donoghue, the crack skater, was beaten in a race at Newburg, N.Y., on New Year's by Howard Moshér.

The first race at New Orleans on New Year's day went to Matt White with odds of 100 to 1 against him.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE PREMIER IS BURIED.

HIS REMAINS GIVEN A MOST ELABORATE BURIAL.

The Ceremonials Impressive and Solemn—Thousands Witness the Last Sad Rites—Canada's Late Premier Honored and Mourned.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 3.—In solemn state the remains of the late Sir John Thompson were interred in Holy Cross Cemetery this afternoon and the last of a series of great honors to a Canadian statesman was carried out with all that pomp and splendor attending a state funeral. No place in Canada has better facilities for a ceremony of that kind and the service in St. Mary's cathedral and the succeeding funeral procession were such as to leave a lasting impression on the thousands who took part in or witnessed the functions.

PAID EVERY HONOR.

The honors paid to the deceased Premier after his tragic death at Windsor Castle where he had just received the greatest gift available for a Canadian at the hands of her Majesty Queen Victoria, awakened the interest and sympathy of the Canadian people. Hardly more could have been done for a member of the Royal family. The touching scenes at Windsor Castle and subsequently in London and again at Portsmouth when H.M.S. Blenheim departed with the remains for Halifax were repeated when the funeral ship arrived in port on New Years Day, and again today, when the last respects were paid.

Everything possible was done to evidence the grief of the contrary at large at the loss of its first statesman and citizen. In direct contrast to the drenching wet weather of Tuesday, when the ceremony of receiving the body from the Blenheim was carried out with Imperial military honors, today was fine and moderately cold. Incoming trains this morning brought great crowds of people from all over. Nova Scotia, and the outside proceedings of the day were witnessed by many thousands. The attendance at the funeral service was necessarily restricted to people of official positions.

TAKEN TO THE CATHEDRAL.

After lying in state all day yesterday the remains were removed at 7 o'clock this morning to the catafalque in St. Mary's Cathedral, Lady Thompson and family and David Pottinger having taken a farewell look at the remains last night.

There was a distinguished gathering present, including Lady Thompson and family and relatives, their Excellencies Lord and Lady Aberdeen, representing Her Majesty; Hon. Mackenzie Bowell and his Cabinet, Lieutenant General Montgomery Moore and staff, members of the Provincial Cabinet, high Government officials, judges from all over Canada and hundreds of other prominent people.

THE REQUIEM MASS.

The requiem mass and funeral service in St. Mary's church was conducted with all the pomp and slendor of the Roman Catholic Church. Bishop Cameron, of Antigonish, was the celebrant, and Archbishop O'Brien, of Halifax, the preacher. Shey were assisted by a staff of deacons and sub-deacons. At ten o'clock his Grace Archbishop O'Brien entered with his ministers and took his seat on the throne on the gospel side of the altar. Bishop Cameron with his attendants sat on the faldstool near the epistle side of the altar.

A SOLEMN CEREMONY.

Afterwards they both proceeded to the center of the altar, blessed themselves and the confiteor was said. Archbishop O'Brien then retired to the throne. Bishop Cameron mounted the altar and said the introit. After the collects the sub-deacon sang the Epistle and the choir the "Dies Irae," which, as translated by Archbishop O'Brien, is pronounced by competent judges to be one of the most faithful renderings of the original sacred verse. Afterwards the celebrant continued the solemn service, including the Oblation of the Host Oblation of the Chalice and Preface, the latter being sung by the celebrant.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S SERMON.

Archbishop O'Brien preached an eloquent sermon, taking for his text 1. Kings chapter xiii., 2, 3 and 4: "Having then conversed with you from my youth, until this day, behold here I am; His anointed, whether I have taken any man's ox and ass, if I have wronged any man, if I have oppressed any man, if I have taken a bribe at any man's hand, and I will despise it this day and will restore it to you. And they said, thou hast not wronged us nor oppressed us, nor taken ought at any man's hand."

The canon of the mass followed with its accompany ceremony and prayers.

After mass the celebrant, accompanied by the ministers, proceeded to the catafalque and performed the Absolution. During the recital of the Lord's Prayer the priest sprinkled the corpse with holy water and afterwards incensed it.

TAKEN TO THE CEMETERY.

At the conclusion of the service the coffin was borne to the funeral car, standing at the main cathedral entrance, on Spring Garden road. It was decidedly striking in appearance. The dark drapery hanging about the sides almost concealed the wheels of the car. Thick tassels dangled at the corners and the rich drapery was caught up with silver case. In the center of the car was the bier, on which the coffin rested, and over all at a height of eight feet was a large canopy, supported on columns of black and silver, and surmounted with plumes and crown. The funeral cortege then proceeded to Holy Cross cemetery where the interment took place.

The mourning decorations of public buildings in the business part of the city, as well as along the route of the funeral procession, were very elaborate, and it is estimated that not less than 25,000 yards of black cashmere, to say nothing of other materials, were used for the purpose.

A Murderer Escapes.

PERRY, O.T., Jan. 3.—John Milligan, the double murderer who is under sentence to be hanged Jan. 11, and who escaped a month ago, was recaptured last night, jumped through a glass door and escaped to the east. Hundreds of men are in pursuit. Milligan was bare headed, bare footed and in his shirt sleeves. There is two inches of snow on the ground.

A Street Car Collision.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 3.—As Nicholas Wagner, an expressman, was driving home with his son Willie, aged nine years, and a hired man named Stielke, he collided with a Broadway car running at a high rate of speed. The boy was instantly killed, as was the horse. Wagner sustained a severe fracture of the skull. Stielke was badly cut about the head and injured, it is thought, fatally. The motorman and conductor were arrested.

BUDGET FROM OTTAWA.

BUCKINGHAM HAS ANOTHER DISASTROUS CONFLAGRATION.

Arrangement for the Great Ice Carnival Going On—A New Year's Episode—Doings of Quebec's Second City.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Buckingham has suffered the visitation of another fire.

It broke out last night night about 11 o'clock in Lawrence's store, in the most thickly populated part of the town. The fire had taken such headway before measures could be taken to extinguish it, that when at last water was thrown upon the flames the efforts of the volunteers were seen to be unavailing to check their progress. The store was completely destroyed.

From the store the fire had already leaped to the Commercial hotel and in a few minutes it was burning fiercely. At midnight the building appeared to be doomed to total destruction. Fortunately, although most of the inmates had already retired for the night, when the fire broke out, the alarm was given in time to enable them to make good their escape.

There is thus providentially no loss of life to record, although the escape was a narrow one, the boarders losing almost all their effects.

Fournier's barber shop, adjoining, was also swept away by the flames, which at midnight were still raging fiercely and threatening destruction to the neighboring houses.

A NEW YEAR'S EPISODE.

Mr. A. H. Taylor of the Grand Trunk ticket office, and Mr. John Sutherland, found a horse near the north shore of Deschene Lake on New Year's Day. They brought it back to Aylmer with them, and to their great surprise discovered that the animal had run away from a couple of Ottawa gentlemen, and upon reaching the lake had cleared itself of the sleigh and most of the harness. The drivers, however, were feeling good and were none the worse after the occurrence.

THE CARNIVAL.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Carnival was held last evening, Mr. W. A. Allan in the chair, Mr. E. C. Grant, secretary.

In connection with the band tournament, it was reported that entries had been received for competition from bands in Malone, Ogdensburg, Rome, and Watertown. It was pointed out that the evenings fixed for this competition would conflict with the fancy dress carnival at Rideau Rink and the storming of the Ice palace. This, however, will be satisfactorily arranged.

HEARD HE WAS KILLED.

Mr. Fedarb, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. received a letter yesterday from a prominent gentleman in London, enquiring as to the whereabouts of a party named Hoddington. He had heard that he was one of the victims of the recent dynamite explosion at Hull.

WITH THE SPORTS.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons Cannot Fight at Jacksonville, Fla.

The proposed fight between Middleweight Bob Fitzsimmons and Heavyweight Jim Corbett will not take place at Jacksonville. Public sentiment is too much against it. The ordinance which was recently passed prohibiting boxing in Jacksonville has knocked the calculations of the projectors of the contest into a cocked hat. It is just beginning to dawn on the sports that this law really means something and it will not be in the least amazing if the club, where the encounter was destined to take place, will come out and call the affair off as far as they are concerned, despite the fustian of the heavyweight that the fight can be brought off there. The club house is dilapidated and no efforts are being made to keep it in repair.

HOCKEY.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The American hockeyists appeared in a match here last night at Rideau rink under their own rules, and put up an exceptionally clever game. They were equal to the Ottawa aggregation all the way through, the first half ending 3 to 2 in their favor. The second half was stubbornly contested, but the good systematic play of the Americans was too much for the Ottawas, who only scored once while their opponents added 2. The total score was 5 to 3 for the Americans.

BASEBALL.

Manager Maddock has signed Frank Southard, a pitcher who was with Reading in the Pennsylvania State League last year. He comes highly recommended as an all-round player.

W. Congalton, the young Guelph player, has also been signed to play in the outfield. He led the C.A.B.A. in batting last year, with an average of .412. His fielding average was .920. Congalton is also a promising south paw twirler.

Manager Maddock will leave early next week on still hunt for players, and it will not be surprising if he bags several good men he has in view.

Jacob Schaefer has proposed a billiard game which will be called the space game, and probably adopted. The space game consists of four lines drawn from the centre of each cushion to the centre of the opposite one, thus dividing the table into four equal spaces. The player is allowed five shots within each space, but on the sixth shot one of the object balls must cross a line, thus compelling a player to confine himself almost entirely to open-table work.

DISTRESS IN THE WEST.

AWFUL DESTITUTION IN THE OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

A Cyclone of Suffering—Four Tennessee Murderers Break Through a Jail—Quebec Items.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The cyclone of suffering in parts of the west is widening. It includes the Cherokee strip in Oklahoma, which was opened for settlement a year ago. The country is emphatically new. The missionaries of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, in forwarding special correspondence relating to the situation, state there is special need of clothing. With the thermometer below zero, there were 13 men at a religious meeting who wore no overcoats and were not known to have any. Some of the women were without wraps of any kind. A mother and daughter alternately wore the same pair of shoes. Women have been found barefooted at home.

PETITIONING CONGRESS.

A meeting has been held to petition Congress for help, but they can't wait for Congressional action. The missionary continues: It takes every cent of our ladies' society and all they can raise to get books, keep up the Sabbath school and purchase feul for our church. The building is new and not yet furnished. The ladies recently purchased a stove. The blizzard struck us at Christmas, since which time some families have suffered simply for the want of clothing of any description.

QUEBEC ITEMS.

QUEBEC, Jan. 3.—A man named Paradis died suddenly yesterday. Death was caused by apoplexy.

The Local Legislature met today. Several important measures were discussed. An amendment of Mr. Gladu was defeated by 38 to 14.

ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan.—Four murderers, J. L. Roddy, Andrew Winters, Geo. Alexander and C. D. Kiger, made their escape from the county jail here this morning at an early hour. The bolts of the lock on the fire escape were sawed in two, the saw being furnished by friends on the outside. Alexander was waiting trial for the murder of two men.

A MAN HAS BOTH LEGS CUT OFF BY A TRAIN.

Lace the Baby Farmer Gets 13 Months in the Central—A Boy Seriously Injured by a Trolley.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—A youth 14 years of age named Wilfrid Wheatley was struck by a Parliament street trolley car about noon today and severely injured. He was painfully bruised about the head and shoulders and his right leg was slightly crushed. The injured lad was removed to his home at No. 30 Arnold avenue.

THE BAY CLEARING OF ICE.

The ice on the bay began to break up last night and before noon today as far east as Yonge street was almost clear. A strong current was setting out of the eastern gap. Several persons reported to have got a wetting through being too risky upon the ice.

TORONTO MAYORALTY.

The fight for the mayoralty will be a straight contest again between Mayor Kennedy and ex-Mayor Fleming, the two other nominees, Mr. J. E. Verrall and Wm. Carlyle having retired. Among the nominees for aldermen who have retired is ex-Ald. Jas. Gowanlock of the Sixth ward.

COMMITTED TO THE CENTRAL.

The disgusting features of baby farming were shown up startlingly clear in the Police Court this morning during the trial of the very much bewhiskered and spectacled Wm. E. Lace on a charge of illtreating children left in his charge at his farm on Gladstone avenue.

The woman, Mary Lace, who was sent to prison for 18 months for manslaughter at the Sessions, is the alleged wife of the prisoner.

It was shown that Lace treated the children brutally and the Magistrate fined him $100 and sent him to the Central for three months.

BOTH LEGS CUT OFF.

Crossing the railway tracks on Brock avenue early this morning, William Armstrong, an old and respected citizen living at 9 Cunningham avenue, a carpenter by trade, met with awful injuries.

Mr. Armstrong was struck by an engine going west. Both legs were cut off below the knees, one arm is mangled and he received bad cuts about the head.

The injured man was attended by Drs. Rowe and Lynd and removed to the General Hospital. On arrival there the doctors concluded that he could live only a few hours.

Mr. Armstrong was on his way to work when the accident befel him.

Were They the Buncers.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—Hugh Barry and Arthur F. Wood, supposed to be implicated in the "green goods" deal in which Walter H. Greer lost $100 in a York street drug store, came up in the Police Court and were remanded until Friday. Bail was granted Wood, but refused Barry.

The Middlemarch Murder.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 3.—Tomorrow the examination of Hendershott and Welter for the alleged murder of the former's nephew will commence before the Police Magistrate here. A large number of witnesses have been subpoenaed, and the case will last at least two or three days. To expedite proceedings the Attorney-General was requested to send up a stenographer, and has complied. Nelson Butcher, of Toronto, will record the evidence.

Stage Driven Off.

TILSONBURG, Jan. 3.—The Ingersoll and Port Burwell stage was driven off last night while the driver had left it for a few minutes to deliver mails at Griffin's Corners. It was supposed to be stolen, but this morning was found at Mr. M. Purdy's, near Corinth, by Chief Pow of Tilsonburg. The mail and express had not been disturbed.

Another Mysterious Death.

SARNIA, Jan. 3.—A coroner's jury is trying to probe the mysterious death of Joseph Glass. Dr. C. L. Vale, who attended Glass during his short illness, testified that there were symptoms of poisoning, that Glass vomited frequently before his death, and that he did not act like a man who had died of gravel, as was supposed to be the case.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 4, 1895.

Good morning!

According to the latest and most authentic reports—made by the candidates themselves—there will be 41 aldermen and two mayors in Hamilton this year.

The Czar of Russia promises to be one of the most popular monarchs in Europe. He has completely won the St. Petersburg populace by his lack of fear in going about the streets of the capital unattended—a great contrast to the manner of his father. The police, however, do not like his ways, as they are in constant fear that he will be killed.

The building of a great reservoir in upper Egypt is now assured. The work will be begun this spring. In the next Egyptian budget the sum of 150,000 Egyptian pounds, about $800,000, will be set apart for the purpose, it is announced. The height of the dam is to be so regulated that the islands of Philae, on which is the Temple of Isis, will not be flooded. This is due to the protests received from all parts of the world when the subject was first discussed.

Dean Hole says in his Memoirs that the cathedrals of England are no longer museums or show places, but places consecrated to the uses of religion. As good a story as any the dean tells is of an old-fashioned cathedral verger "lord of the aisles," who saw a pious visitor on his knees. The verger hastened up to him and said to him, in the tone of indignant excitement "The services in this cathedral are at 10 o'clock in the morning and at 4 in the afternoon, and we don't have no fancy prayers."

The efficiency of the British Navy is not measured alone by its ironclads and guns. Other factors not less important are its perfect system and the scrupulous fidelity of officers and men in obeying orders. These latter characteristics are well illustrated in the arrival of the cruiser Blenheim at Halifax with the body of Sir John Thompson. Captain Poe received instructions when he sailed from Portsmouth, to arrive at Halifax at noon on Jan. 1, and to a minute the great warship cast anchor in Halifax harbor at the appointed time. This capacity of "getting there" on time has done much to make Britain mistress of the seas.

The Japanese armies in China are likely to find in King Winter a more awkward impediment than the Chinese Emperor was able to throw in their way. Cold, snow and bad roads can break the spirit of the best soldiers, and all are to be met with in the district of China the invaders now occupy. Reports have it that China will use the breathing spell thus given her to talk peace and prepare for war. This would be bad faith, but Chinalike. It is doubtful, though, if the Pekin Government, by pursuing such a policy, can accomplish much. It has immense resources in men, but has no apparent means in arousing them to the imminence of the danger that menaces their country.

SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

Out of 50 burials in one of the city cemeteries for the present month no less than 22—or, almost half—were children.

There is, however nothing singular in this fact. There were 67,688 deaths in all Canada in 1891 and nearly 32,000 of these occurred below ten years of age.

But such a shockingly high rate of infantile mortality is nevertheless a disgrace to our civilization. The greater part of it is due to preventible causes and chief among these is the lack of knowledge concerning the requirements of infants. If all mothers were properly trained there would be a greater reduction in the death rate in Ontario than has resulted from the practical elimination of small-pox and cholera.

TRINITY CHURCH SCANDAL.

If reports printed in the New York papers are true, a startling condition of affairs has been brought to light by the investigation of the tenement houses owned by Trinity Church Corporation of New York. In fact, the statements amount to a scandal. Trinity Church, it is claimed, owns 336 houses occupied as tenements, making it one of the greatest landlords of New York, and complaints have been made to the Board of Health against one-third of these houses in the last three years. Inspectors have recently been at work upon them, and their reports warrant the conclusion that some of the houses are among the worst tenement in New York. Reeking odors from overflowing sewers and closets are generally found, and many of the buildings have unsafe walls and dangerous banisters. Out of 200 complaints in three years the inspectors found that in only 40 cases were the nuisances abated. It appears that these tenements are not very large buildings, and are mostly old structures made over into dwellings for not more than three families each. In six out of nine houses in one short street there have been 25 deaths in three years from zymotic diseases. Eight of these houses have been complained of to the authorities; some of them repeatedly. No deaths occurred in the one against which no complaint was made. The Health inspector reported against 32 of the houses in one day, and the condition of nearly everyone was described as revolting.

If these statements, gathered from the reports are true, the machinery of the Trinity Church corporation has evidently been grinding out of its prosperity the greatest possible revenue to be expended upon churches, missions and charities. Such apparent indifference to the sufferings of those from whom the revenue was largely derived could not be excused, but there is reason for hope, if it exists, that there will soon be a revolution in the care of the Trinity property. Considerations of humanity as well as religion would demand it.

Trinity is the rich and fashionable church in New York whose ushers a couple of years ago refused a poorly clad man admittance to the service, and then excused themselves by saying "If Christ come as you are, the stewards of Trinity would turn Him out of their church."

AILEEN.

How well I remember our last night together,
My sweet colleen alas! ere I crossed o'er the foam;
Her footstep was light on the sweet smellin' heather,
And her bright smile was sunshine lightin' me home.

How lightly we whirled through the dances that evenin',
Not a pair in the throng so happy and gay;
Her voice was the music that kept me from greivin',
For from home and the loved ones I parted next day.

Oh! how my heart throbbed at the moment of partin',
As slowly we wandered adown the boreen;
And then grew my eyes with the the tears that kept startin',
At leavin my Aileen, my peerless colleen.

Soft sounded her voice as "Yes, Patrick, mavourneen,"
She murmured so sweetly in answer to me.
Then up rose my heart, that with high hope was burnin',
And blessed the few words that had pledged her to me.

But now far away from dear Ireland I wander
To seek for my darlin' a home in the West;
And each day that I live my heart grows fonder,
Of Aileen, sweet Aileen, the one I love best.

And, now, as the sun rises out of the ocean,
My heart rushes back to the shrine of its queen,
To whisper the tale of my life-long devotion,
To Aileen, fair Aileen, my Irish colleen.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—A letter has been received here from Turkey which says:—"The Armenians, oppressed by Kurds and urks, said they could not pay pay taxes to both Kurds and Government. Plundered and oppressed by the Kurds, they resisted them; there were some killed. Then hese reports were sent to Constantinople hat the Armenians were in rebellion. rders were sent to exterminate them root nd branch.

No quarter was given, no mercy shown. en, women and children were shot down r butchered. The most propable estimate s 15,000 killed, 25 villages plundered, rased nd burned. Women were outraged and hen butchered. Every effort is being made o falsify the facts and pull the wool over he eyes of European Governments."

The Armenians of Boston sent the ollowing cablegram this afternoon o Mr. Gladstone:—"Armenians of Boston thank you for your sympathy and id."

AN ASSASSINATION.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 2.—It is reported hat the Governor of Bitlis, Tashin Pasha, who commanded the military operations n the Sassoun district, where so many utrages have been reported, has been assassinated by an Armenian, who afterwards ommitted suicide.

SUSPECTED INCENDIARIES.

Suspected Fire Bugs Arrested by Toronto Detectives.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—All the detectives are of the opinion that they now have in custody the "fire bug" who has been the cause of the numerous conflagrations in the north western portion of the city during the past three months. His name is Thomas McKenzie, alias Hallarn, and he lived with his parents at 5 Lennox street.

NONE SINCE HIS ARREST.

There have been over forty fires in that vicinity recently, but since the arrest of McKenzie—a week ago—none have taken place. He was arrested on a charge of breaking into the house of William Taylor, 4 Johnson avenue, and stealing $5 in cash and a watch and chain. He was convicted and will be sentenced after the other charges against him, which are as follows, have been dealt with:

THE CHARGES.

Burning a stable in rear of 145 Brunswick avenue belonging to J. L. Pincombe.

Burning stable in rear of 540 Spadina avenue belonging to Robert Darley.

Burning stable in rear of 308 College street belonging to Hugh Salmon.

Burning stable in rear of 913 Manning avenue belonging to M. S. Kane.

All the blazes took place on Christmas Eve. The motive ascribed is pure "devilment." He will be tried next Wednesday.

CANADA'S PREMIER KNIGHTED.

The New Year's Selection for Her Majesty's Favors—No Peers Created.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Among the New Year honors announced is the conferring of the Order of the Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George upon Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Premier of Canada. Mr. W. H. Harris has been appointed a Companion of the Third Class of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, in recognition of his services to the British section of the Chicago Exposition.

The Hon. Cecil Rhodes, Premier of Cape Colony is appointed a member of the Privy Council, and Mr. George Newnes, member of Parliament for the Newmarket division of Cambridgeshire, and the editor of Tid Bits, the Strand Magazine, and the Westminster Gazette, and Prof. James Emerson Reynolds, M.D., F.R.S., president of the Royal College of Physicians, have been created Baronets. In addition, Mr. John Jackson, the contractor who undertook the work of the Tower bridge, has been knighted, and the same honor has been conferred upon Mr. A. C. Mackenzie, principal of the Royal Academy of Music. Baron Cromer (Evelyn Baring), the British Agent and Consul General in Egypt, is made a K.G.C.B., and Mr. W. H. White, Chief Constructor of the Navy, is made a K.C.B.

The Times, commenting on the selection made, says: "The colonial statesman or the Englishman who finds his career in the the colonies must do far greater things than the Englishman who stays at home in order to win his way to that essentially imperial distinction, membership of the Privy Council."

"The absence of peerage is everywhere commented upon. Lord Rosebery's sense of the ridiculous is too keen to allow him to add new members to the House he desires to abolish."

The Freeman's Journal complains of the absence of Irish names from the list of people honored by the Queen on New Year's day.

OBJECTS TO REPORTERS.

PUMAS IN DEADLY CONFLICT.

Great Cats That Make a Rattling Fight When Evenly Matched.

"On our return trip to the coast I saw a thrilling incident of life in the South American forest, a fight to the death between two big pumas. Those great beasts are fierce, hard fighters at all times against a common enemy, but it is only during the mating season that the males fight among themselves, and when they do the contest means death to one or both of them. For strength and courage they are the equals of the African lion or the tigers of the Indian jungles.

"We were making our way down a narrow wooded ravine in the foothills of the Andes and had stopped for our midday meal on the bank of a small mountain stream of clear water. After we had finished the meal I lay down for a short rest, but in less than five minutes I was aroused by the most terrific roaring, snapping and snarling of wild beasts I had ever heard.

"'Pumas, and there's going to be a fight,' said our guide in a whisper. It was not difficult to locate the animals. They were not more than 100 yards away, and by creeping through the brush as quietly as possible we were able to get near enough to see the fight without disturbing them. When we caught sight of the two animals, they were crouching close to the ground, facing each other, in a small space under some large trees. They were the finest specimens of the puma I ever saw.

"They were probably 30 feet apart, and as they crouched there, glaring at each other, they looked like giant cats about to spring on their prey. Pugilists never sparred with greater caution than did those big brutes. Their tails were switching back and forth, and their eyes were like balls of fire. Slowly they moved around in a circle, all the time cautiously getting closer and closer together. It was evident that each was waiting for the other to make the first lead. For more than ten minutes they watched and waited. The roaring and snarling we had heard when they first met had ceased. They made no sound now as they watched for a chance to spring.

"Our own nerves were trembling under the strain when at last the two great beasts rose in the air at the same instant, and, like catapults, came together with a thud that could have been heard 200 yards away. They dropped to the ground, and for almost ten minutes all we could make out was two great brown bodies rolling over and over in the death struggle. They made no outcry of any kind, but every few seconds we could hear their powerful jaws come together with a snap like the closing of a well oiled steel trap.

"Finally they began to weaken, and as their struggles grew less violent we could see that both of them were covered with blood, while their flesh was torn to shreds. In five minutes more the fight was over, and the two giants of the forest were stretched out at full length on the ground, clasped in each other's limbs, just as two playful kittens sometimes lie down together. They struggled feebly a little longer, and then both of them lay perfectly still. Both were dead when we got to them, and I never saw animals so torn to pieces. The entrails of both were torn out and scattered over the ground where they had fought, and in their necks were great ragged holes, from which the blood had flowed in streams while they were still fighting. They each had a score of wounds that would have killed any animal with less tenacity of life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Napoleon's Thriftiness.

Economy and privation were always more supportable to him than borrowing. He detested irregularities in financial matters. "Your finances are deplorably conducted, apparently on metaphysical principles. Believe me, money is a very physical thing," he once said to Joseph when the latter, as king of Naples, could not make both ends meet. He put Jerome to sea largely to stop his reckless expenditures. At 15 that young man paid $3,900 for a shaving case "containing everything except the beard to enable its owner to use it." Some of the most furious scenes which occurred between Napoleon and Josephine were because she was continually in debt. After the divorce he frequently cautioned her to be watchful of her money. "Think what a bad opinion I would have of you if I knew you were in debt with an income of $600,000 a year," he wrote her in 1813.

The methodical habits of Marie Louise were a constant satisfaction to Napoleon. "She settles all her accounts once a week, deprives herself of new gowns if necessary and imposes privations upon herself in order to keep out of debt," he said proudly. A bill of 62 francs and 32 centimes was once sent to him for window blinds placed in the salon of the Princess Borghese. "As I did not order this expenditure, which ought not to be charged to my budget, the princess will pay it," he wrote on the margin. It was not parsimony. It was the orderliness of order. No one was more generous in gifts, pensions, salaries, but it irritated him to see money wasted or managed carelessly.—McClure's Magazine.

California's Wonderful Temple.

In southern California, in the county of San Luis Obispo, there is situated one of the most remarkable prehistoric monuments known to the archaeologists. From a distance it looks like an immense rock rising from the plains of Carisa, but upon nearer approach it is seen to be a temple of extraordinary dimensions and of unknown antiquity. The inner court has a level floor 295 feet long and 125 feet wide, and the ceiling is from 60 to 160 feet high, according to situation. The building was evidently used by prehistoric man, but for what purpose and how long since no one knows. It has been suggested, however, that it was either a temple of worship or the capitol of some ancient government. The walls and portions of the ceiling are beautifully decorated with paintings in colors red, white and black, many of them supposed to have some symbolic meaning. Holcomb, who visited the site of this wonderful edifice in 1866, and who put in several days trying to find evidences of human sacrifice among the various scenes depicted on the walls, says that the colors are apparently as bright as when first laid on.

The Indians of that locality are said to have no traditions concerning the building of this temple, yet they all regard it with superstitious reverence.—St. Louis Republic.

Weird Story of a Chair.

In the museum at Cape Town is shown an old fashioned, high backed wooden chair, to which attaches a weird story. It is related that the chair is the one in which the Dutch governor was found sitting dead a few moments after the execution of a soldier whom he had sentenced to be hanged, and who on his doom being pronounced solemnly called upon his condemner to accompany him to the throne of the Supreme Judge.—Times of India.

THE SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, OF CANADA

From the TRADE BULLETIN, Montreal,

The report of the business of this leading Life Insurance Company of Canada for the past year may well be a source of gratification alike to the shareholders and the assured, the accession to its business during the year exceeding even the phenomenally large increase of the year previous. The marvellous growth and success of the Sun Life is due to the absolute security which it guarantees the insured, the prompt settlement of all its claims and the generous treatment which it invariably pursues towards its policy-holders, even in cases where quibbles might be taken advantage of for the purpose of deferring or even shirking the payment of claims. Instances have come to our knowledge in which the Sun Life could have well stood out against meeting certain claims in conjunction with other companies; but no! it preferred to take a more magnanimous and charitable view of what were said to be suspicious circumstances, and paid the full amount which the policy called for without a day's demur. The phenomenal success therefore which continues to attend the onward march of this deserving home life assurance company is well merited.

FROM THE MILKMAN.

IT'S A GOOD THING, HE SAYS, THAT THE FLUID IS WATERED.

Otherwise It Would Have a Tendency to Make People Bilious—Why He Has No Scruples Whatever About Diluting It. Frank Admissions.

Of course we do and don't make any bones about telling it right out straight. People generally get it upright about our pure milk from Soho farm. It's the purest milk on earth—the milk that is in it—and Ridgewood water won't hurt anybody. I knew an old soaker once who persisted in swearing that water was unhealthy because it rotted shoes and everything, rusted iron and all that, and then he used to look you straight in the eye, screw up one side of his mouth until you thought that corner was going up to his eye without stopping, and clinch his argument by saying, "Just think what a powerful effect water must have on the coating of your stomach!" But that soaker had to drink water, bad as it was for his stomach, when he took a milk punch.

I agree with you that Soho was a queer name for me to choose for my farm in my mind. You see, the way it happened was this: My wife is a bright little woman, and when I told her that all the milkmen were selling milk right fresh from their own farms she hunted around for a fancy name that would take the eye and bring trade. But somehow we could not agree about those cooked up, and we agreed to leave it to a newspaper man I know, and when I told him about it he said, "So, ho! you're going to have a farm of your own, in your mind." And I caught on right off. I remembered seeing the name on tea caddies when I was in the grocery line, and I clinched it, and ever after that my purest of all milk sold in Brooklyn came from my Soho farm. That's how it was.

Not as long as 20 years ago the milk pump for us milkmen in a certain section of Brooklyn used to be on Kent avenue, near Park, and it was there we all met, after arriving from Jersey City, where in the freight depot were located Echo farm and Soho farm and all the other farms of Orange county, and from this pump, which we at first called our cow, we drew more than half our milk and three-fourths of our fortunes. It was wonderful milk we got there, for if we had been permitted to sell that entirely to our customers it would never have soured, and, being one cow's milk, there would never have been any trouble with the babies, and the mothers would have been delighted. But the milk we got from that pump in Kent avenue, near Park, did not have a milky color, and both fathers and mothers would have soured on it themselves if our fondest hopes could have been realized and we could have gone so far as to have offered the pure spring water at so much a quart. But that wouldn't go, although it was the purest spring water I ever drank and never made me bilious. Some milk will stand more watering than other milk because it is stronger. All milk ought to be diluted, because it is too thick and has a strong tendency to make everybody bilious. That is what I learned from a good Methodist woman named Low, who lived in Flushing when I was a boy and had a few cows whose milk she sold to the neighbors. I never forgot what she told me when I came upon her suddenly one day in the cellar of the house to find out what I had to bring her so much water from the well for. She told me it would be un-Christianlike for her to sell such strong and unwholesome milk, which might make all her customers sick, and so she performed a Christian duty by making it half water, and they liked it all the better. And when I got in the milk business I found other good Christians who had the same doctrine, and, if you will believe me, this dilution applies to other things among good Christian brethren as well as heathen dealers in groceries and so on.

I can't say that I ever could countenance making milk out of chalk and spring water, no matter how pure and sparkling the water might be. You see, there is always a sediment from chalk milk, and it is a dead give away, but I have often thought that there might be an extract of milk made so that we might take it and add water to it and call it pure Soho farm milk. This would save a world of trouble and expense and make life easy for the milkman, instead of a burden, as it is now. We wouldn't have to start for Jersey at 11 o'clock at night and milk the pump at 3 in the morning, but we could do all the business in the rear of the store, where we sell our milk, just before we open up for custom in the morning. Another great advantage would be that our cow would never give out, and we could always hand over a good supply of fresh milk from Soho farm and be able to supply even the largest demands of hotels and others. It is not every milkman you come across who would be as honest and truthful as I am [illegible] harm in softening up the milk a little with water and giving it a lovely baby blue color. I know from an experience of many years that people will not buy and use what is really pure milk, and I leave it to any man who ever sold a quart of milk to back me up in what I say. You can't sell pure milk. I don't suppose it is without any water when we get it at the freight depot in Jersey, and I'm mighty sure people do not get it entirely pure when it is sold at retail unless they ask for it particularly. I've produced it as pure as it came from the cows on the real farms, and people who wanted it or thought they did didn't want any more of it. You see, it is too rich for the stomachs of most people and too rich for the blood of everybody. If customers would do their own watering, that would be another thing, but they don't know how as well as us milkmen.—Milkman in Brooklyn Eagle.

Beets Grown From Buds.

Every grower of beets has noticed the small buds that appear near the top of the root. These are indeed miniature plants, and if cut out and planted, just as potato eyes are, each will next season produce a perfect beet plant with as large a root downward as one grown from seed. It may seem that there can be no practical object in growing beets thus, for it is always easy to grow beet seed, but it is found that when a high grade sugar beet has been secured by sowing strains of the sweetest beets there is a tendency to retrograde in quality. Hence some beet sugar growers in Europe are experimenting in growing from the bud. Having once obtained a root with high per cent of sugar, the quality can be maintained by growing stock from buds. It is possible that this process, if continued long, will tend to establish a growth of beet roots with many prongs and shoots. The form of growth would be objectionable as making the beet less compact.—American Cultivator.

What Would You Call It?

I had a good look at something very unique on Fifth avenue, writes a New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. It was a most exaggerated type of Willie boy, chappie or Johnnie, perhaps all three rolled into one. As it approached it attracted marked attention. The face is unfit for publication, but the expression thereon conjured up visions of an insane asylum. Clad in the latest cut of long tailed, double breasted attire, a bell crowned hat, loud trousers rolled up at the bottom high above tan shoes, fashionable gloves and carrying the regulation cane, it came along. The gait was peculiar, a sort of cross between a single footer and a spavined hurdle jumper. There was a sort of to and fro movement that made pedestrians swerve to one side, fearful lest a collision would wreck the outfit. The left arm was raised above the hips and crooked outwardly, the wrist limber and the fingers dangling, very like the pose cultivated by the chimpanzee when at ease. This arm carrying act apparently occupied all the creature's attention. The eyes were fastened on the left shoulder appendage, and its swing and carriage were constantly shifted, much to the amusement of the multitude. Many stood and gazed and smiled sort of disgustedlike. It was watched and studied until it got out of sight. A policeman who saw the attention had been diverted from the shop windows to it also grasped the humor of the thing and said: "It's perfectly harmless. Lots of money. Just sense enough to know it's on the earth. Frequently forgets where it lives, though, and has to be piloted home." Such a sight almost makes one lose faith and doubt the statement about man being made in the image of the Maker.

His Torn Letters.

"I'd like to speak to Miss Edith private," said a woman who had been a servant in Miss Edith's family, but who now took lodgers.

"Miss Edith," she began, after some preliminary remarks, "I'm told that Mr. Ripley comes here consid'able, and, Miss Edith, you know what I've always thought of your family, and that any one of you young ladies is fit for the best in the land, and I'm not sayin but what Mr. Ripley is a worthy young man, but I think I owe it to you, Miss Edith, to tell you that he gets terrible affectionate letters from a young lady named 'Belle.'"

"I've no right to interfere with his letters," said Edith, but her voice trembled. "And how do you know anything about it, Ann? You wouldn't read his letters."

"No, indeed, Miss Edith. Far be it from me to read anybody's letters when they're in the whole sheet and done up proper in envelopes, but when a man tears up his letters and scatters them round his room I have the right, as nobody can deny, to piece them together and make what may be out of them, and I hold that it's my duty for your family's sake, and for your sake, Miss Edith."

A few days later Ann paid another visit, and this time she announced: "Miss Edith, my mind's at rest, and I hope yours will be too. I pieced together a letter from his mother last night, and I found out that Belle is his sister."—New York Tribune.

Not Expected to Live.

At a late hour last night the life of Mr. John Jamieson, who is lying critically ill at the Little Windsor hotel, was despaired of, and it was expected he would pass away before another sunrise. The circumstances surrounding his illness will be remembered by those who read the account of Mr. Bonault's heroism in carrying the sick man to Peterborough from the lumber camp, a distance of 40 miles.

A POINT OVERLOOKED.

Editor Times.

I have read with much pleasure your sound arguments put forth to show wherein and by whom mistakes were made in the outfall sewer matter, and although the question is becoming tiresome to some I think the ratepayers, who will have to pay for the costly litigation the matter has involved, are still interested. There is one point that has been overlooked, one mistake the Council made, one very faulty step, that has never been commented upon and I wish to call attention to it. The award that was made by the first board of arbitrators was for the town. Two of the arbitrators on that board were strongly in favor of the sewer going into the river. The award, on account of defects, which you have ably and clearly pointed out, was referred back to these same arbitrators. Now, the township authorities knew full well that they had nothing to hope for from those arbitrators; and do you think, Mr. Editor, that they would have agreed to a second arbitration if the same arbitrators were to constitute the board? No, sir, they would not, but, rather than do so, would have settled the matter some other way. That is where the town had the township in a corner, but very foolishly the town did not realize this advantage, and agreed to appoint an outside arbitration. This let the township out of a bad position and brought on the last costly arbitration.

ABOUT POLICE PROTECTION.

Editor Times:

We have three able bodied policemen and an able-bodied chief, who are receiving fat salaries, for what? I will tell you. One of them sits in the police station and smokes while the other parades George street from Brock to Charlotte, for two hours, turn about. The chief does nothing at all but superintend his three subordinates, who practically do nothing either. At night George street is protected by two policemen and a night watchman, while the rest of the town is at the mercy of of thieves and other midnight marauders. From the number of robberies that have taken place lately, evidently the criminal class are "on to" the meagre police protection the town has. If these four men are to be employed at all—and I am of the opinion that two would be sufficient—why are they not required to parade the residential portion of the town? I sincerely trust that the next council will attend to the police department.

SCARED THE TRAMP.

How an Omemee Lady Got Rid of an Unwelcome Visitor.

A lady from Omemee, who is visiting in town, tells of the experience of a neighbor of hers, which occurred several days ago.

The woman's husband was away, and she was alone in the kitchen doing house work, when a vicious looking tramp walked boldly in and coolly took a seat, while he made a general survey of the situation with his eyes.

He was asked his business and ordered out, but rising from his seat he approached the poor woman, who was becoming badly frightened. She made a spring towards a sideboard upon which was lying a large butcher knife, and picking it up, faced the tramp, and asked:

"Did any one see you come in?"

"No," replied the brute, "I took good care not to be seen."

With the knife uplifted, the plucky woman took a step towards him and exclaimed: "Well, I'll take care that nobody sees you go out."

The tramp immediately bolted out of the door.

This, I think, covers the information you wanted.

Yours very truly,
S. R. ARMSTRONG,

Made no Confession.

It will be remembered that in November 1893, a Mrs. Mary Cron, a lady residing at Whitby, was murdered at Wilmette, a suburb of Chicago, where she was visiting her son-in-law, Frank Wheeler, an Englishman, formerly residing in Toronto. Mrs. Wheeler was away from home at the time, and Wheeler awoke one night to find the house in flames and two men carrying a trunk out of doors. He shot and killed one the men, and chased the other a mile over the prairie, returning to find the house burned almost to the ground. The body Mrs. Cron, burned to a crisp, was taken from the ruins. The second robber was identified as Charles F. Goodrich, a lad, who was arrested sometime afterwards and sentenced in April last to five years in the penitentiary as accessory to the murder. The sentence was subsequently changed to imprisonment in the Reform School at Pontiac, Ill., on account of Goodrich's youth, at which institution the boy died on Friday last. To the last a confession or statement of some kind in regard to the murder was looked for, but in vain.

Councillor Best in the Field.

Owing to a typographical error the name of Mr. H. Best was omitted from the list of candidates for Ward One published in yesterday's TIMES, and the impression became general over town that he would not run. Such is not the case. Mr. Best is a candidate for the Council and will doubtless pull a large vote in his ward. He has in the past been a capable and useful councillor and his usefulness in the interest of the town is by no means ended.

The C.N. & P. Railway.

Mr. W. W. Armstrong, of Campbellford, a few days ago received a letter from Mr. G. Gaillet, M.P., Cobourg, Sec'y-Treas. of the C.N. & P. Railway Company, informing him that a meeting of Directors of the road would be held at Cobourg on Tuesday next 8th of January, and notifying him to attend. Mr. Gaillet also stated that "Mr. Bowels, the contractor, had advised Mr. Cameron, the President, that his syndicate have completed arrangements, and will at once put up the $10,000 deposit as soon as approval of contract is signified to them." The C.N. & P. Railway crops up at each approaching Dominion election.

A Bold Burglar.

An unknown person entered the residence of Mr. J. W. Brisbin shortly after midnight yesterday. Miss Brisbin heard the noise and awakened Mr. Brisbin, who hurriedly dressed himself, secured a revolver and started to investigate. In the meantime Miss Brisbin had gone to the head of the stairway in time to see a man leave by the front entrance. When Mr. Brisbin reached the street no trace of the intruder was visible. The police were notified and the Chief, who resides next to Mr. Brisbin's, headed an investigation. Evidence was plentiful to show that the man had been in the house for some time. Mr. Brisbin's large ulster was found on the floor loaded down with silverware. Not content with this the thief had made a partial inspection of the bedrooms, when he was frightened off by Miss Brisbin's calling to her father. No clue of who the man is or his whereabouts are known to police.

Refunded the Money.

At the performance on Wednesday night six well-known gentlemen purchased reserved seat tickets and entered the opera house but couldn't find any seats. They took standing positions under the gallery until approached by one of the employees of the house, who asked them if they would occupy one of the boxes. They accepted the offer with thanks, and were admitted after the employee had got the box key from the box office. When they had been seated a short time, the manager of the Company entered the box and asked them to pay [illegible] cents for the seats. The gentlemen refused to do this, and asked to be shown to the reserved seats for which they had paid. The manager replied that all the seats were taken. The gentlemen then demanded that the money paid for the tickets be refunded and they would leave. This was done, and they left the opera house. These are the facts of an unpleasant incident which has been differently reported around town, making it appear that the gentlemen in question were trying to get ahead of the Company.

ATTEMPTED TO SUICIDE.

A YOUNG GIRL TRIES TO TAKE HER LIFE AT THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY STATION.

Swallows a Dose of Chloroform in the Waiting Room and is Discovered in a Stupor by the Station Agent—The Rash Act of a Port Hope Girl.

There was an attempt made to commit suicide at the Grand Trunk station last night.

About 7.30 o'clock a young girl, about 17 years of age, entered the ladies' waiting room and took a seat. She was dressed in black, and as there was nothing to indicate in her actions that she was there for any other purpose than to await the arrival of a train, no particular attention was paid to her.

About 15 minutes later Station Agent Hayden detected a peculiar odor issuing out of the waiting room, and he entered it to find out the cause. The first thing he saw was the young woman stretched half-way across the seats while in one hand she grasped a small glass phial, which she held to her lips. He immediately rushed to her, snatched the bottle and endeavored to find out what was the matter. The girl seemed to be in a sort of stupor, and it did not take the agent many seconds to arrive at the conclusion that she had swallowed some drug. He immediately telephoned for Dr. King.

The latter arrived in a few moments and took in the situation at a glance. He examined the small bottle and found that it contained chloroform. From the quantity that still remained in the bottle he did not think the girl had taken enough to result fatally. He then went to work and brought her out of the stupor she was in.

Dr. King tried to elicit from the girl why she had tried to end her life, but she refused to say a word, and buried her face in her hands and sobbed piteously. When Police Officers Adams and Stewart arrived they recognized her as a young girl who had been working around some of the hotels in Peterborough for the past six months. Her name, they said was Morrison. When the girl heard this, she admitted that it was right, and evinced a willingness to talk.

From all that can be learned, the girl is from Port Hope. Some time ago her parents died and she went to live with the family of Mr. Dingwell, a brother-in-law of her uncle's whose name is Adams, and who is a very respectable resident of Port Hope. According to the girl's story, about six months ago, her uncle took her to task for staying out late at night, and offended by his upbraidings, she ran away and came to Peterborough. Since she has been here, she has lead a sort of precarious existence, working at several hotels and picking up a scanty livlihood as best she could.

The story she told the police when removed to the police station, implicates several young men of the town, and also a married man. First of all she said she had tried to take her life because she had been betrayed. According to her story the first day she arrived in Peterborough, she secured a boarding place, and was shown to her room by the man of the house. She says he entered the room with her, locked the door, and despite her cries and objections worked her ruin.

This may be true or it may not be, but the police know enough to seriously implicate a number of young men, who, if all is true that is reported, have hounded the girl hourly since her arrival in town, subjecting her to the most outrageous treatment.

The girl is well connected in Port Hope, and some of her relatives have been in Peterborough searching for her. The police telephoned to them last night and it is expected they will arrive today.

The girl spent the night at the police station, where she was taken care of. Some disposition of her case will be made today.

THE PREMIER'S CONDITION.

There Was No Foundation for the Report that He Was Seriously Ill.

A bulletin from Halifax yesterday which was published in the evening papers, conveying the impression that Premier Mackenzie Bowell was at the point of death, created the greatest excitement throughout the town, and many were the expressions of sorrow heard. The bulletin read:

HALIFAX, Jan. 3.—Mackenzie Bowell, the new Premier, is seriously ill and his recovery is doubtful.

At 6 o'clock [illegible] received the following bulletin, which will relieve the anxiety felt by the Premier's many ardent admirers and friends.

HALIFAX, Jan. 3, 6.30 p.m.—There is no foundation for reports of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's condition. He had a severe attack of coughing early this morning but is decidedly better this evening, and was able to see one or two friends. He remained in bed today till midday but is now up and much better and quite cheerful. There was never any cause for alarm."

The Poultry and Pet Stock Association of the County of Northumberland hold their annual exhibition in the opera house, Colborne, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 24, 25, 26, when the best and largest display in its history is expected.

It was reported last night that some of the members of last year's Council, who are candidates for re-election, will withdraw from the contest, and leave the field clear for the "new blood." The report was told to one of the Councillors last night, who replied that it was very probable such would be the case.

Third Annual

WHITE GOODS SALE

You and we can remember when January was stupidly dull and midwinter trade extremely quiet. There seemed no remedy for it then, but there is now. The enterprise that makes ocean greyhounds and lightning express trains has been revolutionizing storekeeping. We not only ignore the wholesaler in buying our goods, but we undersell him in many things. In like way we anticipate needs, stimulate demand and encourage trade in stocks that formerly were very limited. The result is CONSTANT ACTIVITY from January to December and the constant development of this new idea.

THE WHITE GOODS SALE of last year and the year before was a source of wonder and astonishment to very many shoppers. How, in the name of business, perfectly new goods could sell for less than they usually cost to make, was a conundrum. Most people were satisfied to buy without being able to solve the problem, and the sales were enormously big. Now we're ready to discount the past at every point with values that will surprise salespeople as well as shoppers; merchants as well as manufacturers.

The simple fact of the matter is we anticipated this sale WEEKS AGO, planned for it, used ready cash to unusual advantage, and turned the experience of the past into a betterment. What we want to emphasize is that these goods are PERFECTLY NEW and the qualities absolutely reliable. All prices are marked in plain figures, and out-of-town customers can order by mail as satisfactorily as shopping in person. Here are the facts.

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY. Figure out the usual cost of material and the usual cost of making and see where we stand. Present prices are THE LOWEST EVER QUOTED for goods of equal quality. As a matter of course, other stores will follow in our footsteps and much trash will be offered at a so-called "sacrifice," but that isn't what you want. Nothing but the closest figuring, the shrewdest management and biggest possible outlet will allow any store to sell at our prices, and in announcing the programme for this month we're confident of success and proud of the achievement which makes success possible.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

RUINED BY EARTHQUAKE.

HOUSES SHAKEN TO SPLINTERS AND MANY LIVES LOST.

London Churches Pillaged by Vandals—An Accident to Mr. Gladstone—France in Madagascar—Foreign Cables.

PANAMA, Jan. 4.—The correspondent of the Star and Herald at Quito writes under date of Nov. 27: An earthquake today lasting 27 seconds did great damage. [illegible] Church was destroyed. Fourteen bodies have been taken from the ruins. Many persons were killed and injured. The government is sending aid. Reports say the earthquake at San Juan and Rio Ja in the Argentine Republic still continue to come in. In Rio Ja the inhabitants are principally engaged in pulling down houses that are in a dangerous condition and in removing the debris. For some days after the earthquake the heat was intense, and was enveloped in a cloud of dust. During the greatest of the shocks, pieces of furniture danced and leaped about as if a demon had possession of them. It was like the rolling of ships at sea in a heavy swell. The dust clouds darkened the air and cries and lamentations were heard on all sides. In the confusion members of the same family became separated and it was a long time before they were united. Nearly all the houses tumbled down. Those that remained standing have their walls or roofs badly shaken.

THE RUINED SITE

In the city of San Juan the wine deposits were smashed, casks burst and the liquid flowed in torrents through the streets. All who had the means fled from the city and the farm houses in the departments that suffered the least are crowded with fugitives.

New springs have opened up and streams of water have suddenly been found. Of the [illegible] houses in St. Juan 436 are reduced to heaps of ruins and others are more or less injured, many beyond repairs. There are not 20 houses in the city intact.

PILLAGED BY VANDALS.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Every day brings to light further depredations of the gang of vandals who villaged the city churches during the last few days. The latest church to be heard from is that of St. John the Evangelist in the north end. Unlike the six occurrences already chronicled, the latest occurred this week on New Year's night. The church was entered during the temporary absence of the sexton. The thieves secured the poor box, and by shaking it they managed to work the hole in the lid. There is reason to believe that it contained a considerable sum.

DREYFUS DISGRACE.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Capt. Albert Dreyfus, who was recently condemned to degradation and life imprisonment for selling government secrets, will be degraded of his military rank and title on Jan. 5.

ACCIDENT TO MR. GLADSTONE.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Last week, fortunately without lasting results, Mr. Gladstone tumbled over an open drawer, cut his forehead, broke his spectacles and was unable to work for several days. It was at first feared some particles of glass had lodged in his eyes, but these conjectures were groundless.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone will leave England for Cannes, where they will be the guests of Lord Rendel.

FRANCE IN MADAGASCAR.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—A cabinet council was held in the palace of the Elysee today at which M. Hanotaux, Minister of foreign affairs, laid before the ministers a protest from the Premier of the Hova government against the occupation of Tamative by the French, which the premier declared was a violation of the treaty between France and Madagascar. A despatch was also read from Commander Bienaime stating that the Hovas had murdered an English trader near Tamative and informing the government of his intention to declare a state of seige at Diego Suarez.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

TWO MORE EX-ALDERMEN PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Judge McDougall's Report Bears Fruit—That Green Goods Case—An Italian Uses a Knife—The Day's News.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Judge McDougall's report on the result of the late investigation into civic affairs has already borne fruit. It was handed in last evening to Mayor Kennedy, and within an hour afterwards two of the implicated parties were under arrest. They were ex-Ald. J. E. Verral and ex-Ald. Maloney.

The warrants for these gentlemen were issued on Dec. 28th, but not placed in the detective's hands until last evening. Detective Verney brought both his prisoners to No. 6 station, where they were subsequently released on bail of $4,000. Mr. Verral's bondsmen were W. H. Bay and Richard Jones, and Mr. Maloney's John J. Ward and J. F. Connolly.

Mr. Maloney is accused of accepting $1,000 from Fred Coleman to induce him to vote in favor of the change in the Street Railway agreement. The charge against Verral is of corruptly approaching Otto Guelich, threatening that unless he and other aldermen were paid $15,000 Guelich would lose the paving contract.

Warrants were also issued for the arrest of Messrs. Hewitt and Hall, but they are beyond the jurisdiction and cannot be brought back.

The two defendants John E. Verral and John Maloney, were arraigned in the police court this morning, and through their counsel, Hon. Mr. Blake and Mr. F. E. Hodgins, pleaded "not guilty." The Crown was not ready to go on, and both defendants were remanded for a week, their bonds being renewed.

In the case of Ex-Ald. W. T. Stewart, the Crown was also not prepared to proceed on account of Mr. Wright being absent from the city. The defendant was again remanded until Wednesday next, the bail being renewed.

THAT GREEN GOODS CASE.

Those who were responsible for the Christian name of Reuben W. H. Owen, of Orillia, were evidently possessed of much acumen. That individual is a proper "Rube"—as the saying is. With childlike simplicity in the Police Court this morning he told how he came all the way from his northern home on the shore of Lake Couchiching only to be swindled out of $[illegible] on the commonest of fakes—the time-worn green goods scheme.

Hank Barry, a horse dealer, played the stoolpigeon it is said and led the victim into J. O. Wood's drug store on York street where the "unknown" did the bleeding. Subsequently, however, Barry, whose exchequer had previously, so it was stated, been empty, gave eighty dollars to the cashier of the Metropole hotel for safekeeping and on getting it back the next day drove out to Unionville, where he was arrested. A. Wood, an alleged accomplice, was discharged.

The evidence for the defence will be heard on Tuesday.

AN ITALIAN IN TROUBLE.

George Dillio, an Italian with a fair command of the English language, but a better command of a glistening knife, stabbed a fellow-countryman named Egedo Christefero in the thigh some weeks ago. Dillio admitted the cutting, but said that he was defending himself from four others when it occurred. The crowd were playing cards for beer when the altercation arose.

Dillio was sent to the Central for six months.

YOUTHFUL HOUSEBREAKERS.

Frank Brown and Andrew Clarke, two young men, strangers in the city, were caught at two o'clock this morning by Police Constable Sandell (209) in the act of burglarizing the store of Thomas Bedan, No. 2 Water street. After a desperate fight he managed to secure the both of them. They were sent to the Central prison for five months by the Magistrate.

BUDGET FROM OTTAWA.

A YOUTH INJURED BY THE BURSTING OF A GUN.

Rockland Rejoicing Over the Completion of that Branch of the Central Counties Railway—Disturbed a Meeting.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—While Henry Thiviergo, aged 18, was out hunting in Mr. Kay's bush yesterday, his gun exploded. A piece of the barrel struck him on the eye, rendering him unconscious, while his hand was badly mangled. When he recovered consciousness his companions assisted him to his home on McTaggart Street and telephoned for the ambulance to take him to the Water street hospital. The ambulance driver refused to take him to the hospital, as he had walked so far with the assistance of his companions. A cab was therefore procured.

THROUGH TO ROCKLAND.

The Rockland branch of the Central Counties Railway is complete. The last rail of the track was laid at Rockland on December 31st. The people of that place are rejoiced at the completion of the enterprise, and they now look forward to a boom in agriculture and to the establishment of several industries between their village and the other terminal point, South Indian, on the line of the C. A. R. Large quantities of freight have already been taken out along the line for shipment. Traffic is expected to be opened this month.

LIVELY BUT DISORDERLY.

In the Hintonburgh town hall, on Wednesday night, there was a municipal meeting of more than usual interest. Mr. W. Masson presided. When the different candidates for councillors had spoken, a lively argument sprung up between Reeve O'Meara and Mr. Reid, his opponent for the reeveship. It was carried on until a disagreement broke out between Mr. O'Meara and Mr. D. H. McLean, in regard to the assessment of the Ottawa Land Association's property. The debate got somewhat personal, and at last the meeting dispersed in a rather disorderly way.

A WAR OF CHURCHES.

Rev. A. J. Fidler, of Whitby Hands in His Resignation.

WHITBY, Jan. 4.—A great deal of excitement has been raised over the resignation of the Rev. A. J. Fidler, rector of All Saints' church here.

The trouble is supposed to have started about ten years ago when on account of the doctrine preached by the incumbent twelve or fifteen families left the church and joined St. John's a small church at Port Whitby.

There has been, it is understood, "scrapping" between the two congregations ever since and the Bishop of Toronto was frequently appealed to. Now Mr. Fidler has resigned and what the next move will be no one knows. All Saints' will be closed on Sunday.

JOHN L. ON A JAG.

He Became Such a Nuisance That His Company Disbands.

PARIS, Ills., Jan. 4.—The John Sullivan Co. disbanded here today. Sullivan was drinking a good deal and made trouble for all with whom he came in contact. The collapse was the result of Sullivan's prolonged spree. Yesterday he cursed one of the actresses until she resigned and departed for home in Chicago. Sullivan was escorted to the opera house last night, but his condition was such that his manager John F. Ward, remonstrated with him, whereupon John L. beat Ward so badly that he had to be put to bed.

A MURDERER BY PROXY.

THE STRANGE AND UNPRECEDENTED VERDICT OF A KANSAS JURY.

A Hypnotist Found Guilty of Murder, Who Caused a Man Under His Mysterious Influence to Take Another's Life—A Strange Case.

WELLINGTON, Kan., Jan. 4.—Anderson Gray, the man whom the jury found guilty of murder in the first degree for killing Thomas Patton and whom Judge Burpett has sentenced to hang, has appealed the case to the Supreme Court for a stay of proceedings.

The case is a most interesting and extraordinary one. Thomas McDonald, while under the hypnotic influence of Gray, did the killing but was discharged after trial. Gray is a well-to-do farmer. Patton had incurred his enmity and Gray hypnotized McDonald, a farm hand, and while the latter was in that condition, compelled him to commit the murder.

Thus, for the first time in the history of Kansas jurisprudence, the theory of hypnotism has seriously entered into the trial of a case of murder. J. V. Beekman, who was the attorney to introduce the hypnotic theory, relates the extremely interesting details of the case. On the 5th day of last May, at a place near Caldwell, Sumner county, Thomas McDonald shot and killed Thomas Patton. McDonald was the tenant of Anderson Gray, a wealthy farmer, who was the neighbor of the murdered man. Gray was involved in a lawsuit in which Patton was a witness, and he had, it is alleged, a consuming desire to get the latter out of the way. It is claimed he involved young McDonald and Patton in a quarrel by reporting to McDonald that Patton was circulating scandalous reports about his wife. On the 5th of May the two men met and exchanged angry words. This was early in the morning, and Patton was to return that way at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

HYPNOTIC INFLUENCE.

At this point Gray appeared in the affair and commenced to exercise, according to the theory of J. V. Beekman, his hypnotic influence. He assured McDonald, according to the story, that Patton was a dangerous man, and that his only hope of life would be to kill him first. McDonald and his wife both rebelled at the murderous thought, but Gray, who is a man of immense will power, insisted. McDonald had never fired a gun in his life, and Gray at once procured a rifle and commenced to give him instructions. At the first shots he could not hit the mark at all, but under the mysterious spell of Gray, who was an expert shot, became able to hit the mark in the centre at every shot in less than an hour's practice.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Gray conducted McDonald to the spot in the woods where Patton must pass, and cut a crotch in which he might rest his gun. At the expected hour Patton came riding by, and an unerring bullet from McDonald's rifle reached his heart.

After a time suspicion pointed to McDonald and Gray as the murderers. They were arrested, as was also McDonald's wife. After three weeks in jail McDonald broke down and confessed all, asserting that he could not bear to see his innocent wife in confinement. But, as bearing on the hypnotic theory, it was shown on the trial that whenever McDonald got anywhere close to Gray he would deny the confession or the fact that he had ever made it.

SENTENCED TO BE HUNG.

At the opening of the Sumner county district court three weeks ago, Gray, the accessory and hypnotizer, was placed on trial first. He was quickly found guilty of murder in the degree and has since been sentenced to be hanged.

On Monday of last week McDonald was placed on trial. The case lasted the entire week and was intensely interesting because of the peculiar defence offered. Judge Beekman, for his client, freely admitted the crime, and made no attempt to soften its atrocious details. He tried the case strictly on the theory that McDonald was under the hypnotic influence of Gray, and that he had no control over his own actions. The court, in its instructions, left no dividing line between a verdict of guilty and an acceptance of the theory of hypnotism. Tonight, after three hours' deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the remarkable spectacle was presented of a principal who was innocent and an accessory who was guilty.

The sentence imposed upon Gray has attracted great attention here and in all the cities of Kansas, and local physicians are discussing the justness of the verdict. It is held by most members of the legal fraternity that a hypnotist has no power to influence a man to commit a crime which is repulsive to the controlled. They hold that if a man shrinks from committing an offense against the law, any effort of the hypnotist to force him to do the act will result in his losing power over the subject. For this reason they are inclined to believe that Gray should not have been convicted on theory of hypnotic influence. They believe, too, that an appeal to the Supreme Court will result in a reversal of the verdict. It is, all things considered, the most remarkable case in the criminal annals of Kansas, and the final outcome will be watched with a good deal of interest.

NEWFOUNDLAND CRISIS.

Government Deny Having Pledged Savings Bank Securities.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 4.—The Government deny that they pledged Savings bank securities to obtain a loan. They have farmed out the customs duties to repay the loan. They will get $100,000 in specie next week. Writs of attachment against the Government for the non-payment of amounts due have been obtained by several creditors from the Supreme court. The creditors of Mr. Duder's insolvent estate met last night to receive a statement. The liabilities are placed at $[illegible]. The assets are nominally about the same. But the estate is not expected to realize more than [illegible] on the dollar. The Supreme Court has issued a writ against the Commercial bank, at the instance of the Savings bank. The Commercial bank is now in the charge of bailiffs. The steamer Virginia Lake will take [illegible] barrels of flour northward to relieve distress along the coast.

The building and contents are a total loss. The former was insured in the Royal and the latter in the Aetna for $1,[illegible]. Mr. McCargar, who has been ill for some days, was almost overcome by the smoke and exertion of saving his property and is now prostrated.

MY BOB SLED.

Made it all myself, you see; it wasn't much for fine.
Fellers all begun to laugh at that old sled uv mine,
When they see me climbing up their hill we used to slide
A-draggin' it along behin', already for a ride.
Then they shouted so [illegible] like: "Say, Jimmie, what is it?"
Didn't feel like sayin' much, so tended to my biz:
Jes' let 'em keep on laughin' an' a-tauntin' me until
I squared my old bob sled around for my first slide down ther hill

The runners was of hickory, and the top was made uv oak,
When I got her finished; wa'n't no part to be broke,
But the other fellers' sleds were all so [illegible] up, slick an' fine,
Kinder knocked the spots all off that home-made one uv mine;
The bottoms was so slippery, an' polished up so bright,
Was ready to bet she'd go ahead uv everythin' in sight;
But I never answered back a word, an' was mighty quiet, till
I laid right down an' hugged her tight, fer my first run down ther hill.

Didn't have a mite uv paint on bottom sides or top;
Knew if she once got started, though, 'twould be mighty hard to stop.
'Twas [illegible] stuff she was made uv, an' jus' ther shape for speed,
Might keep a-pokin' lots uv fun, I know she'd take ther lead.
There was Clipper, Comet, Reindeer, an' Dasher there an' Dart,
All lined up on ther hillside and ready for the start,
My old bob sled didn't have no name, I'se bound she shouldn't till
I found out which would suit her best, by my first slide down ther hill

An' then we shouted: One, two, three an' altogether, Go!
Gee whiz! The way that bob sled flew was anythin' but slow:
She shot ahead like a rocket that's got lots uv powder behind;
None uv the rest was in it, when you [illegible] up ther hill.
She beat 'em like a thorough-bred, if she did look like a scrub,
'Twas my turn now to laugh an' shout "Gimme yer hands to rub."
"Say, Jimmie, won't yer let us ride?" and I said: "Course I will."
For they owned my bob sled beat them all, a-slidin' down ther hill.

Were They the Buncoes.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Hugh Barry and Arthur F. Wood, supposed to be implicated in the "green goods" deal in which Walter H. Orser lost $100 in a York street drug store, came up in the Police Court and were remanded until Friday. Bail was granted Wood, but refused Barry.

A POINT OVERLOOKED

Editor Times.

I have read with much pleasure your sound arguments put forth to show wherein and by whom mistakes were made in the outfall sewer matter, and although the question is becoming tiresome to some I think the ratepayers, who will have to pay for the costly litigation the matter has involved, are still interested. There is one point that has been overlooked, one mistake the Council made, one very faulty step, that has never been commented upon and I wish to call attention to it. The award that was made by the first board of arbitrators was for the town. Two of the arbitrators on that board were strongly in favor of the sewer going into the river. The award, on account of defects, which you have ably and clearly pointed out, was referred back to these same arbitrators. Now, the township authorities knew full well that they had nothing to hope for from these arbitrators; and do you think, Mr. Editor, that they would have agreed to a second arbitration if the same arbitrators were to constitute the board? No, sir, they would not, but, rather than do so, would have settled the matter some other way. That is where the town had the township in a corner, but very foolishly the town did not realize this advantage, and agreed to appoint an outside arbitration. This let the township out of a bad position and brought on the last costly arbitration.

RATEPAYER.

ABOUT POLICE PROTECTION.

Editor Times:

We have three able bodied policemen and an able-bodied chief, who are receiving fat salaries, for what? I will tell you. One of them sits in the police station and smokes while the other parades George street from Brock to Charlotte, for two hours, turn about. The chief does nothing at all but superintend his three subordinates, who practically do nothing either. At night George street is protected by two policemen and a night watchman, while the rest of the town is at the mercy of of thieves and other midnight marauders. From the number of robberies that have taken place lately, evidently the criminal class are "on to" the meagre police protection the town had. If these four men are to be employed at all—and I am of the opinion that two would be sufficient—why are they not required to parole the residential portion of the town? I sincerely trust that the next council will attend to the police department.

A RESIDENT.

A Street Car Collision.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 2.—As Nicholas Wagner, an expressman, was driving home with his son Willie, aged nine years, and a hired man named Stielke, he collided with a Broadway car running at a high rate of speed. The boy was instantly killed, as was the horse. Wagner sustained a severe fracture of the skull. Stielke was badly cut about the head and injured, it is thought, fatally. The motorman and conductor were arrested.

THE SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, OF CANADA

From the TRADE BULLETIN, Montreal,

The report of the business of this leading Life Insurance Company of Canada for the past year may well be a source of gratification alike to the shareholders and the assured, the accession to its business during the year exceeding even the phenomenally large increase of the year previous. The marvellous growth and success of the Sun Life is due to the absolute security which it guarantees the insured, the prompt settlement of all its claims and the generous treatment which it invariably pursues towards its policy-holders, even in cases where quibbles might be taken advantage of for the purpose of deferring or even shirking the payment of claims. Instances have come to our knowledge in which the Sun Life could have well stood out against meeting certain claims in conjunction with other companies; but no! it preferred to take a more magnanimous and charitable view of what were said to be suspicious circumstances, and paid the full amount which the policy called for without a day's demur. The phenomenal success therefore which continues to attend the onward march of this deserving home life assurance company is well merited.

THE BODY AT HALIFAX.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. BLENHEIM AT THE PREMIER'S NATIVE CITY.

Thousands View the Chamber Where the Late Premier's Remains Lay in State—Many Floral Contributions—A Solemn Occasion.

HALIFAX, Jan. 1.—At 10.45 this morning the minute guns announced the arrival of the Blenheim in Port. At 12 o'clock the ship dropped anchor opposite the ordnance yard.

The two sons of the late Premier and a number of intimate friends went on board, accompanied by Rev. Father Murphy, who read the libra and accompanying prayers beside the body. Only the two sons of the dead were present at this brief service.

TAKEN FROM THE WARSHIP.

At half-past two the coffin was removed from the warship and placed upon a gun carriage, and, immediately after, the procession to the Parliament building started.

When the casket had been deposited in the chamber of the Provincial Building, the Governor General and Lady Aberdeen knelt side by side, and bowing their heads above the coffin, spent some minutes in prayer. The incident was most touching.

ALONE WITH HER DEAD.

In the evening the body was removed to the residence of Mr. John Pugh, in order to secure absolute privacy to Lady Thompson's audience with her dead.

The body will lie in state all day to-morrow, and the following will act as watchers in turn: Hon. Mr. Curran, Mr. White, of Shelburne, Sir Frank Smith, Mr. Stairs, Hon. T. M. Daly, T. E. Kenny, Hon. Mr. Ives, H. F. McDougall, Sir C. H. Tupper, Dr. Cameron, Dr. Kaulbach and Mr. McDougall.

VIEWING THE CASKET.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 2.—The Legislative Council chamber was open to the public at 9 o'clock this morning and notwithstanding the cold snap which succeeded yesterday's storm, the approach to the building has been crowded with people all the forenoon, patiently waiting their turn to get in. Ten thousand people have already viewed the casket this morning and from appearances double that number will visit the lying-in chamber this afternoon.

THE CITY CROWDED.

The city is already crowded with visitors from all parts of the country. Last night Governor Howlan, Chief Justice Sullivan, Bishop McDonald, Senator Ferguson and fifty others arrived from Prince Edward Island. All the Senators and members of Parliament of the Lower Provinces are here. Hon. Messrs. Foster, Costigan and others arrived on a heavily laden special train this morning.

The lying-in chamber presents a gorgeous appearance. No finer chamber for the purpose could be found in Canada. It is exquisitely draped and the floral tributes are simply superb and greater in number and more beautiful in design than those given at the death of Sir John Macdonald.

ANOTHER FROM THE QUEEN.

The number was added to at noon by the unpacking of another magnificent wreath from the Queen. It is oval in design, is five feet in diameter, and composed of holly white flowers and sago palm. There were also wreaths from the Marquis of Ripon, the staff of the Colonial Office and others.

BIG MEN IN SPAIN.

They Are Scarce Among the Natives and Are Much Admired.

"There is no place where a man's size will increase his importance in the eyes of the people more than in Spain," said William H. Graham. "The Spaniards, as a race, being an undersized people, a large man, well developed physically, is looked upon as being some important, extraordinary being. So, while I was traveling in Europe with Colonel Stone, we passed through England with but little notice being taken of us. When we got to Spain, however, our party, thanks to the stalwart physique of the colonel, was the cynosure of all eyes. When we walked down the street, a crowd would follow us, pointing at the colonel in wonderment and admiration, until the gallant congressman thought his proper place was on the boards of a Spanish dime museum. One day, while on a fatiguing journey, we stopped at a way station. Like travelers will do, we left our compartment to stretch our legs in a little walk up and down the platform of the station. There was quite a crowd gathered, evidently to see the departure of a bride and a groom, who were in the center of an admiring circle of friends. As we walked up and down we noticed that the attention of the crowd was gradually diverted from the loving couple in the center, and the people began to whisper one to the other and point at the colonel taking his constitutional. I could see and hear that they were astonished at his immense stature and were wondering who this notable must be, for to the Spaniards a man could not be of such a stature and not be great.

"Just before the train was ready to pull out I thought I would play a little joke on the people, taking the cue from the remarks I heard on all sides. So leaving my friend I went to the door of the railway carriage and called in as loud a tone as possible: 'James G. Blaine, come on. The train is about to move away.' It was just about the time of the excitement over Blaine and Harrison, so I thought that the supposed presence of a celebrity such as the 'plumed knight' would arouse their enthusiasm, but they took no notice of my cry. Thinking they could not have heard, I called the same thing out again, but still no response came from the crowd. Then I remembered an incident which occurred to the colonel in Pittsburg when he interfered in a street fight there. He pulled a burly ruffian off an undersized fellow, who was being beaten terribly, and when the bully asked him who he was that dared to interfere with him the colonel remembered having seen some billboards stating John L. Sullivan was in town, so he replied boldly, 'I'm John L. Sullivan.' Immediately the crowd cheered, and the bully sneaked away.

"Remembering this incident and the success of impersonating the prizefighter in a city where he was well known, I thought I would try it in Spain, doubting, however, that a community who did not know Blaine would be able to recognize a celebrity at the other end of the line. But I yelled out, 'John L. Sullivan, you had better hurry.' I had scarcely uttered the name when the whole crowd began to put up their fists and made a rush for the innocent colonel. They would have torn his clothes off in their enthusiasm and admiration of what they evidently thought a master man had the ringing of the bell not given us warning that the train was ready, and with difficulty we pushed our way through the yelling, boisterous crowd to our carriage.

"The bridal party and the purpose of the crowd's visit were lost in the excitement, and as our train drew out we could hear the cheering of the excited people far behind us. So it can in truth be said that Colonel Stone has appeared with great success as John L. Sullivan on both continents."—Boston Transcript.

SCARED THE TRAMP.

How an Omemee Lady Got Rid of an Unwelcome Visitor.

A lady from Omemee, who is visiting in town, tells of the experience of a neighbor of hers, which occurred several days ago.

The woman's husband was away, and she was alone in the kitchen doing house work, when a vicious looking tramp walked boldly in and coolly took a seat, while he made a general survey of the situation with his eyes.

He was asked his business and ordered out, but rising from his seat he approached the poor woman, who was becoming badly frightened. She made a spring towards a sideboard upon which was lying a large butcher knife, and picking it up, faced the tramp, and asked:

"Did any one see you come in?"

"No," replied the brute, "I took good care not to be seen."

With the knife uplifted, the plucky woman took a step towards him and exclaimed: "Well, I'll take care that nobody sees you go out."

The tramp immediately bolted out of the door.

Made no Confession.

It will be remembered that in November 1893, a Mrs. Mary Cron, a lady residing at Whitby, was murdered at Wilmette, a suburb of Chicago, where she was visiting her son-in-law, Frank Wheeler, an Englishman, formerly residing in Toronto. Mrs. Wheeler was away from home at the time, and Wheeler awoke one night to find the house in flames and two men carrying a trunk out of doors. He shot and killed one the men, and chased the other a mile over the prairie, returning to find the house burned almost to the ground. The body Mrs. Cron, burned to a crisp, was taken from the ruins. The second robber was identified as Charles F. Goodrich, a lad, who was arrested sometime afterwards and sentenced in April last to five years in the penitentiary as accessory to the murder. The sentence was subsequently changed to imprisonment in the Reform School at Pontiac, Ill., on account of Goodrich's youth, at which institution the boy died on Friday last. To the last a confession or statement of some kind in regard to the murder was looked for, but in vain.

The Middlemarch Murder.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 3.—Tomorrow the examination of Hendershott and Welter for the alleged murder of the former's nephew will commence before the Police Magistrate here. A large number of witnesses have been subpoenaed, and the case will last at least two or three days. To expedite proceedings, the Attorney-General was requested to send up a stenographer, and has complied. Nelson Butcher, of Toronto, will record the evidence.

A Murderer Escapes.

PERRY, O.T., Jan. 3.—John Milligan, the double murderer who is under sentence to be hanged Jan. 11, and who escaped a month ago, was recaptured last night, jumped through a glass door and escaped to the east. Hundreds of men are in pursuit. Milligan was bare headed, bare footed and in his shirt sleeves. There is two inches of snow on the ground.

Stage Driven Off.

TILSONBURG, Jan. 3.—The Ingersoll and Port Burwell stage was driven off last night while the driver had left it for a few minutes to deliver mails at Griffin's Corners. It was supposed to be stolen, but this morning was found at Mr. M. Purdy's, near Corinth, by Chief Pow of Tilsonburg. The mail and express had not been disturbed.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 5, 1895.

Good morning!

Now, then, pick your favorites for the Council of 1895.

To be a good Councillor it is not necessary to be either a teetotaller or a drunkard.

Out of the Candidates nominated on Monday a fairly good Council can be chosen.

"Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K. C. M. G., looks well in print, but it won't do for common use. We'll have to call him "Sir Mac."

John Burns is hoarse from much speaking. His hoarseness is but one of the many indications of the fact that Mr. Burns has been talking too much.

Winter may have been a bit late in jumping through the hoop, but now that she has finally arrived she is laying herself out to make up for lost time.

Mackenzie Bowell must be a weather prophet. If he had no knowledge of the cold snap, how did he come to rig his Cabinet up in a flannel shirt and a Dickey?

According to the latest and most authentic reports—made by the candidates themselves—there will be 41 aldermen and two mayors in Hamilton this year.

In China Li Hung Chang's name is pronounced Lee Hung Chang. If the gentleman does not keep a watchfull eye on himself he will wake up some of these fine mornings to hear himself spoken of as the late Hung Chang.

Carnegie has again reduced wages, but the warning of the Pullman strike was not lost upon him, for he reduced the rents of his employes at the same time.

Cutting down the licenses was about the silliest thing done by the Council of 1894. It accomplished nothing in the direction of temperance, and deprived the town of a large revenue. The new Council will do well to rescind that by-law.

Li Hung Chang's cup of woe is full to the brim. He has now been deprived of the command of the Chinese forces, but he may take cheer from the fact that his successor wishes to give up the task after only a few days in office.

During the last official year nearly half of the total number of commitments in the prohibition state of Maine were commitments for drunkenness. The exact figures are: Total commitments, 6,176; commitments for drunkeness, 2,808. It is quite evident that prohibition does not prohibit, at least in Maine.

A shepherd who can tell from seeing a patient's hair what his disease is and whose cures are miraculous, attracts hundreds of people daily to the village of Radbruch, near Harburg, in Germany. To protect his own health he refused to see more than a fixed number daily, who must hold tickets which were distributed by the local constable, till a firm of speculators bought them all and sold them for high prices. The police authorities are investigating the matter.

Sir Henry Acland, Bart., Regius professor of medicine at Oxford, who accompanied the Prince of Wales in his visit to America in 1860, has sent in his resignation, to take effect at the end of the year, when he will be 80 and will have served the university 50 years. He was appointed reader in anatomy in 1845, Radcliffe's librarian in 1851, Regius professor in 1858, and was created a baronet in 1890. He is the uncle of the Right Hon. Arthur H. Dyke-Acland, Lord Rosebery's Minister of Education.

There is a "whole" milk treatment as well as a skim milk cure, and an advocate of the former says that a patient requires from five to six quarts daily while confined to the bed, and from one to four quarts more when working. To digest all this, free action of the skin, lungs and other organs must be secured by daily warm baths and an unlimited supply of fresh air night and day. Under this treatment the heart quickens, and the alimenary canal enlarges and its glands increase in size and number, and the arteries enlarge and furnish to all parts of the body an increased supply of blood. A patient with a supposed mortal disease was cured under this treatment between July 15 and Oct. 28, and during that time increased in weight from 106 pounds to 129 pounds 14 ounces.

The efficiency of the British Navy is not measured alone by its ironclads and guns. Other factors not less important are its perfect system and the scrupulous fidelity of officers and men in obeying orders. These latter characteristics are well illustrated in the arrival of the cruiser Blenheim at Halifax with the body of Sir John Thompson. Captain Poe received instructions when he sailed from Portsmouth, to arrive at Halifax at noon on Jan. 1, and to a minute the great warship cast anchor in Halifax harbor at the appointed time. This capacity of "getting there" on time has done much to make Britain mistress of the seas.

The Japanese armies in China are likely to find in King Winter a more awkward impediment than the Chinese Emperor was able to throw in their way. Cold, snow and bad roads can break the spirit of the best soldiers, and all are to be met with in the district of China the invaders now occupy. Reports have it that China will use the breathing spell thus given her to talk peace and prepare for war. This would be bad faith, but Chinalike. It is doubtful, though, if the Pekin Government, by pursuing such a policy, can accomplish much. It has immense resources in men, but has no apparent means in arousing them to the imminence of the danger that menaces their country.

UNWELCOME DISCOVERIES.

Modern science has made many a wonderful discovery, but unfortunaty not all its discoveries are welcome. It has revealed the beautiful processes of nature, but it has also revealed her destroying agencies. The more closely man has studied, the more complicated has he found conditions and the more dangers has he recognised. Where all is outwardly lovely, he has found inward harm. The microscope has disclosed minute horrors, none the less horrible because minute. The telescope, as it sweeps the heavens, with its far-seeing eye, has foretold stupendous catastrophes. Much that was thought beneficial has been proved dangerous, and much that was thought harmless has been proved fatal. It has been been demonstrated that hand in hand with benefits stalk injuries. Great good is always attended by satellites of little evils.

Years ago people lived in calm confidence that whatever is, is right. They had faith in all things. To-day people have faith in nothing. They are like pilgrims walking the valley of the shadow of death, feeling thick about them horors they could not see. They have learned that the very air, once considered a life-giving necter is peopled with ferocious microbes seeking whom they may devour. They imagine their insidious enemies perched on restaurant chairs, sitting atilt on the passing coin, flying from shoulder to shoulder in the jostling crowd. They have learned that the water they drink swarms with life and carries germs of dread disease. They have learned that one article of food is bad for the nerves, another heats the blood, another is hard to digest, and so on through all known menus. They have learned that imperfect sanitation and ventilation endanger health, and that proper conditions are, moreover, very rarely attained. Nor is it in everyday affairs alone that science has pointed out the dangers that await man. Through all the realm of human interest it has conjured up evils. Its warning cry runs the gamut of calamities from the danger of not exercising enough up to the danger of race multiplying too fast for the earth to support it and the equally danger of the earth flying from its orbit and rushing into the warm embrace of the sun.

Sensitive souls are reduced to a state of abject terror when they think of the small chance a man has for life, health and prosperity, in the face of these ogres of science. What shall they eat, wherewithal shall they be clothed, what can they in safety do, when in all things lurk death and disaster? They dare not indulge their pet weakness for coffee. They eschew their favorite dainties. They fear to come in contact with their fellows or to touch the railing, counter, or car strap, touch by all sorts and conditions of men. They fear contagion in the doctor's office and blood poisoning from his knife. They fear a thousand things in daily life. Meanwhile they still live.

Certainly science has evolved much truth, and its warnings are worth the heeding. But the warning of science, like all other advice, should be referred to a judicious committee on common sense. It should be remembered that doctors sometimes disagree, and the verdict of one authority, or a half a dozen is not necessarily the verdict of science. Moreover, a truth may be too sweepingly applied. Circumstances and individuals differ, and what will hold good in one case needs modification in another. It seems to the hardened and incredulous that if life be really so beset with danger, it is passing strange that generation after generation should have lived and thrived in their midst, and this also without a knowledge of their existence. If our ancestors, knowing nothing of the wonderful discoveries of hidden evil, managed to avoid the pitfalls, why not we? Does mere knowledge of danger make one more susceptible to its effects? Where is the wisdom that should accompany increasing knowledge? Natural living and confidence in nature are the best safeguard against such evils. Common sence is the best disinfectants and work the best of remedies.

TRINITY CHURCH SCANDAL.

If reports printed in the New York papers are true, a startling condition of affairs has been brought to light by the investigation of the tenement houses owned by Trinity Church Corporation of New York. In fact, the statements amount to a scandal. Trinity Church, it is claimed, owns 336 houses occupied as tenements, making it one of the greatest landlords of New York, and complaints have been made to the Board of Health against one-third of these houses in the last three years. Inspectors have recently been at work upon them, and their reports warrant the conclusion that some of the houses are among the worst tenement in New York. Reeking odors from overflowing sewers and closets are generally found, and many of the buildings have unsafe walls and dangerous banisters. Out of 200 complaints in three years the inspectors found that in only 40 cases were the nuisances abated. It appears that these tenements are not very large buildings, and are mostly old structures made over into dwellings for not more than three families each. In six out of nine houses in one short street there have been 25 deaths in three years from zymotic diseases. Eight of these houses have been complained of to the authorities; some of them repeatedly. No deaths occurred in the one against which no complaint was made. The Health inspector reported against 32 of the houses in one day, and the condition of nearly everyone was described as revolting.

If these statements, gathered from the reports are true, the machinery of the Trinity Church corporation has evidently been grinding out of its prosperity the greatest possible revenue to be expended upon churches, missions and charities. Such apparent indifference to the sufferings of those from whom the revenue was largely derived could not be excused, but there is reason for hope, if it exists, that there will soon be a revolution in the care of the Trinity property. Considerations of humanity as well as religion would demand it.

Trinity is the rich and fashionable church in New York whose ushers a couple of years ago refused a poorly clad man admittance to the service, and then excused themselves by saying "If Christ come as you are, the stewards of Trinity would turn Him out of their church."

SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

Out of 50 burials in one of the city cemeteries for the present month no less than 22—or, almost half—were children.

There is, however nothing singular in this fact. There were 67,688 deaths in all Canada in 1891 and nearly 32,000 of these occurred below ten years of age.

But such a shockingly high rate of infantile mortality is nevertheless a disgrace to our civilization. The greater part of it is due to preventible causes and chief among these is the lack of knowledge concerning the requirements of infants. If all mothers were properly trained there would be a greater reduction in the death rate in Ontario than has resulted from the practical elimination of small-pox and cholera.

WITH THE SPORTS.

Curlers Meet in the Lindsay-Peterboro' Cup Competition.

The ice at the skating rink was in splendid condition yesterday afternoon when the curling matches for the Lindsay-Peterborough cup began. Two Lindsay rinks drove to Peterborough in the morning with Skips J. D. Flavelle and W. McLennan, while at noon Skips Kells and Attrill went to Lindsay to contest with two rinks there.

Quite a crowd witnessed the playing of the curlers here, which was spirited and enthusiastic. Skips Flavelle and Ray, both veterans of the sport, measured their prowess, while Skip J. H. Connal was matched with Skip McLennan.

Lindsay won the first rink contest by 2 points, but Peterborough in the second rink made up for this defeat by vanquishing their opponents by 4 points. The rinks and scores are:

THERESE MORRISON IN COURT.

She Consents to Go Home with Relatives and Is Allowed to Do So.

On the first train from Port Hope yesterday morning Mrs. Dingwell and Mrs. Cochrane, both aunts of young Therese Morrison, the 17 year-old girl who tried to take her life at the G. T. R. station on Thursday night, arrived in Peterborough in answer to the message telephoned them by the Chief.

Before the Police Court opened, the girl evinced her readiness to return to Port Hope and accept the home which was extended her by both Mrs. Dingwell and Mrs. Cochrane. In the Police Court, which was held with closed doors, the young girl told the Magistrate she was willing to swear to the story she had told the Chief. Upon expressing her willingness to return to Port Hope, she was turned over to her relatives, and the trio left on the noon train. The Magistrate did not administer a lecture, stating that the fact of the girl attempting her life was evidence that she still possessed a conscience.

To the Chief the girl gave the names of several young men in town who had taken advantage of her. One of them furnished her with money upon which she had lived for the past month. She also gave the Chief the name of a well-known married man, whom, she asserted again and again, had been the cause of her downfall.

The girl's relatives refused to believe her story, stating that she was in the habit of telling gross untruths. Had it not been for this the girl's story would have been investigated by the proper authorities and the men, whom she showed up in such a disreputable light, would have been summarily treated.

Farmers Deal Out Summary Justice to Bold, Bad Tramps.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—A special to the World from Westbrook, Conn., says a gang of tramps who have been robbing farmers in this section for the past two weeks, became so bold as to assault a teacher who refused to give them money. Eight farmers last night went to the tramps' headquarters and surprised the gang. Two were captured, dragged from their hut, ragged garments and tied to a tree. Then three farmers applied whips to the men's legs and backs. Both shrieked at the first cut and kept on shrieking until about 25 lashes had been inflicted. They were told that if they did not leave within 12 hours they could expect worse punishment.

THE PREMIER IS BURIED.

HIS REMAINS GIVEN A MOST ELABORATE BURIAL.

The Ceremonials Impressive and Solemn—Thousands Witness the Last Sad Rites—Canada's Late Premier Honored and Mourned.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 3.—In solemn state the remains of the late Sir John Thompson were interred in Holy Cross Cemetery this afternoon and the last of a series of great honors to a Canadian statesman was carried out with all that pomp and splendor attending a state funeral. No place in Canada has better facilities for a ceremony of that kind and the service in St. Mary's cathedral and the succeeding funeral procession were such as to leave a lasting impression on the thousands who took part in or witnessed the functions.

PAID EVERY HONOR.

The honors paid to the deceased Premier after his tragic death at Windsor Castle where he had just received the greatest gift available for a Canadian at the hands of her Majesty Queen Victoria, awakened the interest and sympathy of the Canadian people. Hardly more could have been done for a member of the Royal family. The touching scenes at Windsor Castle and subsequently in London and again at Portsmouth when H.M.S. Blenheim departed with the remains for Halifax were repeated when the funeral ship arrived in port on New Years Day, and again today, when the last respects were paid.

Everything possible was done to evidence the grief of the contrary at large at the loss of its first statesman and citizen. In direct contrast to the drenching wet weather of Tuesday, when the ceremony of receiving the body from the Blenheim was carried out with Imperial military honors, today was fine and moderately cold. Incoming trains this morning brought great crowds of people from all over Nova Scotia, and the outside proceedings of the day were witnessed by many thousands. The attendance at the funeral service was necessarily restricted to people of official positions.

TAKEN TO THE CATHEDRAL.

After lying in state all day yesterday the remains were removed at 7 o'clock this morning to the catafalque in St. Mary's Cathedral, Lady Thompson and family and David Pottinger having taken a farewell look at the remains last night.

There was a distinguished gathering present, including Lady Thompson and family and relatives, their Excellencies Lord and Lady Aberdeen, representing Her Majesty; Hon. Mackenzie Bowell and his Cabinet, Lieutenant General Montgomery Moore and staff, members of the Provincial Cabinet, high Government officials, judges from all over Canada and hundreds of other prominent people.

THE REQUIEM MASS.

The requiem mass and funeral service in St. Mary's church was conducted with all the pomp and slendor of the Roman Catholic Church. Bishop Cameron, of Antigonish, was the celebrant, and Archbishop O'Brien, of Halifax, the preacher. They were assisted by a staff of deacons and sub-deacons. At ten o'clock his Grace Archbishop O'Brien entered with his ministers and took his seat on the throne on the gospel side of the altar. Bishop Cameron with his attendants sat on the faldstool near the epistle side of the altar.

A SOLEMN CEREMONY.

Afterwards they both proceeded to the foot of the altar, blessed themselves and the confiteor was said. Archbishop O'Brien then retired to the throne. Bishop Cameron mounted the altar and said the introit. After the collects the subdeacon sang the Epistle and the choir the "Dies Iræ," which, as translated by Archbishop O'Brien, is pronounced by competent judges to be one of the most faithful renderings of the original sacred verse. Afterwards the celebrant continued the solemn service, including the Oblation of the Host Oblation of the Chalice and Preface, the latter being sung by the celebrant.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S SERMON.

Archbishop O'Brien preached an eloquent sermon, taking for his text 1. Kings chapter xii., 2, 3 and 4: "Having then conversed with you from my youth, until this day, behold here I am; His anointed, whether I have taken any man's ox and ass, if I have wronged any man, if I have oppressed any man, if I have taken a bribe at any man's hand, and I will despise it this day and will restore it to you. And they said, thou hast not wronged us nor oppressed us, nor taken aught at any man's hand."

The canon of the mass followed with its accompany ceremony and prayers.

After mass the celebrant, accompanied by the ministers, proceeded to the catafalque and performed the Absolution. During the recital of the Lord's Prayer the priest sprinkled the corpse with holy water and afterwards incensed it.

TAKEN TO THE CEMETERY.

At the conclusion of the service the coffin was carried to the funeral car, standing at the main cathedral entrance, on Spring Garden road. It was decidedly striking in appearance. The dark drapery hanging about the sides almost concealed the wheels of the car. Thick tassels dangled at the corners and the rich drapery was caught up with silver case. In the center of the car was the bier, on which the coffin rested, and over all at a height of eight feet was a large canopy, supported on columns of black and silver, and surmounted with plumes and crown. The funeral cortege then proceeded to Holy Cross cemetery where the interment took place.

The mourning decorations of public buildings in the business part of the city, as well as along the route of the funeral procession, were very elaborate, and it is estimated that not less than 2,000 yards of black cashmere, to say nothing of other materials, were used for the purpose.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

A MAN HAS BOTH LEGS CUT OFF BY A TRAIN.

Lace the Baby Farmer Gets 18 Months in the Central—A Boy Seriously Injured by a Trolley.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—A youth 14 years of age named Wilfrid Wheatley was struck by a Parliament street trolley car about noon today and severely injured. He was painfully bruised about the head and shoulders and his right leg was slightly crushed. The injured lad was removed to his home at No. 20 Arnold avenue.

THE BAY CLEARING OF ICE.

The ice on the bay began to break up last night and before noon today as far east as Yonge street was almost clear. A strong current was setting out of the eastern gap. Several persons reported to have got a wetting through being too risky upon the ice.

TORONTO MAYORALTY.

The fight for the mayoralty will be a straight contest again between Mayor Kennedy and ex-Mayor Fleming, the two other nominees, Mr. J. E. Verrall and Wm. Carlyle having retired. Among the nominees for aldermen who have retired is ex-Ald. Jas. Gowanlock of the Sixth ward.

COMMITTED TO THE CENTRAL.

The disgusting features of baby farming were shown up startlingly clear in the Police Court this morning during the trial of the very much bewhiskered and spectacled Wm. E. Lace on a charge of illtreating children left in his charge at his farm on Gladstone avenue.

The woman, Mary Lace, who was sent to prison for 18 months for manslaughter at the Sessions, is the alleged wife of the prisoner.

It was shown that Lace treated the children brutally and the Magistrate fined him $100 and sent him to the Central for three months.

BOTH LEGS CUT OFF.

Crossing the railway tracks on Brock avenue early this morning, William Armstrong, an old and respected citizen living at 9 Cunningham avenue, a carpenter by trade, met with awful injuries.

Mr. Armstrong was struck by an engine going west. Both legs were cut off below the knees, one arm is mangled and he received bad cuts about the head.

The injured man was attended by Drs. Rowe and Lynd and removed to the General Hospital. On arrival there the doctors concluded that he could live only a few hours.

Mr. Armstrong was on his way to work when the accident befel him.

WELTER FOUND GUILTY

AND JOHN HENDERSHOTT AN ACCESSORY BEFORE THE FACT.

Coroner's Jury Says that Welter Killed William Henry Hendershott—A Startling Development in the Middlemarch Murder Case.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 29.—At the inquest on the Middlemarch murder, the jury at midnight brought in the following verdict: William Henry Hendershott came to his death in Wardell's woods on Friday, Dec. 14, at the hands of W. D. Welter, and John Hendershott was an accessory before the fact."

The two prisoners will have to go on trial for their life at the next criminal assizes.

Yesterday was a day of excitement at the inquest.

Sylvester Swisher gave evidence to the effect that the tree was felled before the murder, and the body afterwards placed under it.

THE BLOODY AXE.

Robert Stevens said the bloody axe found in the woods was John Hendershott's.

Mrs. J. L. Bancroft of the Penwarden hotel, St. Thomas, swore that on the Friday night of the murder Hendershott and his daughter arrived at the hotel. They were told that Welter had driven to town but expressed no anxiety to see him. When he came to the hotel they did not ask about the "accident."

TRIED TO INSURE ANOTHER MAN.

Dr. Duncombe, who examined the murdered man, gave startling evidence. He said that on June 7th last John Hendershott and J. W. Cook, the local agent of the Covenant Mutual, endeavored to place a policy of $2,000 on the life of one Patrick Fitzpatrick, a worthless character now in jail for drunkenness and vagrancy. The doctor rejected the applicant.

County Crown Attorney Donohue, in reviewing the evidence, said Hendershott was doubly guilty. He was the principal schemer and plotter in the tragedy.

Coroner Gustin claimed that the evidence of the doctors some days ago proved that a murder had been committed.

The jury was out only half an hour.

WITH THE SPORTS.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons Cannot Fight at Jacksonville, Fla.

The proposed fight between Middleweight Bob Fitzsimmons and Heavyweight Jim Corbett will not take place at Jacksonville. Public sentiment is too much against it. The ordinance which was recently passed prohibiting boxing in Jacksonville has knocked the calculations of the projectors of the contest into a cocked hat. It is just beginning to dawn on the sports that this law really means something and it will not be in the least amazing if the club, where the encounter was destined to take place, will come out and call the affair off as far as they are concerned, despite the fustian of the heavyweight that the fight can be brought off there. The club house is dilapidated and no efforts are being made to keep it in repair.

HOCKEY.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The American hockeyists appeared in a match here last night at Rideau rink under their own rules, and put up an exceptionally clever game. They were equal to the Ottawa aggregation all the way through, the first half ending 2 to 1 in their favor. The second half was stubbornly contested, but the good systematic play of the Americans was too much for the Ottawas, who only scored once while their opponents added 2. The total score was 5 to 2 for the Americans.

BASEBALL.

Manager Maddock has signed Frank Southard, a pitcher who was with Reading in the Pennsylvania State League last year. He comes highly recommended as an all-round player.

W. Congalton, the young Guelph player, has also been signed to play in the outfield. He led the C.A.B.A. in batting last year, with an average of .412. His fielding average was .[illegible]. Congalton is also a promi-ing south-paw twirler.

Manager Maddock will leave early next week on still hunt for players, and it will not be surprising if he bags several good men he has in view.

Jacob Schaefer has proposed a billiard game which will be called the space game, and probably adopted. The space game consists of four lines drawn from the centre of each cushion to the centre of the opposite one, thus dividing the table into four equal spaces. The player is allowed five shots within each space, but on the sixth shot one of the object balls must cross a line, thus compelling a player to confine himself almost entirely to open-table work.

BILLIARDS.

Frank C. Ives arrived in Chicago on Wednesday night from Grand Rapids. The champion's first move was acceptance of the offer of Vignaux to play a match game at 14-inch balk-line billiards for $10,000 a side.

"My original proposition was to give odds in the side wager," said the Napoleon. "I said I would play Vignaux a match and bet him $6,000 to $5,000 that I beat him. He evidently misunderstood, and imagines that I offered to play him 6,000 points to 5,000. Since, however, as the thing has gone as far as it has, I will accept the proposition and give him a block of 1,000 as a starter in a 6,000 point game."

"Will the side wager of $10,000 suit you?" was asked.

"Yes, that is quite satisfactory. I understand that Mr. Vignaux's money is already up. If this is so, we will post ours. Either Chicago or New York will suit me. The game, however, must be played the last week in February or the first week in March."

BUDGET FROM OTTAWA.

BUCKINGHAM HAS ANOTHER DISASTROUS CONFLAGRATION.

Arrangement for the Great Ice Carnival Going On—A New Year's Episode—Doings of Quebec's Second City.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Buckingham has suffered the visitation of another fire.

It broke out last night night about 11 o'clock in Lawrence's store, in the most thickly populated part of the town. The fire had taken such headway before measures could be taken to extinguish it, that when at last water was thrown upon the flames the efforts of the volunteers were seen to be unavailing to check their progress. The store was completely destroyed.

From the store the fire had already leaped to the Commercial hotel and in a few minutes it was burning fiercely. At midnight the building appeared to be doomed to total destruction. Fortunately, although most of the inmates had already retired for the night, when the fire broke out, the alarm was given in time to enable them to make good their escape.

There is thus providentially no loss of life to record, although the escape was a narrow one, the boarders losing almost all their effects.

Fournier's barber shop, adjoining, was also swept away by the flames, which at midnight were still raging fiercely and threatening destruction to the neighboring houses.

A NEW YEAR'S EPISODE.

Mr. A. H. Taylor of the Grand Trunk ticket office, and Mr. John Sutherland, found a horse near the north shore of Deschene Lake on New Year's Day. They brought it back to Aylmer with them, and to their great surprise discovered that the animal had run away from a couple of Ottawa gentlemen, and upon reaching the lake had cleared itself of the sleigh and most of the harness. The drivers, however, were feeling good and were none the worse after the occurrence.

THE CARNIVAL.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Carnival was held last evening, Mr. W. A. Allan in the chair, Mr. E. C. Grant, secretary.

In connection with the band tournament, it was reported that entries had been received for competition from bands in Malone, Ogdensburg, Rome, and Watertown. It was pointed out that the evenings fixed for this competition would conflict with the fancy dress carnival at Rideau Rink and the storming of the Ice palace. This, however, will be satisfactorily arranged.

HEARD HE WAS KILLED.

Mr. Fedarb, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. received a letter yesterday from a prominent gentleman in London, enquiring as to the whereabouts of a party named Hoddington. He had heard that he was one of the victims of the recent dynamite explosion at Hull.

DISTRESS IN THE WEST.

AWFUL DESTITUTION IN THE OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

A Cyclone of Suffering—Four Tennessee Murderers Break Through a Jail—Quebec Items.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The cyclone of suffering in parts of the west is widening. It includes the Cherokee strip in Oklahoma, which was opened for settlement a year ago. The country is emphatically new. The missionaries of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, in forwarding special correspondence relating to the situation, state there is special need of clothing. With the thermometer below zero, there were 12 men at a religious meeting who wore no overcoats and were not known to have any. Some of the women were without wraps of any kind. A mother and daughter alternately wore the same pair of shoes. Women have been found barefooted at home.

PETITIONING CONGRESS.

A meeting has been held to petition Congress for help, but they can't wait for Congressional action. The missionary continues: It takes every cent of our ladies' society and all they can raise to get books, keep up the Sabbath school and purchase fuel for our church. The building is new and not yet furnished. The ladies recently purchased a stove. The blizzard struck us at Christmas, since which time some families have suffered simply for the want of clothing of any description.

QUEBEC ITEMS.

QUEBEC, Jan. 3.—A man named Paradis died suddenly yesterday. Death was caused by apoplexy.

The Local Legislature met today. Several important measures were discussed. An amendment of Mr. Gladu was defeated by 23 to 14.

ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. Four murderers, J. L. Roddy, Andrew Winters, Geo. Alexander and C. D. Kiger, made their escape from the county jail here this morning at an early hour. The bolts of the lock on the fire escape were sawed in two, the saw being furnished by friends on the outside. Alexander was waiting trial for the murder of two men.

Councillor Best in the Field.

Owing to a typographical error the name of Mr. H. Best was omitted from the list of candidates for Ward One published in yesterday's TIMES, and the impression became general over town that he would not run. Such is not the case. Mr. Best is a candidate for the Council and will doubtless pull a large vote in his ward. He has in the past been a capable and useful councillor and his usefulness in the interest of the town is by no means ended.

A Bold Burglar.

An unknown person entered the residence of Mr. J. W. Brisbin shortly after midnight yesterday. Miss Brisbin heard the noise and awakened Mr. Brisbin, who hurriedly dressed himself, secured a revolver and started to investigate. In the meantime Miss Brisbin had gone to the head of the stairway in time to see a man leave by the front entrance. When Mr. Brisbin reached the street no trace of the intruder was visible. The police were notified, and the Chief, who resides next to Mr. Brisbin's, headed an investigation. Evidence was plentiful to show that the man had been in the house for some time. Mr. Brisbin's large ulster was found on the floor loaded down with silverware. Not content with this the thief had made a partial inspection of the bedrooms, when he was frightened off by Miss Brisbin's calling to her father. No clue of who the man is or his whereabouts are known to police.

Refunded the Money.

At the performance on Wednesday night six well-known gentlemen purchased reserved seat tickets and entered the opera house but couldn't find any seats. They took standing positions under the gallery until approached by one of the employees of the house, who asked them if they would occupy one of the boxes. They accepted the offer with thanks, and were admitted after the employee had got the box key from the box office. When they had been seated a short time, the manager of the Company entered the box and asked them to pay 50 cents for the seats. The gentlemen refused to do this, and asked to be shown to the reserved seats for which they had paid. The manager replied that all the seats were taken. The gentlemen then demanded that the money paid for the tickets be refunded and they would leave. This was done, and they left the opera house. These are the facts of an unpleasant incident which has been differently reported around town, making it appear that the gentlemen in question were trying to get ahead of the Company.

Mayor Kendry Elected By Acclamation.

He Makes an Address Stating that He will Retire at the Expiration of the Ensuing Term.

There are Thirty Candidates For the Council in the Field—All the Old Council Nominated With the Exception of Messrs. Hall, McIllwaine and Kelly—It Looks Like a Red-Hot Contest in Every Ward—A Complete List of the Nominations for Councillors—School Trustees Elected by Acclamation—The Nominations in Ashburnham—Reeve Burnham Declared Elected—Eight Candidates in the Field for Municipal Honors and Seven for School Trustees.

For Mayor—Mr. James Kendry, Elected by acclamation.

At 10 o'clock in the Council Chambers yesterday morning nominations for candidates for the mayoralty took place, Clerk Armstrong presiding. Mr. James Kendry was placed in nomination by Mr. Wm. Cluxton, and Mr. H. S. McDonald seconded the nomination.

Mr. A. McNeil then proposed the name of Mr. A. P. Poussette, but that gentleman declined in a short address in which he referred to municipal affairs, taking up the question of union with Ashburnham in which matter he thought the town had been extremely vacillating. He also mentioned the financial condition, asserting that its improvement as shown in the recent statement was due to the fact that the town had borrowed $10,000. He touched briefly on the sewer muddle, deprecating the large expense the arbitration had involved, amounting to some thousands of dollars which would come out of the revenue of 1895.

At one o'clock no other nominations had been made, and Mr. Kendry was declared elected by acclammation, the announcement being greeted with applause.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Mayor Kendry in a short address thanked the citizens for the honor conferred upon him and the confidence imposed in him, as well as for the mark of approval of his past efforts. In brief he reviewed the important issues that had come before the Council during the past year, and characterized the period as an eventful one. He mentioned the outfall sewer matter, the union with Ashburnham, the improved equipments of the Street and Bridge department and the Fire department, the question of the distribution of charity and other matters both settled and pending. In regard to the arrears of taxes the Mayor said: "The matter of arrears of taxes is one that has been looked into by the Council, and especially by the Court of Revision, and recommendations have been made that will be carried out and which will save the town from any danger of loss in regard to arrears in the future." Referring to the financial position of the town, he continued: "The town's financial position has always been and is now a good one, as it has substantial assets that amount to much more than its total indebtedness. The Council this year has, by carefulness and economy, met the expenditures of the year out of current revenue and has a balance on the right side, although it had to pay a portion of the floating indebtedness that was an accumulation of former years. This is very satisfactory, and with continued carefulness the same satisfactory state of affairs will, I have no doubt, exist at the close of the year we are now about to enter upon."

In conclusion Mayor Kendry said:

"I have great reason to thank the people of Peterborough for their repeated evidences of confidence. The position of Mayor is an honorable one, but it is also one of responsibility, and if I am spared to the close of the term of 1895 I will retire from this position in which you have in your kindness placed me for the fourth time.

I hope I have not wearied you, and I again tender you my heartiest thanks and wish every citizen a very Happy New Year.

FOR THREE DOLLARS

Is an American Tracked From Michigan to Cobourg.

On Saturday last Sheriff Kellam, of the city of Pontiac, Oakland County, Mich., was in Cobourg. He came over to Newcastle after a man named John Stein, who is charged with bringing stolen property into Canada. He followed his man to that place, and when satisfied that his man was there, handed a warrant to the village constable to arrest Stein.

The sheriff had business in Toronto and instructed the constable to notify him in that city when the warrant was executed. This the constable did but before the sheriff returned Stein's lawyer frightened the constable into releasing the prisoner, who at once made his escape and has not since been seen. Sheriff Kellam came on to Cobourg, and after consulting with the Crown Attorney and Chief Rankin, a new information was laid, and a warrant placed in the hands of a constable that will serve Stein, if he can be found, and not be frightened by the bluff of a country lawyer. Stein is said to have stolen an overcoat, suit of clothes and three dollars in money.

WEDDING BELLS.

Miss Hagerman an Mr. E. Leslie Barrie Married.

Two very popular young people of Peterborough were made one Monday afternoon when Mr. E. Leslie Barrie led to the Hymeneal altar Miss Hannah Hagerman, only daughter of Mr. John Hagerman, King street, the pleasing ceremony taking place at the residence of the bride's father.

The bride was prettily attired in a travelling costume of brown and mauve and carried a bouquet of cream roses. She was attended by Miss Hattie Wilson, of Toronto, who was beautifully costumed in a gown of brown silk, carrying a bouquet of pink roses, while Miss Stella Love, also of Toronto, was maid of honor, wearing an empire gown of crepe dechene and carrying a wand and basket of cream roses.

The Rev. W. E. Young, in whose church the young bride has been a soprano soloist for some time, performed the ceremony in the presence of a small circle of friends.

The newly wedded pair received many handsome presents. They left on the 5.15 G.T.R. for Toronto and the eastern states.

FELLED BY A BLOW.

Michael O'Brien Struck by a Cutter Shaft and Knocked Insensible.

A very serious accident befell Michael O'Brien, an old man living in Ashburnham yesterday afternoon.

O'Brien was crossing Water street on Simcoe. A horse and cutter was approaching from the south side and in trying to avoid it O'Brien got directly in the way of a horse and cutter coming in the opposite direction. The driver, Mr. James Davidson, of Smith, quickly reigned his horse, but was too late to avoid running the old man down. The point of the shaft struck him in the temple, felling him to the ground. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried into the police station, where he soon regained consciousness.

Dr. Yelland attended the injured man, and dressed an ugly wound on the temple. Then O'Brien was taken to his home.

The extent of his injuries have not yet been determined. As he is nearly 80 years of age, they may result seriously.

ATTEMPTED TO SUICIDE.

A YOUNG GIRL TRIES TO TAKE HER LIFE AT THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY STATION.

Swallows a Dose of Chloroform in the Waiting Room and is Discovered in a Stupor by the Station Agent—The Rash Act of a Port Hope Girl.

There was an attempt made to commit suicide at the Grand Trunk station Thursday night.

About 7.20 o'clock a young girl, about 17 years of age, entered the ladies' waiting room and took a seat. She was dressed in black, and as there was nothing to indicate in her actions that she was there for any other purpose than to await the arrival of a train, no particular attention was paid to her.

About 15 minutes later Station Agent Hayden detected a peculiar odor issuing out of the waiting room, and he entered it to find out the cause. The first thing he saw was the young woman stretched half-way across the seats while in one hand she grasped a small glass phial, which she held to her lips. He immediately rushed to her, snatched the bottle and endeavored to find out what was the matter. The girl seemed to be in a sort of stupor, and it did not take the agent many seconds to arrive at the conclusion that she had swallowed some drug. He immediately telephoned for Dr. King.

The latter arrived in a few moments and took in the situation at a glance. He examined the small bottle and found that it contained chloroform. From the quantity that still remained in the bottle he did not think the girl had taken enough to result fatally. He then went to work and brought her out of the stupor she was in.

Dr. King tried to elicit from the girl why she had tried to end her life, but she refused to say a word, and buried her face in her hands and sobbed piteously. When Police Officers Adams and Stewart arrived they recognized her as a young girl who had been working around some of the hotels in Peterborough for the past six months. Her name, they said was Morrison. When the girl heard this, she admitted that it was right, and evinced a willingness to talk.

From all that can be learned, the girl is from Port Hope. Some time ago her parents died and she went to live with the family of Mr. Dingwell, a brother-in-law of her uncle's whose name is Adams, and who is a very respectable resident of Port Hope. According to the girl's story, about six months ago, her uncle took her to task for staying out late at night, and offended by his upbraidings, she ran away and came to Peterborough. Since she has been here, she has lead a sort of precarious existence, working at several hotels and picking up a scanty livlihood as best she could.

The story she told the police when removed to the police station, implicates several young men of the town, and also a married man. First of all she said she had tried to take her life because she had been betrayed. According to her story the first day she arrived in Peterborough, she secured a boarding place, and was shown to her room by the man of the house. She says he entered the room with her, locked the door, and despite her cries and objections worked her ruin.

This may be true or it may not be, but the police know enough to seriously implicate a number of young men, who, if all is true that is reported, have hounded the girl hourly since her arrival in town, subjecting her to the most outrageous treatment.

The girl is well connected in Port Hope, and some of her relatives have been in Peterborough searching for her. The police telephoned to them last night and it is expected they will arrive today.

The girl spent the night at the police station, where she was taken care of. Some disposition of her case will be made today.

THE PREMIER'S CONDITION.

There Was No Foundation for the Report that He Was Seriously Ill.

A bulletin from Halifax Thursday which was published in the evening papers, conveying the impression that Premier Mackenzie Bowell was at the point of death, created the greatest excitement throughout the town, and many were the expressions of sorrow heard. The bulletin read:

"HALIFAX, Jan. 3.—Mackenzie Bowell, the new Premier, is seriously ill and his recovery is doubtful.

At 6 o'clock, THE TIMES received the following bulletin, which will relieve the anxiety felt by the Premier's many ardent admirers and friends.

"HALIFAX, Jan. 3, 6.20 p.m.—There is no foundation for reports of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's condition. He had a severe attack of coughing early this morning but is decidedly better this evening, and was able to see one or two friends. He remained in bed today till midday but is now up and much better and quite cheerful. There was never any cause for alarm."

Mr. McNaughton's Record.

At the request of ex-Councillor John McNaughton, the following letter is published:

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 27, 1894.

John McNaughton, Esq.,

DEAR SIR,—In accordance with your request made yesterday, I have examined the records. I find that you were a member of the Town Council in 1880, when J. J. Lundy, Esq., was mayor; in 1881, 1882 and 1883 when H. H. Smith, Esq., was mayor; in 1885, when George A. Cox, Esq., was mayor, and in 1886 and 1887, when James Stevenson, Esq., was mayor.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Notice.

Funeral of Mr. J. Jamieson will take place at 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the Little Windsor Hotel to Little Lake cemetery.

A Small Blaze

The fire brigade was called out at 8 o'clock last night. The blaze was located in a chimney of a residence on Edinburgh street. Very little damage was done.

Lookout for the Plows.

The snow plows were out yesterday morning and in the darkness ran into and demolished several gates which were left open. Residents should see to it that their gates are closed.

A Successful Year.

Manager W. H. Hill, of the Sun Life Insurance company received a telegram from the head office in Montreal last night relative to the business done by the company during the past year. The despatch stated that 1894 was the most successful in the history of the company, the applications amounting to the enormous sum of $30,[illegible].

Railway Notes.

The London Times announces that the Grand Trunk Railway Company has concluded financial arrangements securing the prompt payment of the interest on all the leased line bonds and debenture stocks during the ensuing year. The C. P. R. management have decided to dispense with the use of kindling wood when starting the fires in locomotives, and have adopted a patent invention for this purpose, which is more effective and less expensive than the old method.

John Jamieson Dead

Mr. John Jamieson, who has been lying dangerously ill at the Little Windsor hotel since last Saturday night, died at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His death was not unexpected, the doctors having given him up on Thursday night. The indirect cause of his death was an accident which befell him while working in the shanties, causing a wound in his head, which brought on temporary derangement. This, coupled with the exposure he was subjected to while being carried from the shanties to Peterborough, hastened his end.

Wanted to Go Home.

A farmer from Cavan, named Crummie, came to town yesterday and after putting his team up some place got drunk. About midnight he made himself so conspicuous on George street that Officer Adams took him in tow. The man said he wanted to get his horses and go home, but he hadn't a very clear idea of the place he had left them at. The officer accompanied him to several places, and while making inquiries left Crummie standing alone. The man broke and ran up the street, and gave the officer quite a chase. He was finally locked up over night in the cells.

The Franchise Discussed.

In the Clerk's office last night the Finance committee met a sub-committee of the Committee of the Whole, and together discussed the granting of the franchise to the new power company, which is seeking the right of way of the streets to erect poles and string wires, for the next 20 years. The sentiment of the Council is towards granting the franchise under certain conditions, and the latter were suggested and drawn up last night. The committees will report at the next council meeting on January 8. The Fire and Light Committee also met last night for the consideration of routine business.

Given in Charity.

Donations to the Protestant Home for December were sent in by the following, who have the sincere thanks of the managing committee: Mrs. Dr. George Burnham, goose and books; Mrs. Hall, goose; Mrs. V. Hunt, two geese; Mr. Charles McGill, papers, basket of apples, candies; Mr. Sherlock, papers; Mr. Thomas Lush (baker), buns and currant loaf; Mrs. Lewis Ayres (Ballyduff), mending matter; Mrs. J. R. McWilliams, turkey; Mr. J. W. Bennett (town), bag of apples; Miss Dunn, goose; Mrs. Hamlet, turkey; Mr. Borland (Otonabee), vegetables; Rev. V. Clementi, turkey and roast of beef; Mrs. Walsh, plum pudding; Miss Roger, goose; Mr. Marvin (butcher) beef's head; Mrs. R. Ferguson, turkey; Mrs. Innis, currant loaf; Mrs. Paton, aprons for the women; Dr. Bell, several pairs spectacles; Messrs. Lane & Hunter (grocers) bag apples turkey, butter; Miss Roper, candies; Francis Mission Band of St. Paul's church, scrap books; Mr. R. Stevenson, 3 turkeys; Mr. John Crane, oranges; Mr. William Hamilton (grocer) turkey, oranges, nuts and candies; Mr. John Craig, candies and apples; Mr. R. Shortly, 2 bags potatoes; Mission committee of St. Andrew's Y.P.S.C.E. cake; Mr. James Middleton, oranges; Miss Nichols, mince meat; Miss M. Nichols, candies.

One tramp sought shelter at the police station last night.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Market day.

The week of prayer commences on Monday.

The poolmatch yesterday afternoon drew quite a crowd. The local man won the game.

Skips Weller and McClelland, and Skips Davidson and Ferguson played at the rink last night in the Kendry cup contest.

A sleighing party was out last night. With tin horns and a snare drum the members contrived to make any amount of noise.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the Montreal horse buyer will be at the Balmoral hotel for the purpose of purchasing another carload of good sound horses on January 10, 11 and 12.

Mr. E. W. Rathbun has received 16 prairie chickens direct from Manitoba. He has decided to place them on the Morden farm near Peterson's ferry, which is now owned by the Rathbun Company. It is said the land over there is well adapted for the prairie chickens.—Deseronto Tribune.

Hon Mr. Dryden announced at Gananoque yesterday that the Ontario Government proposed to establish a pioneer dairy farm. A location will be chosen on the line of the C.P.R. in Northwestern Ontario where in one block will be found probably enough good land to make two or three townships.

At the fire the other night some cool work was done by light-fingered gentry. It is said that in some cases the band boxes containing fur capes were carefully examined to see if the size was just right before they would take them away. One young man rushed in and undertook to save a nice robe, and started off with a rush up town. The crowd caught on and guyed him so unmercifully that he had to drop it. It is about time that some steps were taken to form a salvage corps for Lindsay. Goods might as well be burned as stolen.—Lindsay Post.

Royal Templars of Temperance.

The following officers have been elected by Otonabee Council, No. 517, R. T. of T.: Sister Munroe, S. C.; Bro. H. S. Armstrong, P. C.; Sister Aggie Dawson, V. C.; Bro. W. Hoyle, chaplain; Sister Maud Dawson, R. S.; Sister Annie McGregor, Assistant R. S.; Sister McWilliams, F. L.; Bro. J. Agnew, treasurer; Bro. Panther, herald; Sister Pollock, deputy herald; Bro. Rightmyer, guard; Bro. Howland, sentinel.

A Dangerous Situation.

Mr. Thos. Fraser, of this town, and Jas. Fraser, of Norwood, got a close call on Christmas afternoon. They left Hastings for Norwood and at Beck's hill, both shafts broke at the cross bar, leaving the horse fast to the rig and nothing to guide it. For some 20 rods the horse ran, the rig swaying from one side of the road to the other, finally coming in contact with a bunch of young cedars, sending James to one side and Thomas up into the trees. The clump of trees no doubt saved their lives. The rig upset and was left some distance beyond in the fence corner and the horse turned in at Mr. Beckets, about one and a half miles from Norwood. —Hastings Star.

The Marks Comedy Company.

The "Little Duchess" was presented by the above Company at the Opera House, last night, to a large audience. The part of Laura (the "Little Duchess") was taken by Miss Myra Collins, who has already become a favorite with the theatre-goers of Peterborough. Tom Marks, as Peter Robins, fairly captivated the audience, while all the minor characters were well taken and ably maintained. The singing and dancing of several members of the Company—particularly that of little Grace Scott—were very popular features of the entertainment, and they received vigorous applause.

Election of Officers.

At a largely attended meeting of Colonel Saunderson L.O.L., No. 321, at Dowper's Corners on 1st inst. The following officers were elected for the current year:

Joseph Saunders	W.M.
T. C. Holden	D.M.

Tea was served during the evening and a most enjoyable time spent. The ladies in this vicinity deserve all praise.

REGARDING THE CANDIDATES.

Editor Times.

I notice in your news items this morning the current report that a number of the old Councillors contemplate retiring from the civic board. I am an admirer of fair criticism and even severe when necessary and I agree with your criticism generally of the conduct of our municipal affairs. I do not gather from your editorials what are really your opinions of the several members of the present Council but presume you are voicing the opinions of an independent journal such as you claim to be, and as I believe you are, you will come to the conclusion that it would be a municipal calamity at the present time if such men as Councillors Cahill, Best and Dawson should retire from the Council board. I might say here that I do not approve of all the actions of these gentlemen, but it appears to me they are the best men available, and on the whole fairly reliable and trustworthy and should be elected without opposition. Looking upon the present crop of candidates I think they are of the best men in the field and that the town's interests would be safe in their hands.

Thanking you for your valuable space and trusting that you will advocate the cause of good men with your usual energy.

I am yours truly,

Third Annual

WHITE GOODS SALE

You and we can remember when January was stupidly dull and midwinter trade extremely quiet. There seemed no remedy for it then, but there is now. The enterprise that makes ocean greyhounds and lightning express trains has been revolutionizing storekeeping. We not only ignore the wholesaler in buying our goods, but we undersell him in many things. In like way we anticipate needs, stimulate demand and encourage trade in stocks that formerly were very limited. The result is CONSTANT ACTIVITY from January to December and the constant development of this new idea.

THE WHITE GOODS SALE of last year and the year before was a source of wonder and astonishment to very many shoppers. How, in the name of business, perfectly new goods could sell for less than they usually cost to make, was a conundrum. Most people were satisfied to buy without being able to solve the problem, and the sales were enormously big Now we're ready to discount the past at every point with values that will surprise salespeople as well as shoppers, merchants as well as manufacturers.

The simple fact of the matter is we anticipated this sale WEEKS AGO, planned for it, used ready cash to unusual advantage, and turned the experience of the past into a betterment. What we want to emphasize is that these goods are PERFECTLY NEW and the qualities absolutely reliable. All prices are marked in plain figures, and out-of-town customers can order by mail as satisfactorily as shopping in person. Here are the facts:

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY. Figure out the usual cost of material and the usual cost of making and see where we stand. Present prices are THE LOWEST EVER QUOTED for goods of equal quality. As a matter of course, other stores will follow in our footsteps and much trash will be offered at a so-called "sacrifice," but that isn't what you want. Nothing but the closest figuring, the shrewdest management and biggest possible outlet will allow any store to sell at our prices, and in announcing the programme for this month we're confident of success and proud of the achievement which makes success possible.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—The most disastrous fire in the history of Toronto occurred this (Sunday) morning. The total loss will reach nearly one million dollars. The fire originated in the basement of the Globe building at the corner of Yonge and Milinda streets and spread west and north. THE WALLS FALL

Two Firemen Buried Beneath a Mass of Falling Brick—One Killed Outright.

The first alarm was turned in at 12 minutes to three. The central section of the brigade including Lombard street, Bay street, Berkley street, Queen street, and Yonge street responding, but when the first section reached the scene the flames were already burning through every window in the Globe and were mounting heavenward with an angry roar. A general alarm was at once sounded and soon every section of the brigade was at work. The large aerial truck from the Lombard street hall was placed on Melinda street midway between Yonge and Jordan street, and the 85 foot ladder hoisted to the highest story of the building.

A daring fireman attempted to ascend it with a section of hose but was driven back by the blaze. The chief saw that it was hopeless to force a free fight in the quarter and gave orders for the lowering of the ladder and the withdrawal of the wagon from its dangerous position.

The Walls Crash In.

The first part of this order was being complied with when, with a resounding crash that awakened many citizens from their slumbers a dozen blocks away, the north wall of the building fell out into Melinda street, burying two of the firemen, Robert Bowery and Robert Foster, in its fall. These two stood on the south side of the wagon and were caught directly beneath the heaviest portion of the debris. Five of their more fortunate companions standing on the north side of the wagon escaped injury. These quickly extricated Bowery and Foster who were removed to the hospital in the waiting ambulance.

THE FLAMES EXTEND.

Firemen Hurled Through a Shaft by a Mass of Debris.

Chief Ardagh and a number of firemen were in the office of Brough & Caswell, Jordan street, when the walls of the Globe building fell. An enormous mass of brick and mortar crashed through the roof and walls of Brough & Caswell's building and dashed several of the firemen down the the elevator shaft. The Chief sustained an ugly gash on the forehead and internal injuries. He was taken to his home in a carriage. Fireman Frank Forsyth, of the Queen street fire-hall, was wounded in the head, but he remained on the spot. Foreman Charles Smedley, of the College street fire-hall, received the most serious injuries at this point. Firemen Henry Saunders and James Davidson, of the Portland street fire-hall, were also injured, but to a lesser extent. Davidson sustained a severe wound on the hand and Saunders had a foot crushed.

The Flames Spread.

In the meantime fanned by the stiff south west wind the flames had extended across Melinda street and fastening beneath the eaves of Harry Webb's rapidly worked their way into the head of the building, the firemen being unable to send a stream to any greater height than the fourth story. Nicholas Rooney's dry goods house, adjoining the Globe to the south, quickly fell a prey to the flames and was a complete ruin in less than an hour from the time the alarm was sounded.

From the west end of the Globe building the fire was communicated across Jordan street to the large new building of S. F. McKinnon & Co., on the south east corner of Jordan and Melinda streets.

THROUGH SEVEN STORIES

The Flames Worked Ruin in a Large Wholesale House

From the top story of this building the flames spread downward through its seven stories, working complete ruin as it went. The building was almost destroyed before the walls showed any signs of falling and it was the hope of the firemen that the substantial walls would enable them to keep the blaze within their boundaries and thus prevent its westward spread.

Millions of sparks were carried to the west and fell on the roofs of houses as far distant as Bathurst street, but the four inches of snow, which mantled the city, extinguished them before they could work any injury.

Some Who Suffered

To the south of the Globe, on Jordan street, were buildings occupied by Brough & Caswell, printers; Reuben Sadler & Haworth, leather beltings, and Miller & Richard, type founders. These buildings, occupied by the first two mentioned of these firms, were totally destroyed, while the premises of Miller & Richard were badly gutted before the progress of the flames were stayed in this direction.

The Second Death.

LATER:—Charles Smedley, the injured fireman, died at the hospital after a few hours of intense suffering.

Deb's Case in Chicago Trying to Quash An Indictment—Dead Bodies Picked Up all Around Vancouver.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 5.—The Ontario State Bank, in the town of Ontario, between this city and San Bernardino, was robbed of between $4,000 and $5,000 by two men this morning. The crime was committed when no one was in the bank except the cashier. Two men entered suddenly, drew revolvers, and ordered him to throw up his hands. He did so, and one of the robbers told him to go into the vault and followed him. The one who entered the vault kept the cashier covered while he gathered all the money in sight and then he backed out, shutting the door, and made the cashier a prisoner. The two men ran out, jumped into a buggy near by, and escaped.

DEBS' CASE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The motion to quash the indictments for conspiracy against E. V. Debs and the other directors of the A.R.U., besides sixty others who are accused of stopping the mails and interfering with inter-state commerce, came up before Judge Grosscup in the United States Court this morning. Attorney J. A. Harper in opening for the defendants, claimed that all the indictments should be quashed, because the word "feloniously" did not appear in any one of them; also because it had been held by Justice Harlan and others that men had a right to combine or conspire to strike. He also thought the indictments not specific enough. Mr. Milchrist spoke for the government. The only defendant present was Director William Burns.

Judge Crosscup reserved his decision until next Tuesday, when the cases are set for trial.

GHASTLY FINDS.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 5.—Many ghastly finds were made in Vancouver and the suburbs yesterday. Some skaters on Burnaby Lake unearthed a skeleton beneath a log moved to make a bon fire on the ice. The remains of John Quinn were found on the railroad track after the Whatcome express had passed in the evening. Quinn had lain down on the track so sleep off the effect of a day's drunk.

A dead body was found in the Fraser river with a knife wound in his heart and a letter in his pocket from Henry Copp, Washington, D.C., to Heinrich Zeithow, Seattle. This was murder.

Fragments of a man were found along the C.P.R. track near Hammond, a few miles from Vancouver. His name or how he came to be so horribly mangled is not known.

Two other fatalities are reported in the interior.

HENDERSHOTT' CASE.

Investigation into the Death of the Young Southwold Farmer.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 5.—The investigation of the murder of Wm. H. Hendershott, charged against John Hendershott and Wm. D. Welter, was begun yesterday before the Police Magistrate. Rosa and Mary Lilly Hendershott, daughters of John, were the only witnesses examined, and then court was adjourned until today. The latter's story correspond with what she told the coroner.

Rosa's story also corresponded with what she said at the inquest, except that, instead of going to bed at her usual time Thursday evening before the murder, she came to St. Thomas between five and six on Thursday evening with the prisoner Mr. Welter, to meet her father, who left home in the morning for St. Thomas and was said to have gone thence to Sparta. They waited some time at Penwarden House for him to come and she thought it must have been as late as between seven and eight when they left for town, though she could not tell exactly.

She also said that Edith Welter, the affianced of the murdered man, was present at the breakfast table on the following Sunday morning when the insurance policies were produced, one from her father's pocket, and the other being brought from the bureau drawer by the witness. Her father swore he took them both out of the drawer.

AN INSANE MAN

Arrested in Buffalo from St. Catharines, Ont., Sent Back.

BUFFALO, Jan. 5.—Patrolman Langmeyer, of the 4th precinct, found a man walking along Ash street in a seemingly aimless way. He spoke to the fellow, received a vague answer, and took him to the station as a vagrant.

The prisoner described himself as Joseph Russell, 52 years old and of Scotch birth. In the break o' day court, Russell told Judge Harrington that he had recently been liberated from an insane asylum at St. Catharines, Ont, and that Mr. Laurie, the superintendent of the asylum and postmaster of that city, had given him a ticket to Buffalo.

The justice ordered Russell turned over to Immigration Inspector De Barry. Russell repeated his story to the inspector and explained to him that his presence in Buffalo was caused, not only by the action of Mr. Laurie, but by the fact that his head was perfectly flat on top. De Barry escorted the man to the Canadian frontier at the international bridge, bidding him return to Mr. Laurie. The inspector will report to Secretary Carlisle that some action should be taken to prevent Laurie from trying to foist Canadian pauper insane upon the U.S.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 7, 1895.

Good morning!

We advise all voters not to mark their ballots for any candidate to-day who will not pledge himself to reorganize the police and legal departments.

A wandering phrenologist is gathering in many shekels in Galt, Which ought to cause the esteemed Reformer to remark that a phrenologist is a fellow who gets rich by head work.

Oscar Wilde's new play, A Model Husband, is said to be something of a failure, which is not very surprising when you come to think of it. None of the Wildes have ever made model husbands

Another Canadian Premier cannot be laid aside by serious illness during this Parliament without giving the Dominion Premiership the evil fame of being a mighty unhealthy job.

In China's growing unwillingness to concede all that Japan demands due to a belief that the coming winter will do for the victorious Japanese what the winter of 1813 did for Napoleon legions after the burning of Moscow left them exposed to the full fury of the northern blast.

The poor man if he be in perfect health, has no reason to envy the poor man, who, while he owns more money than he knows what to do with, cannot purchase health with it. Not many days ago there died in California one of the richest men in the world, Senator Fair. He had been a sufferer for years. His physician says that two years ago, when complaining of his physical suffering, he remarked: "I would not pass another such a night for every cent of my $38,000,000.

Many are the suggestions for municipal reform which are put forward. One which has the merit of simplicity is that of the Rev. Joseph Odery, of Toronto. Mr. Odery suggests that every meeting of a council be opened with prayer and the singing of a hymn. The elevating and purifying influences of these devotional exercises would, he thinks, have its effect upon the characters and conduct of the aldermen. Mr. Odery failed to elaborate his scheme—he merely threw out the suggestion. He did not say whether the mayor should offer a supplication, or whether he should invite one of the aldermen to lead in prayer. It would be easy to select appropriate hymns for the use of the council. "What Shall the Harvest Be?" might be sung with much soulfulness by some; others could appropriately warble "No Foot of Land Do I Possess;" while "A Charge to Keep I Have," might stir some to a sense of their duty.

JANUARY BILLS

He gives twice who gives quickly. He who pays a bill quickly doesn't pay twice. but he does a good thing and helps to pay some other bill. Therefore, all who can pay their January bills quickly ought to do so. Such payment will help business and who have their January bills to pay. The paying of bills is one of the unpleasant features of life, but waiting for them to be paid is equally or more unpleasant. Many a business man who has promptly sent out his polite bills is on the anxious seat for fear his debtors will not be as prompt, and as polite as he has been. They ought to be if they possibly can be

AN AMBASSODOR OF PEACE.

Three hundred and forty-five members of the British Parliament have signed a document declaring in favor of a permanent treaty of arbitration between Great Britain and the United States, and one of the signers is now on his way to Washington for the purpose of presenting copies of this paper to President Cleveland and each member of Congress.

The mission of this ambassador of peace constitutes one of the most remarkable events of the century. Even the Geneva ond Paris Arbitrations were not so important, because these only settled the disputes which gave rise to them, while the offer now about to be made is intended to provide for the settlement of all misunderstandings that may arise in future. The action now being taken is also noteworthy from another point of view. It has resulted, not from the action of any Government, but represents the spontaneous desire of the British nation, and is at the same time sufficiently official to insure that full effect will be given to it in England if the Americans accept the proposal favorably, as no doubt they will.

The long looked for reunion of the whole Anglo-Saxon race—the reunion that will be a pledge of peace to the world—is daily drawing nearer.

Jenness Miller Monthly for January.

When such popular themes as Improved Dress, Household Science, Afternoon Tea (which applies in a broad sense society in its highest form), the Kindergarten, the latest fashions, etc, etc., are treated from bright and original standpoints between the covers of one issue of one periodical, the reading public may well think it is served to an exceptional and savory literary banquet made so from the rich variety of its many excellent dishes. This is true of JENNESS MILLER MONTHLY for January, The Monthly is largely increasing its scope of usefulness to include able articles on domestic, social, educational and hygenic topics. Mrs. Jeanness Miller's publication has always been surrounded by an artistic atmosphere which the fair dress improver gave it from its inception, and she is now gathering about her a class of writers, every one of whom is as thoroughly up-to-date on his or her hobbies as Mrs. Miller is on her most admirable one. The latter continues her popular series "Law, Order and Art in Dress," in the January issue of the Monthy. In this series she goes back to the first principles, teaching in a delightsome way the theory of dress from the beginning. Mrs. Miller is both a strong and graceful writer. Her published articles are as popular as her lectures. Her magazine is gaining ground everywhere. and in its beautiful new dress and form, introduced in the last number, cannot fail to attract even by its cover. This issue of the Monthly contains a unique and entertaining article on "Great Grandmother's Kitchen and the Aladdin Oven." The literary curios of the Old World have been ransacked to furnish "Mittenwald and its Violins." "Paris the City of Enchantment," is as delightful a bit of travel as we have seen in many a day, and all the other articles furnish, as wa said above, a most savory banquet to the lover of genuinely good reading. "The New Year of Faith Marlay," a touching story of country life, is beautifully and tenderly written by Jenny Hopkins Seibold, author of "Kit," and "Polly Grayson's Ranch."

THE NIGHT AFTER.

'Twas the night after Christmas, and all through the house,
Everybody was stirring, yes, even the mouse;
Paregoric and ipecac, these then had their frolic,
For all of the youngsters were up with the colic,

RUINED BY EARTHQUAKE.

HOUSES SHAKEN TO SPLINTERS AND MANY LIVES LOST.

London Churches Pillaged by Vandals—An Accident to Mr. Gladstone—France in Madagascar—Foreign Cables.

PANAMA, Jan. 4.—The correspondent of the Star and Herald at Quito writes under date of Nov. 27: An earthquake today lasting 27 seconds did great damage. Pelcan Church was destroyed. Fourteen bodies have been taken from the ruins. Many persons were killed and injured. The government is sending aid. Reports say the earthquake at San Juan and Rio Ja in the Argentine Republic still continue to come in. In Rio Ja the inhabitants are principally engaged in pulling down houses that are in a dangerous condition and in removing the debris. For some days after the earthquake the heat was intense, and was enveloped in a cloud of dust. During the greatest of the shocks, pieces of furniture danced and leaped about as if a demon had possession of them. It was like the rolling of ships at sea in a heavy swell. The dust clouds darkened the air and cries and lamentations were heard on all sides. In the confusion members of the same family became separated and it was a long time before they were united. Nearly all the houses tumbled down. Those that remained standing have their walls or roofs badly shaken.

In the city of San Juan the wine deposits were smashed, casks burst and the liquid flowed in torrents through the streets. All who had the means fled from the city and the farm houses in the departments that suffered the least are crowded with fugitives.

New springs have opened up and streams of water have suddenly been found. Of the 2,200 houses in St. Juan 426 are reduced to heaps of ruins and others are more or less injured, many beyond repairs. There are not 20 houses in the city intact.

PILLAGED BY VANDALS.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Every day brings to light further depredations of the gang of vandals who villaged the city churches during the last few days. The latest church to be heard from is that of St. John the Evangelist in the north end. Unlike the six occurrences already chronicled, the latest occurred this week on New Year's night. The church was entered during the temporary absence of the sexton. The thieves secured the poor box, and by shaking it they managed to work the hole in the lid. There is reason to believe that it contained a considerable sum.

DREYFUS DISGRACE.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Capt. Albert Dreyfus, who was recently condemned to degradation and life imprisonment for selling government secrets, will be degraded of his military rank and title on Jan. 5.

ACCIDENT TO MR. GLADSTONE.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Last week, fortunately without lasting results, Mr. Gladstone tumbled over an open drawer, cut his forehead, broke his spectacles and was unable to see for several days. It was at first feared some particles of glass had lodged in his eyes, but these conjectures were groundless.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone will leave England for Cannes, where they will be the guests of Lord Rendel.

FRANCE IN MADAGASCAR.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—A cabinet council was held in the palace of the Elysee today at which M. Honataux, Minister of foreign affairs laid before the ministers a protest from the Premier of the Hova government against the occupation of Tamative by the French, which the premier declared was a violation of the treaty between France and Madagascar. A despatch was also read from Commander Bienaime stating that the Hovas had murdered an English trader near Tamative and informing the government of his intention to declare a state of seige at Diego Suares.

NEWFOUNDLAND CRISIS.

Government Deny Having Pledged Savings Bank Securities.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 4.—The Government deny that they pledged Savings bank securities to obtain a loan. They have farmed out the customs duties to repay the loan. They will get $100,000 in specie next week. Writs of attachment against the Government for the non-payment of amounts due have been obtained by several creditors from the Supreme court. The creditors of Mr. Duder's insolvent estate met last night to receive a statement. The liabilities are placed at $1,200,000. The assets are nominally about the same. But the estate is not expected to realize more than 40c on the dollar. The Supreme Court has issued a writ against the Commercial bank, at the instance of the Savings bank. The Commercial bank is now in the charge of bailiffs. The steamer Virginia Lake will take 800 barrels of flour northward to relieve distress along the coast.

A DISASTROUS FIRE

Cheese Exporter J. K. McCarger Burned Out at Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 4.—At four o'clock this morning the residence of J. K. McCarger, cheese exporter, about a mile east of the city, was discovered to be on fire. The family escaped with difficulty. The building and contents are a total loss. The former was insured in the Royal and the latter in the Aetna for $1,[illegible]. Mr. McCarger, who has been ill for some days, was almost overcome by the smoke and exertion of saving his property and is now prostrated

WHAT A PERSON WEIGHS.

It Is Difficult to Determine Exactly, Even With Seemingly Accurate Scales.

Many persons weigh themselves frequently and imagine that they know their weight. Sweet illusion! Nothing is more difficult than to know one's weight exactly, even with access to first class scales. We hear one say, "I am making flesh; I have increased two pounds," and another, "I am getting into form; I weigh three pounds less," but while I do not wish to make myself disagreeable, especially to people who keep account of their weight, I am convinced that in most of such cases there is really not an ounce of gain or loss, or if there is any variation it is not what the scales record.

A lady goes into a store, weighs herself and receives a card, Aug. 15, 190 pounds. She goes to the country, and returning after several months weighs herself again in the same store and receives a card, on which she finds inscribed, Nov. 29, 196 pounds. She has gained six pounds in three months and ascribes it to the change, the fresh air, etc. She feels happy—good weight, good health. But is this increase real? In nine cases out of ten it is only apparent, due mainly to wearing more or heavier clothes, thicker boots, etc.

The ordinary methods for determining variations in weight give absolutely fallacious results. The causes which influence weight are numerous and rarely taken into consideration. For example, was the weight taken immediately after breakfast or long after, or following active exercise attended with free perspiration? Again, many people, even educated people, have extraordinary ideas as to what affects the weight of the body. Have you not been asked more than once if it is true that one weighs less after meals than before? As if every additional weight in the pocket or the stomach were not necessarily revealed by the balance. The fact is that people are in the habit of weighing themselves, for good luck, one day after breakfast, another day before dinner, another day with heavy clothes on, another day when it rains, etc. Add to this the errors of the scales, and who can say that he knows exactly his own weight or range of variation?

One's weight is like a mobile expression—it changes every instant. The study of this matter is nevertheless of considerable physiological and hygienic importance, a fact of which I have become thoroughly convinced in the course of more than ten years' investigation of the subject.

The inaccuracies of ordinary balances, such as one finds in hotels, at railway stations, etc., determined me to make a portable balance to weigh 100 kilograms (220 pounds), and to be exact to within an ounce, and since then I have weighed myself regularly every day at the same hour in the morning and under identical conditions, and today I possess a record of five years of experiments conducted with the utmost precision.

Every day when weighing myself I record the barometric and hygrometric variations, the temperature and the dinner menu of the day. These experiments have convinced me more than ever that our weight is in a perpetual state of fluctuation. After eliminating the errors of the instrument our weight varies, subject to innumerable influences. At breakfast on a warm day one loses more than 150 grams an hour. How, then, are you to arrive at your true weight when it is subject to such incessant fluctuations? When we remember that 70 per cent of our body is water, there is little difficulty in understanding that our weight must vary continually with the transpiration of moisture; moreover, it varies with the pressure of the atmosphere.

The mere variations in atmospheric humidity suffice to account for a change of more than a pound, and other causes may suffice to account for another pound. The person who weighs only at intervals may infer from this that he is growing lighter or heavier, but the conclusion is unwarranted. There are some people, on the other hand, who will tell you their weight never changes. This, too, is a error; it is constantly fluctuating. The fault is generally that the scales used do not record variations of a pound or so. For ordinary purposes this is of no consequence, but for recording changes of weight in sickness it is of very serious moment.

The scales are not without their importance in medical practice, especially with infants. The weight of an infant increases in definite proportion during the first weeks of life, and there can be no departure from this regularity of increase without impairment of health. For adult persons, too, it is good to consult the scales, for they are the barometer of health. Any sudden increase of weight, amounting to a pound or so in a day, indicates a tendency to disease. It is evidence of health when the weight does not fluctuate more than three or four ounces from day to day. Good [illegible] implies functional derangement.—Dr. Barville in Correspondent.

The Blue Heron.

Wherever the blue heron was he always looked as if he might be going to do something presently. Even now perhaps the weather was on his mind, but at this moment—well, there are times when a heron's strength is to stand still. Certainly he seemed in no danger of overeating. A cracker told me that the major made an excellent dish if killed in the full of the moon. The bird, he said, feeds mostly at night and fares best with the moon to help him.

If the reader would dine off roast blue heron, therefore, as I hope I never shall, let him mind the lunar phases. But think of the gastronomic ups and downs of a bird that is fat and lean by turns 12 times a year! Possibly my informant overstated the case, but in any event I would trust the major to bear himself like a philosopher. If there is any one of God's creatures that can wait for what he wants, it must be the great blue heron.—"Florida Sketch Book."

The Difference.

The other night, when the streets were crowded, a dog running along the sidewalk stopped out on a crossing, and "pointing" his muzzle in the air began to howl. It was worth while noticing the way in which different people who heard the animal were effected. One woman stopped and began to wring her hands. "I know that my brother is dead. I'm just as sure of it as if I had seen him. I never knew a dog to howl that you did not hear of death."

"Won't somebody shoot that brute!" exclaimed a man, looking for a convenient rock to throw at the offender.

The policeman on the beat had started for the dog when a young lady who was crossing the street stopped and patted the animal on the head. "Poor doggy," she said in a sympathetic voice, "you're lost, aren't you? Poor fellow!" and the dog stopped howling and trotted along after his new friend.—Boston Herald.

THE SUN
LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, OF CANADA

From the TRADE BULLETIN, Montreal,

The report of the business of this leading Life Insurance Company of Canada for the past year may well be a source of gratification alike to the shareholders and the assured, the accession to its business during the year exceeding even the phenomenally large increase of the year previous. The marvellous growth and success of the Sun Life is due to the absolute security which it guarantees the insured, the prompt settlement of all its claims and the generous treatment which it invariably pursues towards its policy-holders, even in cases where quibbles might be taken advantage of for the purpose of deferring or even shirking the payment of claims. Instances have come to our knowledge in which the Sun Life could have well stood out against meeting certain claims in conjunction with other companies; but no! it preferred to take a more magnanimous and charitable view of what were said to be suspicious circumstances, and paid the full amount which the policy called for without a day's demur. The phenomenal success therefore which continues to attend the onward march of this deserving home life assurance company is well merited.

MY MOTHER'S SONG.

When the thrushes cease their singing, and the wild bees leave the clover;
When the glory of the sunset fades and leaves the heavens pale;
When above the hill and mountains misty shades of twilight hover,
And the discords of the daytime far away in distance fail:

When the rath wheat gently rustles, and the timid aspens shiver,
And the west winds sighing softly scent from sleeping flowers bring;
When the peewits cry together plaintively by brook and river,
Then it is I hear the old song that my mother used to sing.

Round my neck I feel the pressure of her fingers warm and slender,
As in sleeping dreams and waking I have felt it many times,
Just as when of old I listened to that ditty, quaint and tender,
Till the boughs that waved above us caught the cadence of the rhymes.

And my heart throbs loud and quickly as I hear it rising clearer.
Youth is mine, its hopes and visions, dreams and plans, are mine again.
Earth is fairer, life is sweeter—aye, and heaven itself seems nearer—
To me as I list in fancy to that ne'er forgotten strain.

—Chambers' Journal

KATTIE'S WEDDING.

It was the last Thursday in Epiphany and fair day in Gurteen. The one and only street the village boasted of was thronged with folk laughing and chattering as none but an Irish crowd can laugh and chatter. Indeed so great were their numbers that to get along at all you had to turn aside and scramble through the shingle, where the boats lay within shouting distance of their owners' doors. But there was little buying and selling that day in the tiny hamlet on the ocean's edge. The little pink "boneen" and the matronly, hoary headed sow slept more or less peacefully in the long line of carts, with their high red crates, that lined the narrow footpath, as nobody seemed to want them. In fact, they were there more to give the assembly the "tone" of a fair, for all men knew that "matchmaking" was the real business of today, the last fair day before Lent, and so the last great chance to make a match.

Threading their way up and down the village passed the "boys" in Sunday best, ostentatiously ignoring the girls, who, in their turn, tried to look as if they did not know that they were verily in the marriage market and as if they liked wearing boots. On the green beneath the chapel there was dancing to the lilt of Larry O'Toole's fiddle, square dances, in which partners sailed up and down past each other with heads held high, as if a lifelong coolness had just sprung up between them, while their busy feet never ceased to mark the rhythm on the "floor;" jigs, reels, singles and doubles, when some bolder spirit would "throw the shoes off av him" and take his place on the door that lay on the grass for such as ventured a "pas de seul." Then Blind Larry would screw his old eyes tight shut and make his bow dance on the strings to the tune of "The Trip to the Cottage" or "The Humors of Whisky," while the rest of the assembly gathered round, beating time with head and foot, with such remarks as, "'Tis he have the elemint fur dancin," "Haven't he a great warrant throw the legs, now?" "Wisha, more power to ye're elbow, Larry!"

But while youth disported itself on the green, age and experience abode in the village, matching their sons and daughters in holy wedlock. In such cases it is not necessary that Corydon and Phyllis should be acquainted, but Corydon senior must be satisfied that Phyllis does not come empty handed. Nevertheless the young people sometimes managed to introduce some romance into the transaction, and of one such case I shall tell.

While Blind Harry "ris jigs" for the fair, a party of four people were taking solemn counsel in a little shanty by the beach. This was Andy Lyneham's forge, and Andy himself was in the midst of the conclave—not that he took part in it. He had nothing to say, as a rule, and now he listened sullenly while his old mother was making a match for him with the daughter of Terence Flannigan, who, with his wife, completed the number of conspirators.

"Andeed, Mrs. Lyneham, ma'am," Mrs. Flannigan was saying as she threw back the great hood of her long cloak, "andeed, ma'am, 'tisn't like as if me dater Kattie hadn't ne'er a boy at all afther her. There's whips av thim wantin her."

"There is that!" corroborated her husband emphatically.

"But, you see, ma'am," she went on, "me an me hŭsban wants some one that have a thrade. Times is so bad wid the land."

"Thrue fur ye, Mrs. Flannigan, ma'am," said the other woman, with gracious politeness. "Thim as has land is robbed intirely these times. 'Tis well fur ye, Terence Flannigan, that ye've been puttin by a bit av money thim 30 years," she added cunningly.

"Little enough, ma'am, little enough," said Terence, "but I'll give Kattie's man a hundred poun the day afther the marryin. Divil a pinny more."

"Faix, thin, 'tis no great match afther all," said Mrs. Lyneham, gathering her heavy cloak closer about her as if to go.

"Look at that, now!" cried the other woman, flaring up. "Maybe ye wouldn't get an offer like it so handy agin. Where would the likes av ye git a hundred poun or half av it?"

"An where would ye git a fine, hearty lump av a boy like my Andy? The best smith that ever dhruve a nail in a shoe!" cried Mrs. Lyneham, fairly dancing with rage.

"Howld ye're whisht, mother. Ye've a dale too much chat out av ye," said the bone of contention, rising from the anvil where he had been sitting chewing a straw in silence. "I'll take the gurl, Terence," he went on. "The owld woman wants help in the house, an 'tis time I tuk some one, I suppose."

"'Tis, sure," said Terence. "Give me a howld av ye're hand, Andy. There, now," shaking the blacksmith's fist heartily, "I won't break me word to ye about the money."

"I believe ye," said the blacksmith, lounging out of the door.

"Well, there, now, the match is made," said Mrs. Lyneham, smoothing back her gray hair under her snow white mutch, "an divil a steadier boy there is in Gurteen than Andy. 'Tis the lucky girl ye're darter is this day, Mrs. Flannigan."

"Faix, ma'am," answered Mrs. Flannigan, bridling, "I knows thim as would give golden guineas to be matched with Kattie, though indeed, ma'am," she added, softening, "I have no word to say agin Andy."

"'Deed he minds his business well an niver touches a sup of dhrink," said the fond mother proudly. "Only if he wouldn't spind so much time footthering about with thim little hins, bad luck to thim, that lays an egg no bigger than a marble," she added plaintively as the trio started down the village street.

The "little hins" alluded to were the one extravagance, the sole form of dissipation, that the burly blacksmith allowed himself and were a thriving family of bantams that he loved as his life. With his own hands he had made a wire inclosure for them behind the forge, and none but himself might feed them. His thrifty mother had a huge contempt for his "little owld chickens," as she called them, for by their fruits she valued them, and Julia Bralligan at the corner shop gave only fourpence a dozen for the dainty eggs.

But while the plotters plotted in the grimy forge the victim of their machinations was out on the green demurely footing it opposite Patsey O'Rourke, her partner in the "pattern."

She was a tall, slim maid, with the jet black hair and exquisite gray eyes seen so often in the south. He was an immense young fellow, red haired and freckled like a wren's egg, with eyes that looked as innocent and as simple as a child's. He was perfectly happy now, going through the intricate figures of the dance clumsily enough while he feasted his silly blue eyes on his pretty vis-a-vis, who seemed strangely absorbed in her own thoughts just at present. When at length the trippings to and fro, the "linking partners" and mad whirls in the middle of the floor, and the stately curtseys came to an end, Kattie whispered to her big partner as he handed her cloak to her:

"Come here, beyant, a minute."

Patsey's eyes danced with joy at the prospect, and seeing an air of mystery in the girl's manner he assumed such a knowing expression on his guileless countenance as made him look more like a very wicked baby than anything else. Soon the pair had wandered away up the hill behind the old gray chapel and stood by the wishing well, where a thousand little rags of all colors and texture fluttered from the boughs of the hawthorn bush, each the record of some wish accomplished by the good St. Bridget for one who drank of her holy well in perfect faith. Then they halted, the girl sitting on the low wall that went half way round the edge of the water, while her companion stood awkwardly by, with a dumb adoration written in every line of his simple, manly face.

"Tuesday is Shrove," said Kattie suddenly, intently watching the fall of a pebble into the clear water.

"Eh?" said Patsey, mystified, and he bent over to watch the rings that formed where the stone had fallen, looking from them to Kattie's face in a vain endeavor to see how her speech applied.

Kattie gave a short sigh and tried again.

"D'ye see the chapel below?" looking down herself to where it leaned against the hill.

"I do that," answered Patsey, with relief, feeling that he had failed miserably before.

Then there was a pause.

"Well?" said Kattie, a little crossly, flinging a whole handful of pebbles into the water.

Patsey's face fell again. He thought it easy to look down at the chapel, but he evidently had not done all that was expected of him.

"'Tis a mortal nate roof," he hazarded, looking inquiringly at his companion's face. "'Twas Paddy Collough's father-in-law put the slates on it."

Kattie blushed to the tips of her pretty ears, and her lips trembled, while Patsey, who, dense as he was, saw her distress, looked piteously around him for inspiration, finally blurting out:

"I'm almost sure he was his father-in-law."

Another silence, and then Kattie, bending her head very low, said hardly above a whisper:

"I'll be there—in the chapel—a' Tuesday mornin."

"Will ye now?" cried the unfortunate Patsey, his honest face lighting up. "Goin to see the weddin's? Sure, I'll be there too."

"'Tis to be married mealf I'll be goin," cried the girl, looking up with burning cheeks.

"Ye—ye to be married?" gasped the man, so white that the freckles seemed to increase and multiply to an alarming extent.

"Yes, me," said Kattie, beginning to grow cool the moment he lost his head.

"Be the holy"— burst out Patsey.

"Whisht! Ye mus'n't curse," said she quickly.

"An who to?" he asked in a choking voice.

"Andy, the smith."

"I have no word agin Andy," said he slowly, "only — oh, Kattie, asthore!" stretching out a great, brown hand.

"Why didn't ye say that long ago?" said Kattie, stealing a glance with eyes full of [illegible]

"Kattie, dear, why would ye marry him?" said Patsey, looking the picture of abject misery.

"Maybe nobody else would have me," said she, with a mischievous smile.

"Nobody else!" almost shouted he. "Sure, wouldn't I"—

"Be aisy, will ye," warned Kattie, with the common sense that rarely deserts her sex on these occasions. "Be aisy. Ye needn't tell the whole parish. Listen to me," she went on quickly. "'Tis only today the match is making, but well I know the Andy's owld mother won't let the chance pass. And Andy himself, decint boy, don't care who he gets to rid up the house fur him. So ye'll see me married to him a' Tuesday if ye don't"—

"Don't what?"

"If ye don't be said by me."

"Sure, I will. Only tell me what to do."

"Faith, ye want some one badly to mind ye. 'Tis little sinse av ye're own ye have," said Kattie, looking, with love in her eyes, at the eager face that confronted her.

"Well, I'll be said by ye," said Patsey firmly. "Only spake the word."

"Well, thin," said the girl, looking down, "be nixt to me overright the althar a' Tuesday, an—an bring—a ring wid ye."

"Aye, faith, will I," said Patsey emphatically. "An what will happen thin?"

"Lave that to me, ye omadhaun," said Kattie, giving his hand the tiniest squeeze as she turned to go, but Patsey laid his hand on her arm, and, with his honest face full of joy, asked in an incredulous tone:

"An is it me ye want, Kattie dear?"

"Divil another!" said Kattie, looking up fondly.

"Look at that now!" exclaimed Patsey delightedly, "an ye love me!"—as if it were too good to be true—"me! An the red head av me an—all!" he repeated.

"Aye, do I! Have conduct now, will ye!"

But it was too late, and there was nothing left to do but to smooth her hair as she walked on by his side.

A bright March sun shone on the little

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 7, 1894

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE.

Subject of a Sermon Preached by Rev. Mr. Trotter

In the Baptist church yesterday morning the Rev. Mr. Trotter preached on the "Year of Jubilee." Text Lev. XXV, 8-13. The great Gospel facts symbolized therein were presented in a fresh and forcible manner.

In the evening the theme was "The Christian's Self Solicitude." II John, 8 verse: 'Look to yourselves that we lose not the things which we have wrought but that we receive a full reward."

He first showed the reason for this command, in that Christians are apt to overlook their own defects in their scrutiny of others, and that error is rampant and anti-Christ in various forms is abroad. He then explained what was meant by looking to yourselves; the danger of disregarding the injunction as illustrated in the case of Samson, David, Peter and others, and finally dealt with the encouragement to keep this command, [illegible] that we may receive a full reward.

ONE MAN'S OPINION.

Editor of the Times:

I have been a ratepayer in the town of Peterborough for a number of years, and therefore have a great interest in its municipal affairs. I have not a word to say against any single member of the Council of 1894, and my remarks, I trust, will not be construed as disparaging to them. I would like to see some of the young men of the town in the next Council. A number of them are candidates. They are energetic, possessed of splendid business capabilities, and ably befitted to administrate the affairs of the town wisely and well. These gentlemen have had the courage to come out for the contest, and they deserve the support and vote of every man who believes in giving "young blood" a chance. The young voters of Peterborough should see to it that they are represented on the Council board. The older ratepayers should encourage integrity and ability by voting for the young candidates.

AGED RATEPAYER.

A LIQUOR CASE.

Editor Times.

Allow me space in your valuable paper to call attention to some very extraordinary proceedings on the part of the Chief of Police. Over a week ago a well known hotel keeper was summoned to appear before the Magistrate on a charge of selling liquor without a license. In other cases of a similar nature the accused are given a hearing at once, but in this case the date of trial was put off for over a week, or until Tuesday, the day following the election. Why was this done? Was it a stroke of diplomacy on the part of the chief? Did he fear that his "head" would be placed in a more dangerous position if the case came to trial before the election? If not, was it to allow him sufficient time to collect evidence upon which to secure a conviction? Supposing the latter is the sole reason, is it right that a charge should be preferred against a man, when there is no evidence to warrant it, and when such evidence has to be collected afterwards? I merely wish to call the attention of the public to this piece of injustice, and know no better way than through the columns of THE TIMES.

FOR DIVULGING SECRETS.

A Clerk in the Educational Department Suspended.

Esten Williams, a clerk in the Education Department, has been suspended and an investigation is in progress.

The charge is that Williams was in the habit of making copies and photographs of letters and documents in the Department for political purposes. It is claimed by Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, that certain members of the P. P. A. induced Williams to take this course.

The investigation is now in progress and how far the charges against Williams are justified remains to be seen.

The papers copied or photographed are supposed to relate to school book contracts and the Separate schools.

During the last campaign for the Local House, Williams made a notable speech at one P. P. A. rally, and it is said, told how business was done in the department.

His friends warned him to be careful, for such utterances would soon come to the ears of Mr. Ross.

Mr. Ross says that Williams has handed back papers he had in his possession when the affair came out.

Williams resides at Lambton Mills and is a son-in-law of Col. Goodman, of Parkhill, a strong Conservative. The young man was appointed by the late Mr. Crooks. His salary is $800.

FOR NON-SUPPORT.

A Hotel Keeper in Barrie Arrested on this Charge.

BARRIE, Jan. 5.—At the instance of Chief of Police Williams, of London, Ont., Chief King arrested Austin A. Beares this morning for non-support of his wife in London. Beares is in company with Remohr, of the Clarkson house, here, and is the license holder for said hotel. Sometime ago action was taken against Beares for non-support of his wife, but it is said that all he has since sent her is five or ten dollars, and as this was insufficient, information was laid a second time. When Chief King went to the hotel to make the arrest he asked:

"Is Mr. Beares in?"

"Yes," said the bartender, "he is in bed. Just wait a minute until I call Mrs. Beares, who is downstairs."

"Oh, he is married then?" said the wily chief.

"Yes," said the bartender.

Mrs. Beares No. 2 was then called and showed the chief to her husband's room. Beares was taken into custody, and a constable will arrive tomorrow from London and take him to the Forest City. Beares did not seem very much surprised at his arrest.

FASHTON, OF DUNDAS.

Found Murdered With His Supposed Wife Near Stamford, Conn.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 5.—William Fashton, 29 years old, who belonged to Dundas, Ont., and a woman, thought to be his wife, were found dead near the crossing of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway, a mile from the station yesterday. The woman's body was bruised, and there are two deep gashes in her head as though made by a blunt instrument. The crossing where the couple were found is a lonely spot, and it is thought they were murdered. The couple stopped at a hotel in Greenwich two nights ago, and it is said Fashton had considerable money about him. This was not found when his clothes were examined.

Off for the Yellow Sea.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The Herald's London correspondent says:—Orders have been received at the Portsmouth dockyard to fit out for sea without delay six warships. It is the accepted opinion in such naval circles here as are acquainted with this significant fact that the immediate destination of these vessels is the China seas.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Failures in Ontario.

According to the failure statistics, prepared by R. G. Dunn & Co., for the year 1894, there have been 836 assignments in Ontario, with total assets of $5,139,776 and liabilities $8,298,442.

A Runaway.

A horse attached to a cutter, owned by Mr. J. B. Williams ran away on Saturday on George street. The animal was captured after running about a mile. The cross bar of the cutter was broken.

A Case of Heart Failure.

An agent of the Coulthard, Scott Co. named William Fair, of Millbrook, while in Oshawa Saturday was prostrated by heart failure, and for a time his recovery was doubtful. He is being cared for at Reeve Coulthard's residence and is likely to recover.

A Peterborough Boy Injured.

Mr. Francis Forsythe, foreman of the Queen street firehall, Toronto, who was seriously injured in the big fire of yesterday morning, is an old Peterborough boy, and has many friends here. He was a nephew of William Forsythe, who formerly kept the old Globe hotel.

Another Crowded House.

The Marks Bros. concluded a week's engagement at the Opera House on Saturday night. The house was packed to the doors. The performance was up the mark in every respect, "The Golden Giant" being the play presented. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience, as evinced by liberal applause.

On Citizenship.

At the meeting of the Fortnightly Club, which will be held in the Judge's Chambers, Court House, tomorrow night, the following program will be carried out: Paper, "Citizenship," by Rev. J. C. Davidson, M. A. Special speakers, Mr. Mulholland, Mr. E. B. Edwards, M. A., Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, B. A., and Mr. T. M. Hayes. Open discussion.

Water Pipes Burst.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the water pipes in the ladies' waiting room at the Grand Trunk station burst. In a few minutes the room was flooded with a couple of inches of water, which, freezing almost as quickly as it escaped, formed a small sized skating rink. A number of men with shovels spent an hour in cleaning out the room.

Kicked by Horses.

One day last week while Mrs. Matthews, wife of Mr. Wm. Matthews, of Lakefield, stable, and was standing was in the behind a horse,it suddenly kicked her, striking her on the head and cutting the scalp. The cut was of no consequence but Mrs. Matthews had a very narrow escape, for if the horse had struck her fair it would undoubtedly have killed her.

A Deplorable Calamity.

The management of the Toronto Globe, a paper which reaches nearly every home in Ontario, will have the sympathy of the press of the country in the loss of its building and plant, which were totally destroyed by fire on Sunday morning, and it would indeed be a great calamity to Canada, did not the certainty exist, that in a very short time the Globe will again be in a building of its own. Another Canadian institution, Miller & Richards, type founders, is also a total loss. This firm is known, perhaps, as none other throughout Ontario, by the hundreds of printing concerns which have done business with it. It is sincerely to be desired that this firm will be able to resume business at once.

Furniture.

Nearly every family needs a little additional furniture every year, and it is an advantage to know where you can get what you want and know that you are getting value. A. Clegg has just what you need. He is buying for you every day. Always looking for best values for you, he knows that goods well bought are half sold. If you need furniture you cannot afford to buy until you have seen his stock and learned his prices. Furniture of all grades: Three good kitchen chairs for $1; a good hardwood bed for $2; a good hardwood bedroom suite, oak finish, for $12, e., etc. Remember the place—437 George street.

THE ELECTION.

Polls Open at 9 This Morning—The Candidates.

This is election day. At 9 o'clock this morning the polls will open for the election of members to the council, and will remain open until 5 o'clock this afternoon. The four polling places in town are located as follows.

WARD ONE—William VanEvery's shop on Rubidge street.

WARD TWO—In the Market Building on George street.

WARD THREE—In Metheral Brothers' shop on Aylmer street.

WARD FOUR—In William Lee's shop on Smith street.

The contest in each ward promises to be hot, and in some wards the vote will be close. There are 21 candidates in the field, out of which number 12 only can be elected. There are good men in the field, whose election is imperative if the best interests of the town are to be consulted. Out of the 21 candidates offering, a council can be elected that will be not only beneficial to the town, from a standpoint of wise and economical administration, but an honor to the town and to the electors. The candidates in the four wards are:

WARD ONE.	WARD TWO.
Henry Best,	Thos. H. G. Denne,
Wm. Breckenridge,	James L. Hughes,
Thomas Cahill,	Joseph Mills,
John McNaughton,	Henry Phelan,
George B. Sproule,	G. W. Sawers.
Wm. H. White.

WARD THREE.	WARD FOUR.
Robert Clinkscale,	James Bogue,
Adam Dawson,	Thomas Brady,
G. M. Roger,	Francis Mason
John Sawers,	Michael Quinlan,
Edward Sutton.	Erastus B. Stone.

Of the old Council all but two members are before the electors for re-election. The new blood offering comprises the following gentlemen:

Messrs. T. H. G. Denne, Henry Phalen, Joseph Mills, James Bogue, E. B. Stone, Robert Clinkscale, William Breckenridge, George B. Sproule, Michael Quinlan, John Sawers.

IN ASHBURNHAM.

Four councillors will be elected in Ashburnham. There are six candidates in the field. The list is:

Alex. Rutherford
H. Calcutt
Harry Morgan
William Wand
John Smith
John Craig

TO THE ELECTORS.

The records in the town's service of such men as Councillors Best, Cahill and Dawson are the best evidence of their worth and usefulness in the Council. There should be no hesitancy on the part of the electors in re-electing them.

The police and legal departments of the town have long been in the hands of incompetent men. The candidates who are in favor of re organizing these departments are the candidates the electors should place on the Council board. It is in the interest of the town that the departments mentioned should be attended to.

Only wise and economical government can reduce the expenditures of 1895 to the figures that will represent the receipts at the present rate of assessment. This year's council will have to shoulder debts incurred by the old Council. To do this a reduction must be made in the running cost of departments. A re organization of the police and legal departments will effect a great saving. Vote for the candidates who will effect this saving.

Of the most pressing reforms it is to be hoped the new Council will institute, is the repeal of the present liquor license by-law, which falls lamentably short of the purpose for which it was intended. Magistrate Dumble decided that it was imperfect, and would not hold water. Its repeal is in the interest of the town, and in the interest of the electors. Ascertain before voting the stand of the candidates on this most important of municipal issues.

A rat hole in the civic treasury through which many thousands of dollars have disappeared, has been the legal department. The Mason case, which could have been compromised for a few dollars, was appealed until now the costs amount to an enormous sum, and the outfall sewer are two instances of rank incompetency. Candidates who will see to it that this rat-hole is stopped up, by placing the department in other and more able hands, are the candidates the electors should vote for today.

The police department, as it is run at present, affords four men a fat living for practically doing nothing. The police work of Peterborough does not require the attendance of four men unless the residential portion of the town is to be protected by patrol. As it is, the residential streets are absolutely at the mercy of midnight vandals, while George street, between Brock and Charlotte, is traversed hourly by two officers and a night watchman. The police department is sadly in need of reorganization, and the candidates who will vote in council for it, are deserving of the heartiest support of the electors.

It is most desirable that a little "new blood" should be infused into the Council. With a few of the old members of the Council to balance it, and the rest composed of the youth, energy and courage of the town's rising young men who are offering for the position, the Council of 1895 would be a tower of strength, destined to guard the town's interests, as they never were before. Such men as T. H. G. Denne, Henry Phelan, Joseph Mills, George B. Sproule, E. B. Stone, Robert Clinkscale and Michael Quinlan, are eminently befitted to serve on the Council board, and their defeat at the polls will be a calamity to the town, which should be averted by giving them the support they merit.

There has been too much leniency exercised in the past towards delinquent ratepayers. Men who are well able to pay their tax bills are one, two, three and even four years in arrears. There should be no discrimination in a matter of this kind, and Councillors should be loath to sue for an extension of time on behalf of their supporters, except in the most extreme and meritorious cases; even the wisdom of these exceptions is questionable. The town found it necessary to borrow $10,000 last year, and why should the town be brought face to face with a necessity that would not exist were all the tax bills paid? This deplorable laxity was brought up in last year's Council, but beyond a verbal disapproval of the system nothing was done. Elect men to the new Council who will attend to this matter.

WHITE GOODS SALE

Well Under Way! Better Than Ever!

We might talk till doomsday about supremely good values and astonishing bargains, but unless you get to looking the emphasis is all lost. As a matter of fact, we never had such money's worth to offer before. People were buying Sasturday as though the sale was limited to one day. We anticipated the biggest possible demand and got goods enough to satisfy all demands. That is part of business policy. Small lots are never advertised her. and those who're quite confident we're always losing money have small satisfaction for their pains. This business is run on business principles, however paradoxical tha may seem, and all this month we purpose distributing PERFECTLY NEW GOODS at the lowest prices on record. For instance

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

Mayor Stewart Re-Elected in Hamilton—Pierce Carries Norwood for the Reeveship—Returns From Millbrook, Lindsay, Kingston and Other Places.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Jan. 7, 9 p.m.—The returns are not all in and it is impossible to forecast whether Kennedy or Fleming have carried the mayoralty. The vote, however, will be very close, and the winning candidate will not have a majority exceeding 100. The excitement is intense. Some of the outlying sub-divisions are yet to be heard from.

TORONTO, 10 p.m.—The mayoralty contest in this city is so close that even at this hour the election of either candidate is not assured. Both sides claim the election.

TORONTO, 11.30 p.m.—Kennedy's majority is thirteen.

In Lindsay.

LINDSAY, Jan. 7.—The elections here resulted as follows:—Mayor, H. Walters; Reeve, R. Kylie; 1st deputy, Jos. Staples; 2nd deputy, William Robson; Councillors, Messrs. Touchburn, Pedlar, Winters, Brady, Gillogby, Robinson, Bryans, Graham, Killaby.

ECHOES OF THE FIRE.

INSURANCE COMPANIES SUFFER A LOSS OF $500,000.

The Globe Carried $100,000 Insurance, Leaving it a Loser of $50,000—The Injured Firemen Doing Well—A List of the Insurance Companies Losses.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, January 7.—A total loss of $[illegible] to the insurance companies, six buildings and the contents destroyed, 250 men thrown out of work, one fireman killed and five injured—such is the record of the biggest fire that has ever occurred in Toronto.

The corner of Yonge and Melinda streets and the latter as far as Jordan street present a sad spectacle to the observer who sees as a reminder of former architectural beauty, crumbling, blackened walls and heaps of debris.

The injured firemen who are at the general hospital are getting along nicely. They all passed a good night, and if nothing unforeseen happens it is just a question of time when they will be restored to good health and able to take their places with their comrades, there to listen once more for the clanging bell and the cry of "Fire," and like all true firemen to be ever ready for the call of duty.

The Globe will lose $50,000 over and above the insurance.

THE WALLS MUST COME DOWN.

Newfoundland News.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 7.—The Marine Court of Enquiry, considering the loss of the British steamer Peninsula, which was lost in Shelley's Cove, Nfld., while en route from Pelley's Island to New York, rendered a decision today finding Capt. Gundry negligent in not taking soundings. The Court decides that the loss of the steamer resulted by his neglect by not doing so, and suspended his certificate for six months, but advised that he be allowed to act as chief mate during that time.

A Montrealer Lashed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Alphonse Laurendeau received 25 lashes in the Montreal jail this morning. This is the maximum number given at one time. He assaulted his own little daughter. At the end of his two year sentence he gets 25 more.

IS FAMINE STRICKEN.

GREAT SCARCITY OF FOOD AND FUEL IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Many People Actually Starving—On the Verge of Famine—A Movement on Foot to Start Soup Kitchens—Distress is Rampant.

Special to the Times.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—A World special from St. John's, Nfld., says: Relief organizations are at work in every section of this city and its vicinity. They report that whole blocks of tenements inhabited by laborers and poor fishermen are without food or fuel, and with the thermometer but a little above zero, their sufferings are dreadful.

No concerted action has been taken yet to alleviate the general misery, but private charity has been strained to the utmost.

TO START SOUP KITCHENS.

Lady O'Brien, the wife of Sir Terrance O'Brien, Governor of the Colony has invited the women of this city to meet at the Government House to arrange for starting soup kitchens. The Governor will call a meeting of men a day or two later.

The problem is most serious. It is not a case of helping a few hundreds, but of feeding thousands in a country without a bank, without money, without opportunities of assistance, with the whole business community insolvent, commerce paralysed and the Government on the verge of bankruptcy.

JAPAN DESIRES PEACE.

SHE REALIZES THAT THE WAR SHOULD BE ENDED.

A Settlement is in Progress and Representatives Will Meet to Effect it—Japan Can Now Retire Without Ignomy.

Special to the Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Japanese advices from Tokio under date of Dec. 21st say: Trustworthy signs now point to a speedy peace. In the last two weeks the Chinese hopes of resistance have broken down, and a formal offer of direct negotiations have been made. After the capture of Port Arthur the Chinese appeared to realize the necessity of immediate action, and they declared their readiness to appoint a representative of sufficient rank and invest him with full powers from the central government. The choice of an appropriate place of meeting remains to be considered.

SHANGHAI NAMED.

The Chinese have designated one of their own ports, Shanghai, as a desirable rendezvous, but to this Japan will not consent, and considerable time has been lost in discussing the locality but the movement towards the place is proceeding, however, in apparently good faith on the Chinese part and with sincerity by the Japanese.

BRING IT TO AN END.

The Japanese Ministers are thoroughly aware that the interests of their country will be most worthily served by bringing the war to an end with the least possible delay. The task before them is not an easy one, for the strong and active military class is bent on further conquest on a large scale and the public feeling is all in favor of inflicting additional punishment on the enemy and demanding inordinate terms of settlement.

COREA'S GOVERNMENT REORGANIZED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Chinese advices from Seoul, under date of December 20, say that since the departure of the preceding mails a complete reorganization of the Corean Government has taken place under Count Inouyon's energetic dictation. The removal of Tai Won Kun from the Prime Ministry has been followed by disclosures implicating several members of the Cabinet in plots against the Japanese and in secret communication with the Chinese Court.

INSTIGATED BY OFFICIALS.

It is now established beyond dispute that the incessant Tong Hak insurrections are not due to popular discontent, but have been directly instigated by officials in the Corean capital with the purpose of thwarting the projects of the Japanese representatives and preventing the extension of Japanese influence.

Count Inouyon has sought to establish nearer relations with the throne, signifying his inclination to look on its occupant as the real centre of authority.

The results of this new departure are said to be thus far satisfactory. Since the intercourse between the King and Count Inouyon began to take this confidential form it is noticed that the Tong Hak outbreaks have been suspended.

HIS EX. IS NOT A PATRON NOW.

The Ottawa Winter Carnival Will be Held Under Gubernatorial Displeasure.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—His Excellency, Lord Aberdeen, today wrote Sir James Grant, M. P., withdrawing his patronage from the Ottawa carnival. His Excellency wanted a postponement of the affair, and in his letter says that the feelings of those opposed to the carnival are as much entitled to consideration as those of opposite opinion. His Excellency's closing sentence is that "it would be inappropriate to hold the carnival so soon after the public funeral of the eminent Canadian whose loss was mourned by the Empire."

The Impoverished Inhabitants.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Canon Hurst, formerly the Newfoundland agent of the Colonial Church Society, has written to the newspapers, enclosing a letter from Dr. Blot, government inspector of schools in Newfoundland, describing the misery prevalent in the colony. Dr. Bolt says "The fire of 1892, from which we still are suffering, was a slight disaster in comparison with the present one. Then we had ready help, now we seem to stand alone. Some will say: 'The disaster is of your own making and you must bear it alone.' This is only true of those who brought the trouble, who foresaw the crash and grabbed all the gold and silver." Dr. Blot appeals for aid and Canon Hurst offers to receive donations.

Purloined a Purse.

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—A man named Hurd stole a purse containing about $200 and a promissory note, from a farmer. Hurd left town but has been arrested at Detroit. A short time ago this same man was let off on suspended sentence for stealing a bag of oysters from one of our merchants.

It was 25 degrees below zero at Quebec on Saturday.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL.

PHYSICIANS SAY THERE IS NOT ANY NEED FOR ALARM.

A Consultation Held in Montreal—The Premier has no Organic Disease—He Needs Rest Only to Recuperate His Health.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Canada's Premier, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, arrived in Montreal late Saturday night in his private car by the regular express over the Intercolonial and Grand Trunk Railways. Accompanying him were Sir Frank Smith, of Toronto, and Hon. J. J. Curran and the Premier's secretary, J. L. Payne. The party went to the Windsor hotel and by previous arrangement consultation was held yesterday afternoon concerning the health of Sir Mackenzie, a subject in which Canadians are intensely interested.

Dr. Rogers came down from Ottawa and, with Dr. Birkett, examined Sir Mackenzie at the Windsor hotel on Sunday afternoon. The following official statement was given:

THE DOCTOR'S OPINION.

"A consultation took place today at the Windsor hotel between Dr. A. F. Rogers, of Ottawa, Sir Mackenzie Bowell's attending physician, and Dr. H. S. Birkett, of Montreal, specialist in throat diseases, respecting the present condition of the Premier's health. After thorough examination they decided that there was no organic disease of any part, lungs and heart being perfectly sound and healthy, and the entire cause of the cough which has given him so much trouble of late is a form of laryngitis mainly of a spasmodic character. They are of opinion that with proper rest and care the cough will be altogether cured in ten days or two weeks, and they have prohibited him from engaging in interviews for that period as conversation will tend to aggravate present irritated condition of throat."

BETTER IN A FEW DAYS.

It is said that the swelling of the glands of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's throat, which is the cause of the Premier's cough, can be easily remedied, and that in a few days he will be able to transact his arduous duties as usual.

The story that he was suffering from whooping cough is not correct, but the symptoms were similar, which of course gave rise to the rumors to that effect.

Lord Aberdeen received, on the way from Halifax on Saturday, a cablegram, conveying the desire of the Queen that enquiries should be made on Her Majesty's behalf as to the health of Prime Minister Bowell, and that a telegraphic reply should be sent.

CABLED TO THE QUEEN.

His Excellency at once communicated above by telegram with Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was travelling from Halifax via G. T. R., and received a prompt reply asking His Excellency to express his gratitude for the interest evinced in his behalf and saying that he was better and not considered to be at all seriously ill. His Excellency then sent a cablegram conveying the above for Her Majesty's information.

A SHOCKING CASE.

A Young Farmer Convicted of a Revolting Crime.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—In the Sessions Court today the case against David Thompson was concluded after a two days' trial. Thompson is a fine looking young fellow, 18 years of age, who worked for Farmer Matthews, of Scarboro. He was charged with "carnally knowing" the two daughters of Matthews, Louisa, aged 12, and Lydia, aged 9. The investigation before Magistrate Wingfield lasted four days. Louisa proved a "contumacious witness" and not a word could be got from her incriminating Thompson.

The charge, so far as she was concerned, fell through, but he was committed in Lydia's case. The case was a remarkable one, revealing a condition of moral surroundings, in connection with the children, that has induced Crown Attorney Dewart to bring their condition to the Children's Aid Society for treatment. Mr. A. F. Lobb defended Thompson and brought out a most shocking state of affairs about the little girls. Judge Morgan sentenced him to six months in the Central prison.

His Honor remarked that if he had been found guilty of the charge he would have received the extreme penalty of the law, which is imprisonment for life and the lash. He read the prisoner a severe lecture and took occasion to refer to the prevalent habit of men assaulting little girls, saying that if he had the creation of the punishment it would be that of mutilation as would effectually prevent a repetition of the offence.

Carnegie's Troubles.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 7.—At Homestead today there was little or no excitement. A final conference was held between Manager Schwab and the striking streamen of the mill and a settlement reached. The likelihood now of a strike of any proportions at Homestead is entirely removed. At Bradock everything was quiet with no indication of an outbreak. The strikers have called a meeting for next Monday at which they will take action on the ultimatum issued by the Carnegie Company. The latter is engaging men to take the place of strikers and a number of colored men were at work this morning in the ore yards, which the strikers had deserted.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 7, 1895.

Good morning!

It seems there is not much use in throwing cold water upon the Ottawa carnival scheme. But a good dose of hot water would fix it.

Since the fire the Globe is issued from the Empire office but its readers are cautioned not to fear traces of political heterodoxy in consequence. The most critical among life-long subscribers can rest assured, says the Globe, that there will be no hypodermic inoculation.

It is announced that the Emperor of Japan has conferred upon the Emperor of Germany the grand order of the Imperial Chrysanthemum. This is a step up for Willie. Up to date he has been known merely as an imperial daisy.

There is no likelihood that the suggestion of the Pall Mall Gazette, that "the only remedy for the ills of Newfoundland is in the incorporation of that colony in the Dominion of Canada," will be received with much enthusiasm by the people of the Dominion. Canada is not a hospital for sick colonies.

Anarchist Mowbray preached the gospel of murder throughout the United States, and not a finger was lifted against him by the authorities. But in Philadelphia he went too far; he said that the starry banner of the republic was no good. Without delay he was clapped into jail, and nobody can be found to give bail for him. The mystery is how John Burns has escaped imprisonment for his frank criticisms of American institutions.

If there is any crime on which it is possible for an honest man to rejoice, it is the unloading of "green-goods" by swindlers upon fools who are ambitious to be knaves. Farmer Orser, of Simcoe county, who was recently swindled by green-goods sharpers to the extent of $200 and poured out his complaint to the police, deserves a term in Central Prison rather than sympathy.

Some person with a turn for figures has made an elaborate calculation to show that ten thousand years from now there will be no Niagara Falls. This is really too bad. The thought of all that mighty grandeur ceasing to exist ten thousand years from now is enough to make us all shed bitter tears and feel like the very dickens. It would soothe our lacerated feelings some if the calculating person would kindly figure out where we shall be ten thousand years hence.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

The record of railroad construction for the year is not unfavorable so far as this continent is concerned. Depressed as the railroads were by the slowly lifting depression of 1893, unsettled by the action of a radical revision of the tariff, excited by what practically amounts to a revolution in the political sentiment of the country and disturbed by the labor troubles which culminated in the great outburst of anarchy in Chicago, it would not have been wonderful had the work of construction been totally abandoned. It is therefore encouraging to find that, up to the present, in spite of all the difficulties and discouragements, new track to the extent of 1919 miles have been laid in the United States and 322 miles in this country. It was only to be expected that the new mileage of 1894 should fall under that of its predecessors, but the fact that it is the smallest for the past twenty years is not so encouraging. Ever since the culminating year of 1887 when nearly 13,000 miles of new track were laid, the falling off in construction has been steady and marked. In 1890 the amount of new track had dropped to 5,670 miles. In 1891 it was 4,282 miles. In 1893 it was 2,655 miles, and finally last year it is 2,241 miles. These figures show how continuous the reduction has been until it has reached the apex of the descending triangle during the past year, it is to be hoped that this is the lowest point that construction is destined to fall to, but at present the indications of a revival of railway building are few and far between, and it is to be feared that the figures of 1895 will show very little improvement over those of 1894.

THE CORONER'S QUEST.

The Hamilton Spectator asks of what use is a coroner's inquest? Take the Hendershott murder case for example, The coroner's jury wrestled with the case for days. Witnesses were examined; the body was looked at, and a great deal of expensive palaver was had. The coroner's jury said it was a case of murder, and that William David Welter killed the victim at the instigation of John Hendershott, accessory. Then the magistrate took the case up, and is plodding through precisely the same evidence; barring the little contradictions which always crop up when the average witness endeavers to tell the same story twice. After much expensive palaver the magistrate will committ William David Welter for trial on a charge of murder, and John Hendershott will be committed for trial as an accessory before the fact. Then in due time the grand jury will take the matter up, and will listen to a third telling of the same old evidence, at the expense of the community, and will bring in true bills against William David Welter and John Hendershott as charged. Then the prisoners will appear in court, and the same old evidence will be given for the fourth time!

What necessity is there for all this? What is to be gained by so many tellings of the same story? Why should the people be compelled to pay for three acts of of this solemn four-act farce? If the grand jury must be maintained, surely it is not necessary to have two preliminary hearings before the case reaches that bulwark of liberty. Why not cut off the coroner's inquest, and have the only preliminary examination take place before the magistrate? It seems to us that to put a man on trial four times for the same offence is once or twice too often. The people should not be called upon to pay for investigations which can have no result.

A STEP TOWARD PEACE.

The Paris arbitration of the Behring Sea dispute was an object lesson in the practicability of permanent peace. While it is to be sincerely hoped that the value of the lesson will not be mimized by subsequent wrangling over terms of settlement, its main import cannot be destroyed—the living proof it gave of the fact that when nations agree to submit their differences to an international court, there is vitality enough in civilization to assure a reasonably just finding. It was inevitable that such a spectacle should suggest to lovers of peace the possibility of providing for the permenence of such a system; and now we are told that Mr. William Randall Cremer, a Radical member of the British House of Commons, is coming out to Washington during the present month, armed with a document, signed by 354 members of the British Parliament declaring in favor of a permanent treaty of arbitration between Great Britian and the United States. One would fancy that such a proposition emanating from a fully armed power and made to a but partially armed power, could not fail of a heartily favorable response. And such a treaty, could it be duly signed, would stand as as a practical invitation to the world to go and do likewise. So long as it stood between two nations only, it could be nothing more than a barrier to war, not a positive preventative. One of the nations could always break the treaty and declare war, and there would be no power to punish it. But the existance of this agreement would lead diplomats to think first of arbitration instead of war in case of a difference of opinion. Moreover, it would stand before the world as a permanent suggestion, and if signed at any time by three or more powers, would be a convention dangerous to break.

KATTIE'S WEDDING

(Concluded from yesterday)

gray chapel on the morning of Shrove Tuesday, making the slates look as new as they did on the day Paddy Culloough's father-in-law had put them on and burnishing the sullen old Atlantic until it looked as if it, too, had put on a glorious wedding garment in honor of its fisher children. And they, old and young alike, light hearted as the veriest children, thronged the street that skirted the beach or assembled in noisy groups on the green. Everybody was there and in holiday dress. Even Judy Brailligan had put up the three shutters, on which she kept her accounts in roughly chalked sketches of the various coins owed her, and had left the corner shop looking as if its eyes were shut, and little Timsie Dwyer had come all the way from Berehaven, wearing the whole of his wardrobe—four waistcoats and [illegible]—which was his conception of [illegible] costume. He was the merriest soul [illegible] the countryside, as ready for fun as [illegible] man at half his age, and now he was come, by special invitation of the little clerk, to see Terence Flannigan's daughter married.

Kattie was on the green with her people, who were re-enforced by Andy and his mother, but she gave little heed to them, for she was busy warning Patsey O'Rourke away with her eyes and eagerly looking for some one in the crowd.

Andy [illegible] not force his attentions upon her—in [illegible], he never looked at her at all—but [illegible] staring moodily out to sea while his mother sang his praises to all around. At last Kattie's eyes brightened, and leaving the others she went quickly to a little man, who came to meet her with a series of curvets like a rather stiff but high mettled steed, at the same time waving his hat round his head. It was little Timsie, who strove to express his congratulations thus by dramatic action, but Kattie soon put an end to the spirited display, and turning him sharply round led him away among the people. When they appeared again, the girl's eyes were full of eager expectation, while Timsie's comical old face was screwed up to an expression of intense enjoyment. Then there was a general movement toward the chapel, for the all important hour had come.

With jokes and laughter the crowd slowly crushed itself in through the open door until the building was densely packed, but with a different congregation from that which a few minutes before had chatted outside, for in his church the Irish peasant is the most devout and reverent of worshipers. As she entered, Kattie had called Patsey to her side with a look, and now he stood close behind her at the altar steps, while behind him Terence Flannigan and his wife were helping Mrs. Lyneham to lead her son forward. Timsie Dwyer had disappeared.

Presently the ceremony began, and the priest, a stranger doing duty for Father Murphy, who was in Macroom marrying his sister's daughter to a policeman, began at one end of the row of couples before him. Kattie stood trembling and casting glances of agonized expectation over her shoulder toward the door. Patsey still kept his position behind her, watching her intently, and by her stood Andy, but he seemed to listen to something outside. Father Gallagher had come within two couples of her and was putting all important questions to the man in his rich Kerry brogue. In another minute it would be for him who was to marry Kattie Flannigan to express his willingness to receive her as his "lawful wife according to the rite of the holy mother church," for this part of the ceremony is gone through with every couple before the good priest blesses the rings, sprinkling them with holy water, "in modum crucis."

One last despairing glance over her shoulder. Ah, her face brightens at last, and her pale cheeks glow once more, for there is a movement in the crowd that packs the aisle, and little Timsie Dwyer forces his way to where Andy Lyneham is standing. He gives a tremendous wink, that completely obliterates half his face, at Kattie; then, standing on tiptoe, whispers in Andy's ear. [illegible] he did, the lazy blacksmith seemed roused from his lethargy at last, and muttering, "Sure, I thought I heard thim," turned incontinently from the altar and fairly plunged through the people down the aisle, followed by Terence and Mrs. Flannigan, who besought him in loud whispers to come back, and pulling his mother after him, who, with great presence of mind, had firmly grasped the tails of his coat. Meanwhile Father Gallagher had reached the spot where the truant had stood, and while he paused for the little tumult to subside Kattie quietly motioned her Patsey to the vacant place next her, so when the crowd closed behind the struggling quartet he found a demure looking maiden and a man of 6 feet 3, with red hair and a face like a child in surprise, awaiting his services.

"Ye're name, me good man?"

"Patsey O'Rourke, ye're riverince," answered the bridegroom, who had darted a look at the bride for directions. Then the ceremony proceeded.

"Are ye, Pathrick O'Rourke, willing to receive Kathleen Flannigan, here present, as your lawful wife according to the rite of the holy mother church?"

"I beg ye're riverince's pardin," said Patsey.

"I will, I will," whispered Kattie, jogging him with her elbow.

"I will, I will," echoed Patsey loudly and turned to her again for further instructions, but she was listening with downcast eyes while the priest put the question to her, and as she answered "I will" in a low voice there arose outside the sound of eager voices mingled with shouts of laughter and the shrill "kick-kick-kick-kyar" of a bantam cock in sore distress, while a voice that was unmistakably that of Gurteen's blacksmith cried piteously, "For the love of hiven, don't ye pull the illegant tail out av him, Tim Dwyer." A subdued titter ran through the chapel, and some one said in a loud whisper, "'Tis the way Andy's little hins is got out"—a speech that was followed by a decided movement toward the door by the younger members of the congregation.

Again Father Gallagher had to pause until the commotion had subsided and the more sporting members of the congregation had retired to see the fun. During the pause Kattie flashed a look of triumphant meaning up at her betrothed, over whose innocent face the light of understanding gradually stole, and soon his great body was shaking with only half suppressed laughter that threatened to become so violent that she had to pinch him viciously to bring him to his senses. Then the rings were given up to be blessed, Patsey producing his from the lining of his hat and dropping it twice afterward before Kattie managed to run her finger deftly through it.

There was nothing left to do now but to sign the register, but before that could be the hunting party had returned to finish the ceremony. The first to appear was Mrs. Lyneham, her gray hair straggling over her face and breathless with the chase. Under one arm she held a bantam hen that covered her with its yellow feathers in its struggles. With the other she dragged her son forward, who gave all his attention to mollifying the feelings of an irate cock half hidden in his bosom. Timsie Dwyer, who had obligingly joined the rescue party, brought up the rear with two more or less suffocated bantams under each arm.

"Here he is for ye," panted Mrs. Lyneham. "'Twas the way—what are ye laughing at, Patsey O'Rourke?" for the newly made bridegroom was grinning gleefully from behind the newly made bride.

"I don't want him," said Kattie boldly. "I have no mind for a boy as goes huntin bins when he ought to be marryin before the howly althar."

"Arrah whisht!" said the old woman coaxingly. "The prashte will come back agin and say the words for ye."

"'Tis too late ye are, ma'am," said Kattie, tossing her head. "I couldn't be waitin for the likes av him, so I just took this dacint boy that was standin be me," and she put her hand sancily through Patsey's arm.

"'Tis no marriage," cried Mrs. Lyneham, with spirit, while Terence and his wife stood amazed.

"'Tis the only marriage I'll ever make," said Kattie, drawing closer to her husband and looking with burning cheeks straight at her mother.

"Have ye nothing to say?" cried Mrs. Lyneham, turning to Andy.

"Let her kape Patsey O'Rourke if she wants him," said Andy simply. "'Tis ye made the match for me, though I towld ye I had no mind for marryin at all, at all!" and he fell again to stroking the little bantam that tried to peck his way through his coat.

"Lave it as it is, Tirince," said Timsie Dwyer, coming forward and squeezing his hens tight with his elbows so that they should not interrupt him. "Lave it as it is, man, an give Kattie the hundhred poun all the same."

But honest Terence felt he had been fooled and shook his head obstinately until Kattie cast such a piteous look of beseeching at her mother that the good woman's eyes filled with tears, and she whispered:

"Tirince, avic, be said by Timsie Dwyer!"

And be was.—All the Year Round.

Imperturbable Islamism.

The religion of Mohammed in Palestine is that from which there are no secessions (apostacy is punished in Syria by lynching), to which there are few converts. It is near its birthplace in Syria, and it has therefore been preserved in a stern, unbending [illegible], neither progressing nor declining, [illegible] ready to turn to fanaticism, which [illegible] escape valve of its fervency. In the towns where it reigns by the right of majority as well as by authority it is today what it was in the days of the caliphs—a strangely earnest form of deism, which satisfies the aspirations of its followers as few religions have ever done. It is a religion which enters absolutely into the daily life and orders all things in its pale. The Damascene Moslems, who are devotees, live lives of considerable piety, with no distractions to divert them from the daily cycle of prayers as fixed and as immutable as the sun which regulates them. Life for the pious is a constant call to prayers.

The voices of the muezzins join at dawn in the strangest of strange concerts, which half awakens the sleeper and insinuates itself into his dreams. They are heard again at midday and again when the sun sinks. "To prayer, ye praying ones," is the cry heard in the bazaars on the day of meeting. There is little or no abatement of religious observance among the Syrian Moslems. The tree of Islam has ceased growing, but it is not dying, although the days of its splendor have passed away. It is difficult to avoid experiencing a feeling of envy for the spirit of contentment which Mohammedanism has created in its followers.

A sheik in the public library of Damascus, who was engaged in the laborious task of copying by hand the history of Saladin, said to me, with composure and absolute conviction, while speaking on the subject of languages, "My friend, one language only is required, one tongue, and that the tongue of God" (lisan Allah).—Fortnightly Review.

Awkward.

During the progress of the search expedition in the Sinaitic desert for Professor E. H. Palmer, who, with his two English companions, was basely murdered by native tribes, a strict watch was kept about the camp at night to avoid a surprise from the treacherous Arabs. The search party consisted of three Englishmen and their escort, composed mainly of Bedouins. The author of "Man Hunting In the Desert" relates an incident connected with the night guard:

Once one member, being little inclined to sleep, strayed somewhat away from the camp into the moonlight, when he was suddenly approached by one of the Bedouin sentries, who, bringing his Remington rifle to his shoulder, presented the muzzle at our friend and shouted some challenge in Arabic.

The victim of this display of vigilance grasped the situation and at once realized his danger. Not a word of Arabic could he recall, and the fellow was liable to shoot the next instant.

"Here, you fellow, don't be a fool! Don't shoot!" the Englishman shouted.

The Bedouin understood not a word of this, but remained motionless, finger to trigger, the mode plainly revealing the precision of his aim.

The situation was awkward. Our friend felt anything but comfortable as he stood facing that ugly looking muzzle, not daring to retreat or advance. Racking his brain for an Arabic word, he at last succeeded in producing the sentence:

"Ana Inglise"—in pigeon Arabic ("Me Englishman").

To his infinite relief, the guard lowered his rifle with the ejaculation, "Wahad Kawadja," which our friend construed as a permit to pass on.

Foods.

An authority on foods prescribes for those who take little exercise and accumulate flesh rapidly green vegetables growing above the ground, like peas, spinach and asparagus, and plain green salads, unmixed with poultry, meat or fish, such as lettuce, celery and cresses, with a French dressing. Very little starch food and white meats should be eaten, as chicken, lamb or mutton, but there should be consumed a great deal of fruit, toast and wheat bread. Avoid sweets, it is further advised, and use few stimulants, the best being Sauterne and Rhine wine in moderation.

For brain workers the same authority advises red meats, particularly beef, with starchy foods taken in the form of rice and wheat bread, all green vegetables that grow above ground, green salads every day, with French dressing containing plenty of oil, fruits in abundance and no sweets.—New York Times.

DARING BANK ROBBERY.

CASHIER IMPRISONED IN THE SAFE AND THE BANK FLEECED.

Debs' Case in Chicago—Trying to Quash An Indictment—Dead Bodies Picked Up all Around Vancouver.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 5.—The Ontario State Bank, in the town of Ontario, between this city and San Bernardino, was robbed of between $4,000 and $5,000 by two men this morning. The crime was committed when no one was in the bank except the cashier. Two men entered suddenly, drew revolvers, and ordered him to throw up his hands. He did so, and one of the robbers told him to go into the vault and followed him. The one who entered the vault kept the cashier covered while he gathered all the money in sight and then he backed out, shutting the door, and made the cashier a prisoner. The two men ran out, jumped into a buggy near by, and escaped.

DEBS' CASE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The motion to quash the indictments for conspiracy against E. V. Debs and the other directors of the A.R.U., besides sixty others who are accused of stopping the mails and interfering with inter-state commerce, came up before Judge Grosscup in the United States Court this morning. Attorney J. A. Harper in opening for the defendants, claimed that all the indictments should be quashed, because the word "feloniously" did not appear in any one of them; also because it had been held by Justice Harlan and others that men had a right to combine or conspire to strike. He also thought the indictments not specific enough. Mr. Milchrist spoke for the government. The only defendant present was Director William Burns.

Judge Grosscup reserved his decision until next Tuesday, when the cases are set for trial.

GHASTLY FINDS.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 5.—Many ghastly finds were made in Vancouver and the suburbs yesterday. Some skaters on Burnaby Lake unearthed a skeleton beneath a log moved to make a bon fire on the ice. The remains were those of John Cooper, who escaped from the asylum many years ago, and who had crawled beneath the log and died.

The remains of John Quinn were found on the railroad track after the Whatcome express had passed in the evening. Quinn had lain down on the track to sleep off the effect of a day's drunk.

A dead body was found in the Fraser river with a knife wound in his heart and a letter in his pocket from Henry Copp, Washington, D.C., to Heinrich Zeithow, Seattle. This was murder.

Fragments of a man were found along the C.P.R. track near Hammond, a few miles from Vancouver. His name or how he came to be so horribly mangled is not known.

Two other fatalities are reported in the interior.

HENDERSHOTT' CASE.

Investigation into the Death of the Young Southwold Farmer.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 5.—The investigation of the murder of Wm. H. Hendershott, charged against John Hendershott and Wm. D. Welter, was begun yesterday before the Police Magistrate. Rosa and Mary Lilly Hendershott, daughters of John, were the only witnesses examined, and then court was adjourned until today. The latter's story correspond with what she told the coroner.

Rosa's story also corresponded with what she said at the inquest, except that, instead of going to bed at her usual time Thursday evening before the murder, she came to St. Thomas between five and six on Thursday evening with the prisoner Mr. Welter, to meet her father, who left home in the morning for St. Thomas and was said to have gone thence to Sparta. They waited some time at Penwarden House for him to come and she thought it must have been as late as between seven and eight when they left for town, though she could not tell exactly.

She also said that Edith Welter, the affianced of the murdered man, was present at the breakfast table on the following Sunday morning when the insurance policies were produced, one from her father's pocket, and the other being brought from the bureau drawer by the witness. Her father swore he took them both out of the drawer.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

Hon. Mr. Starnes Struck Down Addressing the House.

QUEBEC, Jan. 5.—Hon. Mr. Starnes, member of the Legislative Council, has just been stricken with paralysis while addressing the House and is dying.

Mr. Starnes is a Montrealer.

Later.—Hon. H. Starnes is somewhat better and has gained his speech. There are hopes entertained of his recovery.

Peppered With Bullets.

WICHITA, Ks., Jan. 5.—A fight occurred near Cantonment, a trading post in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe county yesterday, between vigilants and horse thieves. Gus Gaskell and Sylvanus Bill, two of the vigilants were wounded, and three thieves were captured. The prisoners were strung up to the nearest tree and their bodies filled with lead.

On January 10th a meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute will be held in the Council chambers.

QUININE GATHERERS.

HOW THE HARDY CASCARILLEROS OF PERU OBTAIN THE BARK.

A Calling That Is Full of Dangers—How the Cinchona Trees Are Located and Stripped—The Natural Home of This Wonderful Medicine.

It was while serving on the South American station, with the comfortable old craft snugly moored in Callao harbor, that the writer, in company with a party of friends, took a trip inland to witness the operations of the celebrated cascarilleros or cinchona bark searchers. The mountains of Peru are the natural home of this wonderful medicinal tree, which is easily distinguishable from surrounding foliage by its beautiful lanceolate leaves and magnificent proportions. They frequently reach a height of 80 feet, straight as a lance, and covered with foliage. The leaves are large and of a deep, glossy green, relieved by delicate pink lines, producing a beautiful effect in the brilliant sunshine of that favored land.

The life of a cascarillero is one of peril, constant toil and incessant hardship. But it is his livelihood, and, with hungry mouths to feed, the poor but fearless native cuts loose from his wretched mountain habitation of bark, bidding his dusky family circle farewell, not knowing whether he will ever meet them alive again or not. Little does the consumer of the drug, who purchases it within the portals of some luxurious establishment, realize the danger and suffering involved in procuring the powder soon to be taken so lightly or carelessly for some real or fancied trouble.

The hunter plunges resolutely into the dark and mighty forest, striking well known trails, which lead far beyond the pale of civilization or even tracts of country utilized by the half savage hunter of game. With scarcely a change of clothing, encumbered with nothing save the rude implements of his calling, the cascarillero pushes on through tangled depths of jungle over rough and wind swept mountains, braving furious torrents and improvising frail swinging bridges of trees and tough creepers. Ever on the alert, with muscles developed and sinews hardened like steel, facing beasts of prey and slipping from beyond the slimy, fatal coils of huge serpents lurking amid the oozy mosses and foothills, the poor fellow eludes perhaps death in a dozen frightful forms to meet his fate through torture—dying by inches.

Although the pay of the quinine hunter is ridiculously small, it suffices to meet the simple requirements of himself and family, and as a class they are happy and contented with their lot in life. It is a vocation that is handed down from father to son, the elder schooling his progeny in all secrets pertaining to forest life and the search for the highly prized bark, but despite long years of experience, coupled with an intimate knowledge of the intricate trails leading to the cinchona vocations, many Indian hunters yearly lose their lives amid the bewildering depths of the dark, untrodden jungles of the vast wilderness.

Occasionally a number of hunters will pool their interests, starting out in company as a greater protection against disaster. Upon reaching a desirable spot, where the signs of paying trees are considered good, preparations for camping are at once made, a detail looking after that duty, while particularly keen eyed and lithe hunters pick out the loftiest trees, from the tops of which they scan the forest, quickly locating clumps of the precious cinchonas.

Then it is the musical, deep toned voices of the cascarilleros ring out in careless chorus through the silent recesses of the far spreading forest. The ring of axes and echoes of sturdy blows dealt lofty monarchs of the Cordilleras mingle in unison with the weird Indian chant, while the blazing campfires throw out a cheery welcome to any wayfarer, who, regardless of race or color, always is accorded a welcome to the camp of the quinine hunters. At night, when all labor is necessarily suspended, the members of the expedition gather about the well kept fire, when many a wild and stirring tale of thrilling adventure is recounted by the dusky searchers as they loll at ease on the long, velvety grass of the plateau.

The task of gathering cinchona bark occupies all the working hours between sunrise and set. The camp is early astir, with no time lost in culinary preparations. The making of savory [illegible] and aroma of strong, fresh coffee is confined to the two or three white men occasionally accompanying the party of hunters. This may comprise a botanist, sent on by some European museum to study the flora of the comparatively unknown region, an adventurous traveler or a hard pressed prospector in search of the precious metals. All find shelter and a hearty welcome within the frontier camp of cascarilleros.

Armed with knives and keen edged hatchets, the tree is quickly felled with all hands cutting, stripping and clearing the trunk from all foreign growth encumbering the trunk. This is a task of no small magnitude, frequently consuming days of constant and patient labor. The sharp edges of lancelike leaves, mingled with thorns and huge briers, lacerate and wound the hunters' flesh, who are not overburdened with clothing, their dark bodies exhibiting a network of scars and wounds, the result of their encounters with parasites and creepers as well as attacks from savage beasts prowling under cover of the jungle.

The bark is removed, cut into tiny curling strips and piled in some convenient spot, where one or more of the party are detailed to look after the drying process. This comparatively easy duty is generally awarded to one more or less disabled by wounds or accident in falling from some lookout tree or station. The thin portions curl up, drying rapidly, while the large, thick slices retain their shape and are easily packed for transportation. When all are pronounced ready by the "toriejo," or head hunter of the party, the bark is neatly lashed together with deftly plaited seizings of plaited grass and bound with broad, tough leaves as a protection to the cured bark. Then the Indians and peons shoulder their burdens, oftentimes striking the home trail with a weight of 150 to 200 pounds on their backs, secured by straps of broadly plaited plateau grass passed around their foreheads. With their jaws actively at work masticating the wonderful leaves of the strength giving coca, these small, slender natives will travel over a [illegible], 100 leagues, of the roughest mountain trails, conveying their hard earned quinine treasures to market, their hardships and privations lightened along the perilous pathway by the monotonous cadence of their native songs, to which they time their sure and steady pace.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

LAUDABLE ENTERPRISE

The Globe Issues on Time on Monday Morning.

Of enterprise and indomitable pluck the Toronto Globe has set an almost unprecedented example. On Sunday morning the Globe building and plant were rased to the ground, nothing but the books of the concern being saved. On Monday morning the Globe was issued as usual, and every subscriber in Canada and elsewhere received a copy of that paper, slightly disguised 'tis true, in a new dress, but still the Globe, with all its admirable ear marks and characteristics. Such enterprise is truly Canadian, and all Canadians, irrespective of political affection will commend it. The Globe's leading editorial in yesterday issue, bearing on the fire and the future of that paper, is published below:

For the first time in the fifty years of its publication the Globe was visited by fire on Sunday morning. The building is in ruins, and the presses, type-machines and all the accessories requisite for publication are involved in the destruction. But for the neighborly succor generously and promptly extended by the Globe's city contemporaries the paper, for the first time in its history, might missed an issue, or at all events would scarcely have been able to come so near to its general standard. It would be idle to disguise the extent of the blow. A newspaper which has been published for half a century cannot fail to suffer severely from so disastrous a fire as that which visited us on Sunday morning. Files and records which are probably not to be replaced were swept away and losses sustained that ordinary precautions in the way of insurance could not cover. It will not be difficult for our readers to realise the disappointment and regret that is felt in all departments of the business at the conversion of what was a comfortable and well-appointed newspaper publishing house into a heap of ruins.

It should be said at once, however, that the edge was taken off this keen disappointment by the way in which our city contemporaries came forward with offers of aid to tide the paper over the disaster. Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., of the World, was early on the scene and at once placed his press and other facilities at our disposal. Mr. W. J. Douglas of the Mail was also a witness of the fire while it was at its height, and in like manner said that the Mail building and its equipment was at our service, and newspaper men will appreciate the extent of Mr. Douglas' generosity and forethought when it is said that he allowed us the use of the Mail's mailing sheets in case it should be found that our own had either been destroyed or were inaccessible in the vaults. Mr. Bunting repeated these offers on his arrival. Mr. Wm. Douglas of the News and Mr. Crabbe of the Star generously offered the use of their type-machines or any other part of their plant that would be of service. Mr. John Ross Robertson of The Telegram and Mr. J. R. Robinson, editor of that paper, were early spectators of the fire, and Mr. Robertson intimated that we were welcome to every facility that his office affords, and his advice was simply invaluable. Mr. W. R. Brock, the president of the Empire Printing Company, and Mr. David Creighton, managing director of that paper, vied with other newspaper men in their offers of assistance. These offers of our confreres were not merely empty words, but were most earnestly pressed for acceptance. Mr. Creighton was as active in rendering assistance as if it were his own establishment that was in flames, and when the Globe took up its temporary home in the Empire offices on Adelaide street the staff received a most hospitable welcome. Even such a disaster as that of yesterday is not without its uses. It serves to bring out the feeling of brotherhood that remains latent until such an occasion calls it forth. It merely remains to express to the gentlemen named our grateful sense of their prompt generosity in the hour of calamity.

As for ourselves, we can only say that, while this disaster will discommode those concerned in the publication of the paper, we are in hopes that our readers and advertisers will be subject to no deprivation because of it. We shall keep on publishing a paper that will not suffer by comparison with that which was issued before the fire. Not a moment will be lost in the preparations for securing a commodious publishing-house to take the place of that which has been destroyed, and in the meantime we will not slacken our efforts to maintain the position the Globe has held in Canadian journalism.

TENDER CONDOLENCE.

A Resolution of Sympathy Upon the Death of a Brother.

Nassau L.O.L. passed the following resolution of condolence at its last regular meeting:

To the relatives and friends of our late brother, Daniel Anderson, Douro:

We, the members of L.O.L. No. 487, Nassau, desire to place on record our heartfelt sympathy with the relatives and friends of our late brother in the loss they have sustained through his death. While the unseen hand of Divine Providence passes through our community, taking from our midst loved ones here and there and the stroke seems hard to bear, yet He who knoweth all things knoweth what is for our good and His own glory, and whilst we cannot understand all things yet it is our duty to consider God doeth all things well. Our brother was taken from our midst while in the bloom of youth, and we miss him, yet we trust that what is our loss is his gain—loss of earth, more of heaven. It is ours, then, to prepare to meet him in glory. This life is but short, eternity is everlasting; death is but a stepping-stone into and then over the river of Jordan and landing safely on Canaan's fair shore, and we can only reach it by ascending the ladder of faith, hope and charity borne in the arms of our best of friends, the Lord Jesus Christ. May He help us, therefore, as the members of one common brotherhood to be faithful unto death and then go home to meet our dear departed brother and be forever with the Lord.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge,

H. S. ARMSTRONG,
ED. KEMP,
ROBT. CAMPBELL.

Analysis of the Vote.

An analysis of the vote shows that the Council of 1894 will be composed of five members of the old Council and seven new members. The new Council's personnel will be:

HENRY BEST,
THOMAS BRADY,
THOMAS CAHILL,
ROBERT CLINKSCALE,
ADAM DAWSON,
T. H. G. DENNE,
JOSEPH MILLS,
FRANCIS MASON,
HENRY PHELAN,
GEORGE B. SPROULE,
JOHN SAWERS,
ERASTUS B. STONE.

The result of yesterday's election cannot but be most gratifying to citizens who have the best interests of the town at heart. The election to the Council Board of men who possess good business qualifications, undoubted integrity and abundant resources of energy, is always to be desired, and in this respect, Peterborough today, as in the past, has been most fortunate in the selection of her public administrators.

The electors of the town have elected a strong Council. Such men as Mr. Thomas Cahill, Mr. Henry Best and Mr. Adam Dawson, have by long years of service in the Council proved themselves safe and wise guardians of the town's interests. Mr. Thomas Brady has served one year in the Council. His record was a good one, and there is no doubt but that his brief experience in 1894 has but befitted him for greater efforts in the future. Mr. Francis Mason, another of the old Council, is eminently deserving of the confidence of the electors of his ward, as demonstrated by the large vote he polled. While not aggressive, Councillor Mason is generally found on the right side of every issue, and he generally votes right.

The "new blood," as the new members of the Council are termed, are young men. They will ably back up the "older heads" on the new Council Board. With their ability and unlimited energy added to the experience of their seniors, a most happy combination is formed.

Mr. Henry Phelan, of the Peterborough Hardware Company, polled the largest vote in any of the wards, an honor that any young man can be justly proud of. Messrs. Joseph Mills, Robert Clinkscale, E. B. Stone, T. H. G. Denne, George B. Sproule and John Sawers make up the seven new Councillors. They are all good men.

Election Notes.

A fitting tribute to his worth, and a most gratifying recognition of past services, did the electors of Ward One pay Councillor Thomas Cahill when they placed him at the head of the poll.

Councillor Henry Phelan not only won a seat on the Council Board yesterday, but also a splendid fat turkey offered as a prize by J. B. Oke & Co. to the Councillor polling the largest vote.

Councillor Adam Dawson headed the poll in Ward Three. Councillor Dawson has always pursued a fearless, outspoken course in the Council.

In Ward Four Councillor Thomas Brady polled the largest vote. Mr. E. B. Stone made a good second and Mr. Francis Mason third.

The vote in each ward was so large that the results were not known until after 6 o'clock. As soon as the returns were available The Times posted up a bulletin which drew a large crowd.

WHITE GOODS SALE

Well Under Way! Better Than Ever!

We might talk till doomsday about supremely good values and astonishing bargains, but unless you get to looking the emphasis is all lost. As a matter of fact, we never had such money's worth to offer before. People were buying Sasturday as though the sale was limited to one day. We anticipated the biggest possible demand and got goods enough to satisfy all demands. That is part of business policy. Small lots are never advertised her, and those who're quite confident we're always losing money have small satisfaction for their pains. This business is run on business principles, however paradoxical tha may seem, and all this month we purpose distributing PERFECTLY NEW GOODS at the lowest prices on record. For instance

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

The January thaw has set in.

Everything is quiet in police circles.

The snow plows are out these mornings.

The Fortnightly Club will meet tonight.

The Board of Education will meet tonight.

Ashburnham Council will not meet until Jan. 21st.

The last meeting of the Council of 1894 will be held some night this week.

Rev. J. Rae opened the week of prayer in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last night.

The Fire Brigade Band was out last night serenading the newly elected councillors.

The thaw has spoilt the skating on the Little Lake, consequently the rink is more largely attended.

The ladies of Peterborough who had a vote exercised their franchise yesterday, and a goodly number voted.

The joint installation of officers of Hiawatha and Mount Hebron encampments, I.O.O.F., will take place tonight.

A horse of Mr. John McNaughton's attached to a cutter, made a short break for liberty yesterday morning. It was caught without damage.

"I'm saddest when I sing," she trilled;
Her words were doubtless true;
The neighbors, all their quiet killed,
You bet, were saddest, too.

The classes in engineering and mechanical drawing, in connection with the Mechanics' Institute, will resume their lessons this and Wednesday evenings.

At 9.30 Friday night the thermometer registered the lowest at Brockville than at any point along the Grand Trunk from Sarnia to Montreal. At Belleville it was 8 below, Kingston 14, Cornwall 22, Montreal 15 and at Sarnia 5 degrees above zero. At 4 a. m. Saturday it was 30 below zero at the G. T. R. station, Brockville.

Probably the strangest postoffice in the world is away down at Terra del Fuego. The "office" is a big barrell, and it is fastened to a rock overlooking the Straits of Magellan. Every ship that rounds Cape Horn stops at this odd postoffice. A boat puts out to shore with letters to be left, and the sailor who takes them looks over those already in the barrel, taking out and bringing away with him any that his ship can forward to their destination. Then he fastens the cover on the barrel with its hooks and staple, and the queer old postoffice that needs no postmaster or mail bags is left to itself until the next ship comes by.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

THE WORK OF SAVAGES.

CHINESE WERE RUTHLESSLY BUTCHERED AT PORT ARTHUR.

Japanese Soldiers Acted Like Savages, Says the Times—Affairs in the Orient—Chinese Hold a Position—The Peace Envoy.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Times will tomorrow publish advices from Kobe, under date of December 3, giving alleged details of the massacre at Port Arthur. The Times correspondent states that the slaughter was carried out with every revolting feature of primal barbarity. Four days were spent in murder and pillage, and from dawn to dark horrible mutilation of every conceivable kind and nameless atrocities were perpetrated. Prisoners were tied together in groups, riddled with bullets and then hacked to pieces. Boats crowded with fugitives, of both sexes and all ages, received a volley of bullets. The streets were strewn with corpses showing every ghastly form of mutilation.

COULD HAVE BEEN STOPPED.

The Times says editorially that it is impossible to doubt that the General in command could have stopped the barbarous mutilation if he felt so disposed, but his failure to prevent it has cast an indelible blot on the Japanese arms and has gone far to destroy the admiration which Europe was so liberally extending to the Japanese. It will scarcely be thought either that the Japanese Government had hitherto shown sufficient sensitiveness in the matter.

The correspondent of the Times also said that the mutilations were carried on in every form that oriental cruelty has ever invented. The soldiers were apparently unchecked in their deeds of blood by their commanders, who, totally losing their European veneer, showed absolute unconsciousness of the effect of these brutalities on their western visitors. They did not forget to be effusively attentive to them, and did not appear to suspect that their guests were filled with indignation and disgust.

CHINESE OCCUPY A POSITION.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Central News' correspondent says Gen. Nonseu telegraphs that scouts sent in the direction of Kai-Ping report that 4,000 Chinese under Gen. Chang occupy a position between Kai Ping and Twen Tien. Scouts returning from Kaio Kwang, he says, report that they saw a force of Chinese under Gen. Niebuen. Shang is said to be advancing upon Hi Ching.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A dispatch from Pekin to The Central News says Chan Yin Yoon, Chinese peace envoy to Japan, started for Tokio today.

The Times hears from its correspondent in Pekin:—The Chinese peace envoy to Japan had a farewell audience with the Emperor yesterday. Japan refused to conclude an armistice. Mr. Denby, the United States Minister, believes that the present negotiations will be fruitless, as the Japanese will withhold the terms till their army shall have occupied Pekin. Japanese landing parties are exploring the bays on the bays on the east coast of Shan Tug.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—The Red Cross Society of Germany will send 20,000 marks to the Red Cross Society of Japan to aid in its present work in the field.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Paris correspondent of The Central News says that the United States embassy in that city authorizes a denial of the reports that France has protested against the presence at French ports of American inspectors of emigrants. On the contrary it is asserted at the embassy every facility is given to these inspectors by the French authorities.

ANOTHER PETITION DROPS.

Dr. Willoughby, M. P. P., for East Northumberland Sits Secure.

COBOURG, Ont., Jan. 8.—The protest in the East Northumberland election petition against W. W. Willoughby, M. D., who has represented that riding in the Legislature uninterruptedly since the death of the last Liberal member, Richard Clark, came up for hearing today before Justices Osler and Street.

No evidence was offered by the prosecution and the petition was dismissed without costs. Dr. Willoughby will hold the seat and the cross petition will of course be dropped. E. F. B. Johnston, Q. C., and F. L. Webb for the petitioner, and Laidlaw and Payne for the respondent.

Large numbers of people from the east riding of Northumberland came to Cobourg which is nearly twenty miles distant to hear the case, and were much disappointed at the way it terminated.

Dr. Willoughby is whip of the Conservative party in the Legislature.

DENVER STRANGLERS.

Two Men Arrested on Suspicion of Being Implicated.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 8.—Victor Moncheraux and Alphonse Lamar are closely confined in the city gaol upon the supposition that they are implicated in the strangler cases of last autumn. There is a third man wanted, who has disappeared from town. Charles Challoup, the French master of the two Coutassoit girls, also under arrest, manages to secure the continued postponement of the trial. The case has been set repeatedly, only to be put off upon one pretext or another.

Lamar, while drunk, confessed in the presence of Tony Sanders, that Victor Moncheraux was the murderer of the French girls and of the Japanese woman, killed last autumn, and that the object was money which they were supposed to possess. Tony was sitting in a saloon in the Market street district, talking with friends when this intimation from Lamar was made. After several drinks had been applied, Lamar began to talk more freely, resulting in a full story of the case. Both men were arrested and locked up.

COREA INDEPENDENT.

The King Declares It So—One of the Results of the War.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Central News correspondent at Seoul telegraphs that the King of Corea yesterday proceeded to the ancestral temple, and there formally declared the independence of Corea. He was accompanied by the members of the Cabinet, and the other high functionaries of the Government. The royal party was escorted by a body of soldiers armed and equipped in modern style. Ministers Bokuyeiko and Jokoham were especially guarded by Japanese policemen, and the streets were kept clear by the new Corean police.

The Central News correspondent at Fusan reports that the inhabitants of Kow Yo Won in Southern Corea, have seized and beheaded three of the principal leaders of the Ton Hak rebels.

Sibyl Sanderson, the American prima donna, it is announced, will be married to Antino Terry, the Cuban millionaire, as soon as she gets a divorce.

"GIVE US BREAD."

Newfoundland's Starving Populace Demand Work and Bread—Serious Complications Feared.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 8.—A mob of unemployed men proceeded today to the British cruiser Tourmaline, now in port here and a deputation representing them interviewed the Captain demanding bread or work and asking whether he would prevent their obtaining food by force. In reply the captain promised them that he would write to Governor O'Brien and other executive authorities about their representations. He then advised them to return tomorrow when he would be prepared to give them an answer. The mob dispersed. If work or food is not forthcoming tomorrow the consequences, it is apprehended, will be serious.

Gov. O'Brien this afternoon gave his assent to all the bills dealing with financial questions, which the colonial legislature has just passed. The bill removing the dismissal of politicians convicted of bribery has been reserved for the British Imperial Government's assent.

A COUPLE OF CASES IN JUDGE MORSON'S COURT.

How a Toronto Man Sought to Get Rid of His Wife by Sending Her to the Asylum—The Facts Come to the Surface in a Civil Suit.

The latest returns from Toronto gives Kennedy a majority of 14. Fleming demands a recount which will be completed today.

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—"Mr. Raney, you must not make unfair insinuations. One ought to be careful not to make insinuations upon cross-examinations, because the public would get a wrong impression." So said Judge Morson in the Division Court today. Mr. Raney was defending Mr. Frank Wismer, proprietor of the Grosvenor House, who was sued by his former clerk, John G. Clark, to get $60 for two months' wages. He was discharged because Mr. Wismer swore he was not satisfactory in all respects. "I have nothing to say against his honesty," said the proprietor.

Mr. Raney was drawing certain inferences from a state of facts and that led to the judge's caution. Evidence did not show sufficient ground for Clark's discharge and he was given judgment for the full amount with costs.

AN UNHAPPY MARRIAGE.

Thompson, Henderson & Bell were given judgment against Alexander Crawford, of 384 Yonge street, on a bill of barristers' costs, the amount to be fixed by a taxing officer.

Mrs. Nathaniel J. Hutchinson was once before Magistrate Denison on a charge of insanity. He decided that she was sane, and discharged her. Subsequently she was sent in the asylum on the certificate of two doctors. After being there two weeks Dr. Clarke gave her an absolute discharge, and also said she is not insane.

When she left the asylum she was badly in need of clothing and bought a bill of goods at Thompson & Sons. Today this firm sued her husband for the amount of the bill, $50. She went into the box and said that a decree of interim alimony of $5 a week is granted her until December 8th next. She is now living with her uncle, W. H. F. McLean; she went to her husband for clothes, and he threw her out and wouldn't allow her to see her two children; he wanted her to consent to go to the asylum, "so that he could libel action against the papers;" he said to her,

"If you don't go away I'll cart you away." "Johnnie, I can't leave you," was her reply. This was her story in the box.

When the judge asked as to the reason for separation she said, "I made up my mind that his mother should not come into our home and break it up so I destroyed the furniture and tore up my clothes and determined to take my own life, only I couldn't do it when I thought of my children."

Here Mrs. Hutchinson broke down; her eyes filled with tears and sobs momentarily choked her utterance. It was stated that her husband paid for her support at the asylum three months in advance. She said that the day she was discharged he called to see her and said, "We never could live together."

The defence put into the Thompson action by the husband was that he offered to maintain his wife. Judgment was given against him for the $50 and costs.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 9, 1895.

Good morning!

The chemical examination of the stains on the Holy coat at Argenteuil, set on foot by the Bishop of Versailles, has resulted in a report by the two scientific experts engaged that the spots are of human blood, and are very old.

Even the clouds of smoke that hung over the late lamented Toronto Globe establishment had its silver lining. The paper's files were burned, and the modern Globe writers will never again be haunted by those writings of George Brown which clash so noisily with modern Globe ideas.

A comparison of the maximum temperature in different parts of the world shows that the great desert of Africa is by far the hottest. This vast plain, which extends 2,000 miles from east to west and 1,000 miles from north to south, is said to have a temperature of 150 degrees Farenheit in the hottest days in summer.

The various acts of clemency performed by the new Czar of Russia, including the several favors granted to bodies of his Jewish subjects, lend unusual distinction to the opening of his reign, and must promote the world's good will towards his person and government. Nicholas II, has made a very favorable impression upon his country and upon mankind at large since he ascended the throne of the Romanoffs.

The falling off in the value of common horses is largely explained by the fact that as their places have been taken by electricity and the cable on street cars, the demand has been much curtailed. The life of a car horse, as is well known, is very short, about eighteen months of regular service, and while they were in general use the demand for animals available for that kind of work was always steady, and, therefore, the price of them was kept up.

They must have peculiar election laws in Iowa. A woman has just been sworn into the office of justice of the peace, for which her husband was a candidate before the voters. Owing to a clerical error the woman's name was printed on the ballots instead of her husband's and it has been decided that she and not he was elected. It is all in the family, at any rate, and if the husband is willing to stay at home and look after the house and the children we suppose they will between them manage to administer the office all right.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

One of the interesting things about Japan's campaign in China is that the Japanese themselves have subscribed all the money needed for the conduct of the war. The loan which the government asked for a short time ago was subscribed at once, and the amount offered was greater than that accepted. The European money lenders have not been called upon, and it seems that some of them, who had expected to make big profit out of a Japanese war loan, are disappointed, and do not like the Japanese ways.

China, on the other hand, has been negotiating for loans in Europe ever since she got into trouble, but her prospects of getting the taels which see needs or of being able to furnish the security wich is required are very poor.

In battle, in diplomacy, an in finance the experiences of China are unlike those of Japan.

HYPNOTISM AND DISEASE.

There is a widespread and rapidly growing interest in what may be called therapeutic hypnotism to the alleviation and cure of disease. Recently, in other cities some difficult surgical operations have been made while the patient was asleep; no pain was felt and no inconvenience experienced when brought back to his normal condition.

The results of of hypnotic experiments so far are not collated and classified in a way sufficient to call hypnotism a science it is yet in the art-stage and only at the beginning of that. It may be that with the accumulation of practical data it will become a science.

Meanwhile it is rapidly coming to the front as a curative agent. Broad-minded physicians are beginning to use it, and the general public waits for further developements.

Of course, like everything else, it must force itself up out of crudity and perhaps, charlantanism and perverted application. That is no argument against it any more that medicine should be condemned because there are poisonous nostrums, or religion because there are pretenders. The true posture is one of reasonable and patient investigation. If, as is claimed, it is a more beneficent power than ether and chloroform. cheaper than doctors and drugs and better in its results, then it should be hailed as one of nature's best gifts to man.

Nature is a vast treasure-house of possibilities undreamed of and this may be one of its golden secrets wherein may lie the elixir of life. If it is not what its advocates claim experiment and investigation will expose its failure.

ECONOMY IN FUNERALS.

A committee of Episcopal archdeacons of New York, appointed two years ago to consider and report on the subject of burials and funerals, with a view to reduce the expense, has recommended some very sensible reforms.

The extravagance indulged in at funerals is a great burden upon those who are not wealthy. The committee propose to reduce the cost of a funeral down to $40, and this is the way they intend to do it: They will adopt plain hearses and discard trappings indicating grief; a few cut flowers; only immediate members of the family to go to the cemetery; no expenditure of money by clubs or societies, material of coffin which will decay quickly; early interment; disuse of family vaults; removal of body to a mortuary instead of retaining it in rooms occupied by the living, and proper and reverent burial of the poor by public officials.

The inquiry was made in the interest of the poor, but it will have some influence in directing the attention of the public to the subject of burials in general. There is no doubt but a reform in the mode of conducting funerals is greatly needed. Pride and habit and affection have a great deal to do with the extravagance at funerals. Under a system of well-intentioned economy the undertaker would be more certain of getting paid for his services, and a heavy burden would be taken from the shoulders of the bereaved relations.

Figures show that cremations have increased in the United States from two in 1876 to 808 in 1894, and in Europe from two in 1876 to 4,735 in 1893. The total for all these years was in this country 3,670 and in Europe 19,700, nearly 15,000 of this total being in France. Of the 1,346 bodies incinerated at Fresh Pond, L.I., during these 19 years, 997 were of German birth. 446 were born here, but of what ancestry is not stated, while the other 203 covered all nationalities to be found here. And of the 1,346 the males numbered 944 and the females 402.

AWAKE, MY HEART.

Awake, my heart, to be loved, awake, awake.
The darkness silvers away, the morn doth break.
It leaps in the sky. Unrisen lustres slake
The o'ertaken moon. Awake, O heart, awake.

She, too, that loveth awaketh and hopes for thee.
Her eyes already have sped the shades that flee;
Already they watch the path thy feet shall take.
Awake, O heart, to be loved, awake, awake!

And if thou tarry from her—if this could be—
She cometh herself, O heart, to be loved, to thee,
For thee would unashamed herself forsake.
Awake to be loved, my heart, awake, awake!

Awake! the land is scattered with light; and, see,
Uncanopied sleep is flying from field and tree,
And blossoming boughs of April in laughter shake.
Awake, O heart, to be loved, awake, awake!

Lo, all things wake and tarry and look for thee!
She looketh and saith: "O sun, now bring him to me.
Come, more adored, O adored, for his coming's sake
And awake my heart to be loved, awake, awake!"

THE NEW UTOPIA.

I had an extremely interesting evening. I had dined with some very "advanced" friends of mine at the National Socialist club. We had had an excellent dinner. The pheasant stuffed with truffles was a poem, and when I say that the '49 Chateau Lafitte was worth the price we had to pay for it I do not see what more I can add in its favor.

After dinner and over the cigars—I must say they know how to stock cigars at the National Socialist club—we had a very instructive discussion about the coming equality of man and the nationalization of capital.

I was not able to take much part in the argument myself, because, having been left when a boy in a position which rendered it necessary for me to earn my own living, I have never enjoyed the time and opportunity to study these questions.

But I listened very attentively while my friends explained how, for the thousands of centuries during which it had existed before they came, the world had been going on all wrong and how in the course of the next few years or so they meant to put it right.

Equality of all mankind was their watchword—perfect equality in all things—equality in possessions, and equality in position and influence, and equality in duties, resulting in equality in happiness and contentment.

The world belonged to all alike and must be equally divided. Each man's labor was the property not of himself, but of the state which fed and clothed him, and must be applied not to his own aggrandizement, but to the enrichment of the race.

Individual wealth—the social chain with which the few had bound the many, the bandit's pistol by which a small gang of robbers had thieved from the whole community the fruits of its labors—must be taken from the hands that too long had held it.

Social distinctions—the barriers by which the rising tide of humanity had hitherto been fretted and restrained—must be forever swept aside. The human race must press onward to its destiny (whatever that might be), not as at present, a scattered horde, scrambling, each man for himself, over the broken ground of unequal birth and fortune, the soft sward reserved for the feet of the pampered, the cruel stones left for the feet of the cursed, but an ordered army, marching side by side over the level plain of equity and equality.

The great bosom of our Mother Earth should nourish all her children like and like. None should be hungry, none should have too much. The strong man should not grasp more than the weak. The clever man should not scheme to seize more than the simple. The earth was man's and the fullness thereof, and among all mankind it should be portioned out in even shares. All men were equal by the laws of nature and must be made equal by the laws of man.

With inequality comes misery, crime, sin, selfishness, arrogance, hypocrisy. In a world in which all men were equal there would exist no temptation to evil, and our natural nobility would assert itself.

When all men were equal, the world would be heaven—freed from the degrading despotism of God.

We raised our glasses and drank to equality, sacred equality, and then ordered the waiter to bring us green Chartreuse and more cigars.

I went home very thoughtful. I did not go to sleep for a long while. I lay awake, thinking over this vision of a new world that had been presented to me.

How delightful life would be if only the scheme of my socialistic friends could be carried out. There would be no more of this struggling and striving against each other—no more fear of poverty! The state would take charge of us from the hour we were born until we died and provide for all our wants from the cradle to the coffin, both inclusive, and we should need to give no thought even to the matter. There would be no more hard work. Three hours' labor a day would be the limit, according to our calculations, that the state would require from each adult citizen, and nobody would be allowed to do more—I should not be allowed to do more; no poor to pity, no rich to envy, no one to look down upon us, no one for us to look down upon—not quite so pleasant, this latter reflection—all our life ordered and arranged for us, nothing to think about except the glorious destiny (whatever that might be) of humanity.

Then thought crept away to sport in chaos, and I slept.

When I awoke, I found myself lying under a glass case in a high, cheerless room. There was a label over my head. I turned and read it. It ran as follows:

MAN ASLEEP.

PERIOD—NINETEENTH CENTURY.

This man was found asleep in a house in London after the great social revolution of 1899. From the account given by the landlady of the house it would appear that he had already, when discovered, been asleep for over ten years, she having forgotten to call him. It was decided, for scientific purposes, not to awake him, but to just see how long he would sleep on, and he was accordingly brought and deposited in the Museum of Curiosities on Feb. 11, 1900.

Visitors are requested not to squirt water through the airholes.

An intelligent looking old gentleman, who had been arranging some stuffed lizards in an adjoining case, came over and took the cover off me.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Anything disturbed you?"

"No," I said; "I always wake up like this when I feel I've had enough sleep. What century is this?"

"This," he said, "is the twenty-ninth century. You have been asleep just 1,000 years."

"Ah! Well, I feel all the better for it," I replied, getting down off the table. "There's nothing like having one's sleep out."

"I take it you are going to do the usual thing," said the old gentleman to me as I proceeded to put on my clothes, which had been lying beside me in the case. "You'll want me to walk around the city with you and explain all the changes to you, while you ask questions and make silly remarks?"

"Yes," I replied; "I suppose that's what I ought to do."

"I suppose so," he muttered. "Come on and let's get it over." And he led the way from the room.

As we went down stairs I said:

"Well, is it all right?"

"Is what all right?" he replied.

"Why, the world," I answered. "A few friends of mine were arranging just before I went to bed to take it to pieces and fix it up properly. Have they got it all right by this time? Is everybody equal now and sin and sorrow and all that sort of thing done away with?"

"Oh, yes," replied my guide. "You'll find everything all right now. We've been working away pretty hard at things while you've been asleep. We've just got this earth about perfect now, I should say. Nobody is allowed to do anything wrong or silly, and, as for equality, tadpoles ain't in it with us."

He talked in rather a vulgar manner, I thought, but I did not like to reprove him.

We walked out into the city. It was very clean and very quiet. The streets, which were designated by numbers, ran out from each other at right angles, and all presented exactly the same appearance. There were no horses or carriages about. All the traffic was conducted by electric cars. All the people that we met wore a quiet, grave expression and were so much like each other as to give one the idea that they were all members of the same family. Every one was dressed, as was also my guide, in a pair of gray trousers and a gray tunic, buttoning tight around the neck and fastened around the waist by a belt. Each man was clean shaven, and each man had black hair.

I said:

"Are all these men twins?"

"Twins! Good gracious, no!" answered my guide. "Whatever made you fancy that?"

"Why, they all look so much alike," I replied, "and they've all got black hair!"

"Oh, that's the regulation color for hair," explained my companion. "We've all got black hair. If a man's hair is not black naturally, he has to have it dyed black."

"Why?" I asked.

"Why?" returned the old gentleman, somewhat irritably. "Why, I thought you understood that all men were now equal. What would become of our equality if one man or woman were allowed to swagger about in golden hair, while another had to put up with carrots? Men have not only got to be equal in these happy days, but to look it, as far as can be. By causing all men to be clean shaven and all men and women to have black hair cut the same length we obviate, to a certain extent, the errors of nature."

I said:

"Why black?"

He said he did not know, but that was the color which had been decided upon.

"Who by?" I asked.

"By the majority," he replied, raising his hat and lowering his eyes as if in prayer.

We walked farther and passed more men. I said:

"Are there no women in this city?"

"Women!" exclaimed my guide. "Of course there are. We've passed hundreds of them!"

"I thought I knew a woman when I saw one," I observed, "but I can't remember noticing any."

"Well, there go two now," he said, drawing my attention to a couple of persons near to us, both dressed in the regulation gray trousers and tunics.

"How do you know they are women?" I asked.

"Why, you see the metal numbers that everybody wears on the collar?"

"Yes. I was just thinking what a number of policemen you had and wondering where the other people were."

"Well, the even numbers are women. The odd numbers are men."

"How very simple!" I remarked. "I suppose after a little practice you can tell one sex from the other almost at a glance?"

"Oh, yes," he replied, "if you want to."

We walked on in silence for awhile, and then I said:

"Why does everybody have a number?"

"To distinguish him by," answered my companion.

"Don't people have names, then?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Oh, there was so much inequality in names. Some people were called Montmorency, and they looked down on the Smiths, and the Smythes did not like mixing with the Joneses, so to save further bother it was decided to abolish names altogether and to give everybody a number."

"Did not the Montmorencys and the Smythes object?"

"Yes, but the Smiths and Joneses were in the majority."

"And did not the ones and twos look down on the threes and fours, and so on?"

"At first, yes. But with the abolition of wealth numbers lost their value, except for industrial purposes and for double acrostics, and now No. 100 does not consider herself in any way superior to No. 1,000,000."

I had not washed when I got up, there being no conveniences for doing so in the museum, and I was beginning to feel somewhat hot and dirty. I said:

"Can I wash myself anywhere?"

He said:

"No. We are not allowed to wash ourselves. You must wait until half past 4, and then you will be washed for tea."

"Be washed!" I cried. "Who by?"

"The state."

He said that they had found they could not maintain their equality when people were allowed to wash themselves. Some people washed three or four times a day, while others never touched soap and water from one year's end to the other, and in consequence there got to be two distinct classes—the clean and the dirty. All the old class prejudices began to be revived. The clean despised the dirty, and the dirty hated the clean. So, to end dissension, the state decided to do the washing itself, and each citizen was now washed twice a day by government appointed officials, and private washing was prohibited.

I noticed that we passed no houses as we went along, only block after block of huge, barracklike buildings, all of the same size and shape. Occasionally, at a corner, we came across a smaller building, labeled "Museum," "Hospital," "Debat-

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL.

PHYSICIANS SAY THERE IS NOT ANY NEED FOR ALARM.

A Consultation Held in Montreal—The Premier has no Organic Disease—He Needs Rest Only to Recuperate His Health.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Canada's Premier, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, arrived in Montreal late Saturday night in his private car by the regular express over the Intercolonial and Grand Trunk Railways. Accompanying him were Sir Frank Smith, of Toronto, and Hon. J. J. Curran and the Premier's secretary, J. L. Payne. The party went to the Windsor hotel and by previous arrangement consultation was held yesterday afternoon concerning the health of Sir Mackenzie, a subject in which Canadians are intensely interested.

Dr. Rogers came down from Ottawa and, with Dr. Birkett, examined Sir Mackenzie at the Windsor hotel on Sunday afternoon. The following official statement was given:

THE DOCTOR'S OPINION.

"A consultation took place today at the Windsor hotel between Dr. A. F. Rogers, of Ottawa, Sir Mackenzie Bowell's attending physician, and Dr. H. S. Birkett, of Montreal, specialist in throat diseases, respecting the present condition of the Premier's health. After thorough examination they decided that there was no organic disease of any part, lungs and heart being perfectly sound and healthy, and the entire cause of the cough which has given him so much trouble of late is a form of laryngitis mainly of a spasmodic character. They are of opinion that with proper rest and care the cough will be altogether cured in ten days or two weeks, and they have prohibited him from engaging in interviews for that period as conversation will tend to aggravate present irritated condition of throat."

BETTER IN A FEW DAYS.

It is said that the swelling of the glands of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's throat, which is the cause of the Premier's cough, can be easily remedied, and that in a few days he will be able to transact his arduous duties as usual.

The story that he was suffering from whooping cough is not correct, but the symptoms were similar, which of course gave rise to the rumors to that effect.

Lord Aberdeen received, on the way from Halifax on Saturday, a cablegram, conveying the desire of the Queen that enquiries should be made on Her Majesty's behalf as to the health of Prime Minister Bowell, and that a telegraphic reply should be sent.

CABLED TO THE QUEEN.

His Excellency at once communicated above by telegram with Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was travelling from Halifax via G. T. R., and received a prompt reply asking His Excellency to express his gratitude for the interest evinced in his behalf and saying that he was better and not considered to be at all seriously ill. His Excellency then sent a cablegram conveying the above for Her Majesty's information.

A SHOCKING CASE.

A Young Farmer Convicted of a Revolting Crime.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—In the Sessions Court today the case against David Thompson was concluded after a two days' trial. Thompson is a fine looking young fellow, 18 years of age, who worked for Farmer Matthews, of Scarboro. He was charged with "carnally knowing" the two daughters of Matthews, Louisa, aged 13, and Lydia, aged 9. The investigation before Magistrate Wingfield lasted four days. Louisa proved a "contumacious witness" and not a word could be got from her incriminating Thompson.

The charge, so far as she was concerned, fell through, but he was committed in Lydia's case. The case was a remarkable one, revealing a condition of moral surroundings, in connection with the children, that has induced Crown Attorney Dewart to bring their condition to the Children's Aid Society for treatment. Mr. A. F. Lobb defended Thompson and brought out a most shocking state of affairs about the little girls. Judge Morgan sentenced him to six months in the Central prison.

His Honor remarked that if he had been found guilty of the charge he would have received the extreme penalty of the law, which is imprisonment for life and the lash. He read the prisoner a severe lecture and took occasion to refer to the prevalent habit of men assaulting little girls, saying that if he had the creation of the punishment it would be that of mutilation as would effectually prevent a repetition of the offence.

Newfoundland News.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 7.—The Marine Court of Enquiry, considering the loss of the British steamer Beniasfe, which was lost in Shelley's Cove, Nfld., while en route from Pelley's Island to New York, rendered a decision today finding Capt. Gendry negligent in not taking soundings. The Court decides that the loss of the steamer resulted by his neglect by not doing so, and suspended his certificate for six months, but advised that he be allowed to act as chief mate during that time.

A Montrealer Lashed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Alphonse Laurendeau received 25 lashes in the Montreal jail this morning. This is the maximum number given at one time. He assaulted his own little daughter. At the end of his two year sentence he gets 25 more.

AN AMERICAN EDITOR

CHARLES A. DANA, THE VENERABLE CHIEF OF THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Little Corner Room and Its Plain Furnishings—Personal Appearance and Traits of a Man Whose Name Is Known In Every American Household.

The rather naked little corner room in The Sun building, in which Mr. Dana has sat almost daily for 25 years, is a surprise to many persons who see it for the first time. His genuine love of beautiful things, his disposition to acquire them if possible and the extraordinary range and accuracy of his æsthetic appreciations are so widely known that it is quite natural for those who do not understand him to expect to find his tastes reflected in his accustomed place of work. The room might be even barer than it is and yet serve Mr. Dana's purpose as well as if it were the gallery of Apollo. On the other hand, if his chair and desk were established in the middle of the vastest and most sumptuous presence chamber to be found anywhere and amid a throng of curious and noisy onlookers, Mr. Dana would work on with the same tranquil efficiency, providing his pen did not splutter and the capacious wastebasket at his feet were emptied from time to time. The processes of his mind are neither stimulated nor intimidated by the surroundings. The accessories of luxurious professional habits are absent because they are superfluous to Mr. Dana. If he thought they would help him to make a better newspaper, they would all be there.

In the middle of the small room is a desk table of black walnut, of the Fulton street style and the period of the first administration of Grant; a shabby little round table at the window, where Mr. Dana sits when the day is dark; one leather covered chair, which does duty at either post, and two wooden chairs, both rickety, for visitors on errands of business or ceremony. On the desk a revolving case, with a few dozen books of reference; an inkpot and pen, not much used except in correcting manuscript or proofs, for Mr. Dana talks off to a stenographer his editorial articles and his correspondence, sometimes spending on the revision of the former twice as much time as was required for the dictation; a window seat filled with exchanges, marked here and there in blue pencil for the editor's eyes; a big pair of shears and two or three extra pairs of spectacles in cache against an emergency. These few items constitute what is practically the whole objective equipment of the editor of The Sun. The shears are probably the newest article of furniture in the list. They replaced, three or four years ago, another pair of unknown antiquity, besought and obtained by Eugene Field and now occupying, alongside of Mr. Gladstone's ax, the place of honor in that poet's celebrated collection of edged instruments.

Into the corner room described there swings nearly every morning in the year a man of 75, looking 15 years younger; largely built, square framed, with a step as firm as a sea captain's; vigorous, sometimes to abruptness, in his bodily movements, but deliberate and gentle in his speech; dressed always in such a way that his clothes seem to belong to him and not he to them; with strong brown hands, rather large, which do not tremble as they hold book or paper, and a countenance familiar to most Americans through portraits or caricatures, whose marked features the caricaturists distort in various whimsical ways without ever succeeding in making the face seem either ridiculous or ignoble. Mr. Dana's full beard is trimmed more closely than in former years. It ranks as snow white only by courtesy. The last strongholds of the pigment are not yet conquered.

The impression which Mr. Dana makes upon those who come into contact with him personally for the first time or the fortieth is that of vigorous and sympathetic good will, both desirous and capable of pleasing. He is frank and engaging in conversation, and the wonderful range of his intellectual interests makes him equally ready to learn or to communicate. Men who seek him merely to measure their wits against his for a purpose often go away charmed with their reception and well satisfied with results until they begin to reckon at a distance what has actually been accomplished by the interview. If shrewd kindness beams on the stranger through one of the two lenses of his gold bowed spectacles, kind shrewdness is alert behind the other glass. He has learned how to say no when necessary, and even to say it in italics, but he has never learned to say an inconsiderate thing. Mr. Dana uses no tobacco, but that is not the reason why he is superior to petulance and never frets himself under any circumstances, whatever his mood. He knows wine, and respects it, and himself, but that is not the reason why he knows at a glance good poetry from bad, even if the good be disguised in cramped handwriting and words misspelled, while the bad is displayed in typography beautiful to see. He prefers the mushroom to mush and milk, being both a connoisseur and a cultivator of the former, but that is not the reason why, as a journalist, his perception of the interesting, the unexpected, the refreshing, has not been dulled by 50 years' exercise.

Mr. Dana was born with a voracious intellectual appetite, which has remained healthy and insatiate all of his life. He shrinks at nothing short of actual dullness or literary deformity so marked as to be repulsive. He is a tireless reader of books, magazines and journals in many languages. Whether print or manuscript comes under his eyes, he takes in the ideas seemingly by whole paragraphs rather than by words, lines or even sentences. Unlike most other very rapid readers that I have known, he does not merely sample the page or the chapter or the book.

A glance through his glasses seems to establish a circuit which at once puts his brain in possession not only of the essential facts, but also of any refinement of style that may be there, or any novel or felicitous verbal formula, no matter how inconspicuous. When he closes the book or throws aside the newspaper the probability is small that he has missed anything worth having. This process of acquisition has been going on without a break and with constantly increasing speed ever since his early boyhood. It is supported by a memory which selects with discrimination and then retains with tenacity.—Edward P. Mitchell in McClure's.

Love Apple.

When I first knew Covent garden, tomatoes in their raw state were habitually known as "love apples." It was only when they were preserved in bottles to be used as sauce that they took the name now universally applied to them. Very rarely were they eaten raw as a salad or cooked, stewed or stuffed or au gratin.—G. A. Sala in London Telegraph.

JACKSON STILL TALKING.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—Although in the new constitution pool-selling and bookmaking are prohibited, efforts will be made by the horse-racing associations to make the clause inoperative by endeavoring to have the Legislature refuse to pass appropriate laws to carry out the prohibition referred to. The following is the text of the constitution which prohibits pool-selling: "Section 9—No law shall be passed abridging the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government or any department thereof; nor shall any divorce be granted otherwise than by judicial proceedings; nor shall any lottery or the sale of lottery tickets, pool-selling, bookmaking or any other kind of gambling hereafter be authorized or allowed within this state, and the Legislature shall pass appropriate laws to prevent offences against any of the provisions of this section." The opposition to the Legislature making laws to punish offences comes principally from the influential racing associations.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

(3) all who have reached their 14th birthday and have been withdrawn in accordance with law by their parents or guardians; and (4) all little ones who in the fall time have reached their 5th birthday and have to be admitted.

In my annual report to the Department it is recorded that 412 pupils attended school less than half the number of school days for the year, yet in every case but three those pupils came under one or other of the above headings.

There are several important matters I should like to bring before the Board in Committee of the Whole.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
J. W. GARVIN.

The report was adopted as read.

The Committee on Appointments, which met before the Board meeting, made the following report, which was adopted:

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:

At the last regular Board meeting the question of salaries to be paid principals of seven-room ward schools was referred for the consideration of your Committee on Appointments. Your committee have carefully considered the subject and feel that owing to the greater responsibility involved in properly conducting a ward school of seven departments, there should be a distinction made between such a one and that of others containing fewer rooms, the more so, if the service rendered is perfectly satisfactory.

Your Committee being satisfied that the school in question is conducted in a very able manner, deem it their duty to recommend that the present incumbent, Mr. H. A. Yenny, rank as to time of service (for salary purposes) from the first of September last as though he had then been on the staff five years; and that his salary from that date and for the future be based (according to the regular schedule adopted for ward principals) as though he had attained a service rank of five years standing.

Your Committee further feel justified in commending Mr. Yenny's energy, activity and worth, and base their recommendation to advance in salary, not alone to the arduous duties he is required to perform, but to the evidence he has given of real merit. It is distinctly understood that the foregoing in no way interferes with the schedule of salaries adopted for ward principals—this modification of the rule applies only to the principal of a seven-room school after he has given satisfaction for at least one year.

Your Committee would further recommend that Miss Warner be instructed to act as supervising director of the kindergartens with authority to control and direct the courses of study for the pupils and for directors' assistants, the ordering of supplies, and the general management; and be granted one-half day each month to spend in the South Ward Kindergarten.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
W. H. HILL,
Chairman.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to recommend payment of the following accounts:

WILLIAM FERGUSON,
Chairman.

THE GYMNASIUM.

Regarding the condition of the gymnasium, the Chairman of the Property Committee read the following letter from Architect Blackwell:

"As directed, I examined the floor of the gymnasium, and, judging by what is broken up, it is in a worthless state, both joists and flooring being badly decayed, probably caused by lack of ventilation underneath, and any money spent in repairing would be of no permanent benefit. A new 1½ pine floor, with an air space under, can be put down for $85, and can be done in three days. The instructor is anxious to have the following new articles for the gymnasium, which, he says, are badly required, especially mattresses, and without them there is always danger of the pupils seriously hurting themselves:

Mattresses	$ 33 00
Fifteen leathered covered rings	24 00
Padded vaulting horse and board	6 00
Six poles	3 00
Cords for chest machines	1 00
Clubs	3 00
Dumb-bells	3 00
Tuning piano	3 00
Flooring	85 00
Total	$161 00

THOSE DEBENTURES.

Trustee Ferguson moved the following resolution which was seconded by Trustee Hayes: "That the secretary write and ask the town council why the money called for by the Board on March 6th last, was not forthcoming at an earlier date than in September and December, when received; also why the last debenture for $1,000 was sold at $950 instead of at par, the same as other town debentures.

A communication was received from Lieut.-Col. James Z. Rogers asking for the use of the gymnasium building to hold a class for the sergeants one night a week. Referred to Supervision Committee.

The Board then adjourned.

Toronto's Mayoralty.

A traveller who arrived in town last night from Toronto is authority for the statement that the recount gave ex-Mayor Fleming a majority of four votes. The Toronto evening papers stated that the result of the recount would not be known until noon today.

Death of Patrick Tangney.

Mr. Patrick Tangney, who has been a resident of Peterborough for many years, died late on Monday night in his 80th year. He came to Canada from Limerick, Ireland, fifty years ago, and has long been a respected resident of this town. Mrs. Daniel Fitzgerald, Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald and Mrs. W. Merrill, of Peterborough, are daughters of the deceased. The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

A Case of Perjury.

At the liquor case trial yesterday, William Robertson, a boarder at the Cavanagh house, swore that he had not sold liquor on December 23. Two other witnesses testified that they had purchased liquor from Robertson. The latter was immediately arrested for perjury and locked up. Bail was fixed at $1,000, the prisoner to be taken in the sum of $500 and two securities of $250 each. An effort is being made to secure the bail. The trial has been set for Tuesday next.

Looking for a Site.

The Manufacturers Committee of the Council will meet at 11 o'clock and show around the town, a representative of the Universal Knitting Company, of Weston. This large firm is considering the advisability of moving from its present location, and is looking for an advantageous site. This is the business of the representative who will meet the Committee this morning. It is not improbable that the firm may locate in Peterborough as this town can offer unequalled advantages.

The Business World.

The failures in the Dominion last week numbered 37, as against 41 the previous week and 41 for the corresponding week of last year. Ontario Province alone, with 22, had seven more failures than all the other Provinces combined. Quebec had only eight and but one of these had a rating as high as $20,000. W. J. Gray, grocer, of Barrie, has assigned to John Hood. Arthur H. Tierney, of the milling firm of Tierney & McKellar, Blyth, is dead. Percy Ward & Co., printers, of Brantford, have dissolved. W. E. Weeks, furniture and auctioneer, of Brantford, has assigned to S. G. Read. Jos. Brophy, men's furnishings, Kingston, is retiring from business. C. Millan's hotel at Kingston, has been sold to John Randolph. Oliver & Steigler, general goods, of Mildmay, have dissolved partnership. J. J. Tolfree, boot and shoe dealer, at the corner of Jarvis and King streets, has assigned to E. R. C. Clarkson.

Another Deer Story.

Mr. Sam Alexander, of Raymond, while out chopping in the woods near Three Mile lake, killed a deer in rather a peculiar and interesting manner. He had taken his dog with him and while he was chopping the dog disappeared. Pretty soon, however, Sam heard him barking, and on going where the dog was to see what was the matter, he saw a deer standing butting away at him with his head. When the deer saw Sam it turned and ran off to the lake; the dog catching hold of its tail and going also. The deer jumped into the lake, the dog jumped in, too. After struggling in the water with the dog some time the deer again made for the shore. It got on shore, Mr. Dog still holding on to its tail. When the deer got ashore Sam was standing waiting with his axe in his hand and as it approached him he struck it with the axe and knocked it down and killed it. Then he got his row boat and rolled it in and went home with it.

INSPECTORS REPORT.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—The total number of pupils enrolled in the public schools of the town in December (kindergartens not included) was 1288 or 45 less than in November. The reduction was due in nearly every case to illness, the Central and the Park street schools having suffered the most, 29 of the 45 pupils belonged to these schools.

The average attendance was 1,121 or 8.74 per cent.

The Central enrolled 589, average 493 or 83.4 per cent.; the Rubidge street school 330, average 287 or 87 per cent.; the Park street school 214, average 176 or 82 per cent. The low average attendance of the Park street school was also due to illness.

The kindergartens enrolled: Central average——; South Ward 59, average 42½.

The progress of the schools during the year in the several branches of study will be reported fully next month after the half-yearly promotion examinations have been held.

The yearly report to the Education Department shows a gratifying increase in the average attendance for the year.

Prior to 1893 the yearly average attendance of the Public school pupils of Peterborough (so far as I am able to get the figures) never exceeded 59 per cent. of the total enrollment. In 1891 it was as low as 51 per cent. For 1893 the average attendance was 68 per cent. of the total enrolment, and for 1894, 70 per cent.

The total enrolment in 1894 was 1688, average 1180. Boys 836; girls 830; number that attended less than 20 days, 64; between 20 and 50 days, 130; between 51 and 100 days, 218; between 101 and 150 days, 395; between 151 and 200 days, 894; over 201 days, 148.

The schools were kept open 208 days and the aggregate attendance was 236,[illegible].

The monthly average attendance has been 88 per cent. of the monthly enrolment; but in reckoning the average attendance for the year the total aggregate attendance must be divided by the number of teaching days the schools were kept open, after which the percentage is ascertained by comparing this average with the total enrolment for the year.

As I have several times pointed out to the Minister of Education this method of comparing the yearly average attendance is very unfair to the schools of Ontario. In one total enrolment is included all pupils (1) who move from the town and attend school elsewhere; (2) all who pass the Entrance Examination in June and attend the Collegiate Institute the following term;

THE FULL PENALTY.

An Hotelkeeper Sent to Goal For Four Months.

The case of Mr. Timothy Cavanagh, of the Balmoral hotel, charged with selling liquor without a license, came up for trial in the police court yesterday morning. Owing to the number of witnesses examined the case extended far into the afternoon. E. B. Stone appeared on behalf of the defendant while the Town Solicitor prosecuted.

The specific offense charged took place on Sunday, December 23. A number of witnesses proved conclusively that liquor had been sold in the house on that date.

The defence was that Mr. T. Cavanagh was not the proprietor of the hotel, having, he swore, turned over the entire business to his son Richard. Upon cross-examination both father and son admitted that no transfer had been executed or bill of sale given.

Mr. Stone made a strong plea for his client. The case was a second offense and a conviction was equivalent to imprisonment. He thought there existed a doubt of Mr. Cavanagh's proprietorship, and he asked the Magistrate to concede it on behalf of the defendant.

Magistrate Dumble summed up the evidence at some length, and stated that his mind could not accept of any other view than that Mr. Cavanagh was the proprietor. He said a conviction was proven. He sentenced the defendant to 4 months in goal at hard labor.

Two New Cases in Western Ontario Reported Yesterday.

In spite of the cold wave that swept over Ontario last week, the fears of the Provincial Board of Health has been realized. Every care was taken to prevent the spreading of the contagion, but yesterday two new cases are reported. Alma township and Sandwich are the places visited by the disease, and one case is reported from each locality.

Albany despatches say that the Provincial Government has communicated with the New York State Board of Lunacy and asks for information about the manner in which the hospitals are conducted under the State Care Act.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 161 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

RIOTING IN THE COLONY.

PREMIER GREEN COMPELLED TO FACE A HOWLING MOB.

Shops Were Ransacked and the Legislature Was Raided—Order Restored by Tars—The Premier's Pledge to the Rioters.

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 9.—Disorder prevailed here all day and serious bloodshed was narrowly averted. The unemployed assembled early this morning and marched to the man-of-war Tourmaline, whose captain promised them yesterday he would use his influence with the authorities in their behalf. When the crowd appeared he referred them to the government. The men then marched to the Government House, where a deputation waited upon the executive. The latter informed them that the government was considering measures of relief and advised them to call on city representatives for their immediate wants. The mob then went to the legislative buildings, but were refused admission. They burst open the doors and surged into the corridors. The police on guard attempted to drive them out but were overwhelmed and

FORCED TO RETIRE.

The police reserves were sent for and after a desperate struggle managed to eject the intruders. In the evening the crowd re-assembled and returned to the Government House, where it complained to the Governor of its treatment during the morning and reiterated its demand for relief. The Governor repeated his advice of the forenoon and said he was powerless to act without the co-operation of the ministry. Then the crowd once more made its way to the Legislative Buildings. The police were powerless to control the mob and many officers were injured. Finally Premier Green appeared on the balcony, and in a speech expressed regret at the condition of the people. He promised that employment would be given within three days, and begged the crowd to have patience and confidence in the government. He promised to resign if work was not provided within the specified time. This did not satisfy the crowd, who told him they would break into stores and get food. This threat of the mob was immediately put into effect. Several stores were looted, but finally a large force of police appeared on the scene and

DROVE THE MOB AWAY.

Four of the leaders have been arrested. The streets tonight are crowded with people. A guard from the warship Tourmaline is doing patrol duty in front of the principal buildings, as it is feared that other raids may be attempted during the night.

Premier Greene presented a pitiful picture when he appeared on the balcony of the legislative building this afternoon to address the crowd. He has been ailing since he accepted office and the worries over the present turbulent condition of the colony has reduced him to almost a skeleton.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. Jan. 9.—There was a wild time here yesterday. Disorder prevailed all day, and serious bloodshed was narrowly averted. In the morning all the unemployed marched in a body to the Legislature buildings carrying a flag bearing the words "Bread or Work." After being refused admission they burst in the doors and surged into the corridors. After a desperate fight the police managed to get the upperhand and ejected the intruders.

The experiment was repeated in the afternoon and half a dozen of the police were badly injured while attempting to repel the mob. Premier Greene promised work within three days but the crowd was not satisfied and finally looted a number of stores. To restore order the police were compelled to draw their swords.

A SINGULAR SUICIDE.

Under Very Peculiar Circumstances a Railroad Man Takes His Life.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 9.—George W. Davis, aged 28 years, a claim agent on the Lake Shore railroad, committed suicide last night under peculiar circumstances. Early in the evening he went to a barber shop with his brother, and they returned to their home. He seemed cheerful, as usual. Going to a spare bedroom, he lighted the gas, sat down on a chair before the mirror, put his feet upon another chair and shot himself in the temple, the bullet passing through his head. He had not been dead an hour when there came to the house two little girls who enquired for him and explained that their sister, whom he was to have married last evening, was waiting for him at her home. The young lady is Miss Anna Noonan, an intelligent and handsome girl. Davis was to have met her last evening at her home, and they were to have gone to Rev. R. A. George, of Trinity Congregational church, to be married, and planned a short trip. Miss Noonan was greatly distressed by the sad affair. It is understood that Davis' mother knew of his having paid attention to Miss Noonan and upbraided him for it on social grounds.

TO SCRUB WEST OAKLAND.

Women Armed with Soap and Mops Will Invade Squalid Houses.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—With soap and buckets and mops, 100 benevolent women of Oakland tomorrow will invade homes where squalor reigns in West Oakland. In the name of humanity and cleanliness, "which is next to godliness," they will scrub them clean. The women have many allies in the shape of brawny men and lusty boys, and if there be uncleanliness in any house in the First Ward at sundown tomorrow it will be because the occupants prefer to dwell in such a condition.

The campaign of cleanliness will be under the direction of the Women's Friendly Council of West Oakland. Miss Norton, a colleague of the Rev. Frank E. Hinckley, pastor of the Second Congregational church, to whose sociological investigation in that part of the city is due the creation of this organization of women, and Mrs. William Pelouze, wife of Supervisor Pelouze, will have immediate charge of the work tomorrow.

NOT BY A FALLING TREE

Was William Hendershott Killed—The Preliminary Investigation.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 9.—The evidence given at the preliminary investigation into the charge of murder against W. D. Welter and John Hendershott showed that the victim was not killed by the falling tree. Six witnesses testified that there was a hole in the ground caused by a knot on the tree at the point where the murdered man's head was lying when found, and that there was an inch clear space between the top and the murdered man's head, and the surface of the knot, so that the body could easily have been shoved under after death.

WIMAN'S CASE.

The Appeal Argued Before the Supreme Court—Judgment Reserved.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The appeal in the case of Erastus Wiman from the verdict in the Court of Oyer and Terminer convicting Wiman of forgery, was argued before the general term of the Supreme Court.

General Tracey raised the point that Wiman had not been found guilty of forgery for which he had been indicted, but for drawing money from the firm on account of R. G. Dun & Co. He contended that the main question submitted by the trial judge to the jury related to the criminal transfer from one account to another.

"The trial judge," he said, "had charged the jury as a matter of law, that Wiman was guilty and that the jury must find him so. He took away from the jury every question on which forgery, as charged in the indictment, could be predicated and admitted questions on which it could not be predicated."

Assistant District Attorney Lindsay submitted a voluminous brief in support of the verdict. All the evidence given including Wiman's confession and plea was read and comment made by the counsel who clearly pointed out the justice of the sentence.

Wiman was in court during the argument and listened intently to every point brought up.

Judgement was reserved.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

ERASURES FOUND ON THE LIST OF A RETURNING OFFICER.

Clever Detection of a Pickpocket by an Officer in Plain Clothes—The Inspectorship of Hulls—An Overdose of Opium.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—An examination of the statement prepared by the deputy returning officer at subdivision No. 2 of the Third Ward, and delivered to City Clerk Blevins, shows two erasures and substitutional entries in connection with the mayoralty returns.

The statement is signed by Thomas Smith, as deputy returning officer, and also by Charles Teeter, the pole clerk. It does not bear the signature of any one representing any of the candidates seeking election in the Third Ward.

A close scrutiny of the statement where the erasure was made showed that opposite Mr. Fleming's name the words 'sixty-eight' had been written, and opposite, on the next column, were originally placed the figures "68." Both those words and figures had been scratched out and "Forty-eight," and "48" substituted for them.

On Monday night the figures furnished to the press by, presumably, the deputy returning officer or his clerk, corresponded with the original entry on the sheet so far as Mr. Fleming was concerned.

The alleged transposition of the figures at Mr. Smith's booth increases Mr. Kennedy's majority to 45.

Mr. Smith, who resides at No. 61 Hayden street, has been notified by Mr. Blevins to attend at the City Hall tomorrow morning and explain matters. Mr. Blevins says Mr. Smith is a reliable man who has acted as deputy returning officer previously.

A CLEVER OFFICER.

Police Constable Tipton (152) was off duty yesterday afternoon. Dressed in plain clothes, he accompanied his wife and another lady to the funeral of Fireman Bowery. While standing on Parliament street, near Wilton avenue, he noticed John Connor, 18 Arthur street, a well-known pickpocket, on the opposite side of the street. And here is where the cuteness of the officer asserted itself.

Telling his wife to watch Connor closely as he suspected that individual was there "on business" he hid himself in the crowd. Presently he returned and his wife informed him that she had seen Connor pick a woman's pocket. Tipton ran across and asked the lady, Mrs. Love, 49 Taylor street if she had lost her purse. She felt in her pocket and found it was gone. Meanwhile Connor had run down a lane. Tipton followed him.

Finding himself pursued, the thief threw the stolen purse over a fence. The officer caught Connor and on returning made a search, resulting in the finding of the purse.

Enough evidence was taken in the Police Court to make out a prima facie case and the defendant was sent for trial at the next Assizes.

INSPECTORSHIP OF HULLS.

Considerable speculation is again rife among the marine men of this city as to who will be appointed to the position of Inspector of Hulls for this port. It is claimed by some that Mr. A. M. Rice, of Toronto will be the lucky man, while many there are who feel sure that Mr. Evans, of Deseronto, will be the man. Again a strong section of the Toronto men think that Capt. McGiffin will receive the appointment. All three of the applicants named have a thorough practical knowledge of marine matters generally and it is understood that the selection of either one or the other would be acceptable to the Marine Association.

AN OVERDOSE OF OPIUM.

Mr. H. Pettis, of Toronto, who was found in an unconscious condition in a room of the Imperial hotel, Niagara Falls, yesterday, died last evening. The doctors gave it as their opinion that Pettis had taken some preparation of opium. Deceased was about 60 years of age, smooth face, about five feet eight inches, and weighs about 135 pounds.

THE ICE MOUNTAIN RISING.

If Cold Weather Continues an Ice Carnival May be Held at Niagara.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 9.—The ice scenery at the falls is attracting tourists in large numbers. The trees in the park and on the islands are covered with snow, and stalactites have formed on the falls. The ice mountain has begun its annual climb from the foot of the American Falls, and it needs only an ice bridge to bring tobogganing and bobbing into popular favor. A winter carnival is talked of, and a movement is on foot to light up the islands and falls with many colored electric lights. A subscription paper for the purpose has reached several hundred dollars.

It is designed to hang several hundred lights across the American Falls on a cable and have loops down to the Cave of the Winds on one side and to the ice mountain on the other.

Suicide at St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 9.—Thos. Feeney, about 45 years of age, grinder by occupation, committed suicide by cutting his throat at his home last night. About nine months ago Feeney's eldest son was killed at the McKinnon Clamp Company's works. It is thought this preyed upon his mind. Deceased leaves a widow and four children.

THREE DARING TRAMPS

DEFY AND ESCAPE FROM GRAND TRUNK OFFICERS ON A HANDCAR.

Break Into Cars and Throw Merchandise Out While the Train is in Progress—Train Hands Have a Hard Fight—A Fusilade of Shots.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—There was quite a thrilling episode, or rather a succession of them, on the Grand Trunk and incidentally on the Canadian Pacific last Monday night. The fast freight train was pulling out for Toronto from St. Henri on the Grand Trunk about seven in the evening, when the conductor discovered that one of the cars had been broken into. Further investigation convinced him that the rifled car had tenants within and this was emphasized by the fact that he saw several cases of merchandise falling from the car as it progressed on its journey. His time card did not permit the conductor stopping before St. Anne's was reached, but when he did he telegraphed full particulars to the superintendent at the Bonaventure station. The latter at once sent out Grand Trunk Constable Kirley and two other officers, Detective Flynn being already on the trail of the land pirates. At Point Claire the party learned that their men had fought the crew of the freight train at St. Anne's and by dint of a liberal display of revolvers succeeded in bluffing the boys and getting away. The despatch to Pointe Claire stated further that the party consisted of three and that they had stolen a handcar and were pointing east as fast as they could. The officers had scarcely read the telegram when the handcar with the three desperadoes appeared coming down the track at the rate of 30 miles an hour.

A FUSILADE OF SHOTS.

It was impossible to stop them by physical force, so Constable Kirley threw a plank across the track in hopes of stopping them and ditching the car. But the plank did not work. The great speed of the car and the slippery state of the rails threw the plank off and the car sped on.

A fusilade of shots were sent after them but without effect. Dorval, the next station east, was telegraphed to so that the trio could be stopped there. The G. T. R. men there threw a plank across the track and reinforced it with spikes, but the robbers had thought of this and determined to prevent accidents. It is well known to the travelling public that the tracks of the C.P.R. and the Grand Trunk are parallel from Pointe Claire to the Junction.

The thieves knew this, too, for between Pointe Claire and Dorval they took the car and carried it from the G. T. R. track to the C. P. R. and continued their journey east on the latter. The station agent at Dorval, however, thought they might do this, and crossing over to the C. P. R. he had the switch locked so as to throw them off if they did not meet the obstruction on the Grand Trunk. When the three desperadoes struck Dorval, on the Canadian Pacific railway, they were thrown off, and the railway crew at once prepared to pounce on them. This was not to be, however, for the three, quickly recovering themselves, began to pump lead out of three ugly-looking revolvers at their would-be captors.

THE ROBBERS ESCAPE.

Discretion proved the better part of valor while the attacking party was seeking cover the robbers put down the track and got clear away. Meanwhile Detective Flynn and his force of officers had followed hard on the raiders, but failed to capture them. It was thought that they would strike Montreal via the Junction, and that point was closely watched until daylight yesterday, but without any result. It is supposed that two of the party are the men who escaped from the Montreal courthouse en route for the jail, while on remand for alleged burglary.

A FARM FOR TRAMPS.

The United Charities Framing a Bill to Relieve New York of Vagrants.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—If the united charities of New York have their way with the Legislature, the professional vagrants of New York is likely to find at last that "work" for which he professes always to be seeking.

A bill is being prepared to be laid before the Legislature, and of which the general plan is the acquirement of a farm on Long Island on which to put away those persons who make begging a business. It is proposed that this farm shall comprise about 300 acres, and that it shall be run on the plan of a penal institution, the tramps and vagrants be committed for a term of five years to be released sooner if reformed.

Charles D. Kellogg, General Secretary of the Charity Organization Society said last night:

"The farm plan has worked well in other States, and has done much to keep away the idle and vicious, or to drive them out of the community. I am satisfied that the scheme, properly carried out, will do the same thing for us."

LOCH LOMOND FROZEN.

The Cold Snap in Scotland—Heavy Snow Impedes Traffic.

EDINBURGH, Jan. 9.—Heavy snowstorms and extremely low temperature continue throughout Scotland. Loch Lomond is frozen over for the first time in 12 years. All railway communication with the west of Scotland and north of Glasgow suspended, the lines being blockaded with snow.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

FLORENCE, Ont., Jan. 9.—William Dawson, farmer, lot 19, concession 9, Dawn township, was killing today while felling trees. A tree which he was felling fell backwards, striking the unfortunate man on the head. He never regained consciousness, and died in a few minutes. Deceased was a bachelor, and leaves three sisters and an aged mother to mourn his loss.

Crushed to Death.

WHITEHAVEN, Pa., Jan. 9.—A freight train dashed into some stock cars on a siding here this morning at a tremendous speed and killed Nathan Fuller, of Nebraska, and Chas. King, of Milton, drovers, who were asleep in them. The sheep in the cars were crushed to death and the wreckage blocked the track of both the Lehigh Valley and the Jersey Central Railroad for several hours.

Plate Glass Monopoly.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Chicago representatives of the two biggest plate glass companies in the United States have received notice that the price had been advanced 10 per cent., the figures going back to those fixed October 27. The reinstatement of prices seems to indicate that the plate glass companies have come to an agreement and [illegible] the formation of a plate glass monopoly.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 10 1895.

Good morning!

It is said that when the Czar heard the news that Mayor Kennedy's majority had been reduced from 4,000 to 14, he wept bitterly.

It is said that a man who Hughes straight to the line is bound to succeed. But there must have been a mighty curve in the line that ex-Councillor Hughes used on Monday.

They have been subjugating patients in the insane asylum at New Westminister, B. C., by flogging, dark cells, ice cold baths and numerous other devices of brutality. A royal commission has made an investigation, and the staff is to be reorganized immediately.

The recent glut in the New York poultry market has led dealers to an organization for mutual protection. Twenty-three firms met for this purpose, and decided not to advance more than 5 cents a pound upon consignments. Liberal advances had previously been made in order to obtain business, and the result was heavy loss.

Owing to the opposition of archæologists the plans for the proposed resevoir at Assouan, in Egypt, has been modified so as to make the top of the dam 26 feet lower. This will save the temples at Philæ and other monuments, but will only supply water enough to irrigate either middle or lower Egypt instead of both.

The Council of 1895, while not as White as that of last year, is the Best that can be afforded under the circumstances. The Stone Mason who constructs Mills that employ Sawyers, has no greater contract on his hands than the present body when it comes to deal with the outfall sewer muddle.

The United States Postmaster-general reports a deficit of $9,243,935 in his department for the current year. He does not favor the taking over the telegraphs of the country by the Government, urging against it the enormous expense that would be entailed, and citing the fact that in England their operation involves a loss of $2,000,000 a year.

Trinity Parish is served by a small army of organists, singers, acolytes and other semi-ecclesiastical adjuncts to worship. There are twelve organists and assistants, and more than 300 persons are employed in the choir as acolytes, servers and crucifers. Besides these the parish employs nearly 40 teachers in its daily schools, a score of sextons and nearly a dozen doctors.

THE CASE OF MR. CAVANAGH.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, who was convicted of selling liquor not having a license therefor, and sentenced to four months in goal at hard labor, has the sympathy of a very large portion of the community. While it is true that he was an old offender, the peculiar circumstances connected with his case, has caused a strong feeling that he is being very harshly treated. At the trial it was shown that that the magistrate was inclined to be merciful, indeed he had no option but to do as he did. Officer Roszel, who had laid the information was appealed to to have it amended so as to make it a first offence, but he flatly refused to do so. It was pointed out that a substantial fine would probably deter Cavanagh from further violation of the law, and that imprisonment was a serious matter to a man of his years—but all to no purpose. With bull-dog tenacity he gruffly refused the strong plea for mercy that was made on behalf of the prisoner by his counsel.

Whether the active part which Cavanagh took in the election the day before in favor of candidates for the Council, who propose th re-organise the police force, had anything to do with Roszel's stubbornness, is a matter of conjecture. There is one thing certain, however, he has long had the credit of being exceedingly vindicative, a trait which unfits him for the responsible position he holds.

It is understood that an effort is to be made to quash the conviction, and we are safe in saying that 99 out of every hunhred of our citizens will be glad to hear that the effort is successful.

THE TREE CHOPPER OF HAWARDEN.

Gladstone, on the authority of his son, is said to have so far recovered in health as to be able to devote himself continually to his favorite pastime of chopping down trees. The remarkable energy shown in this gives a hint of one of the sides of this wonderful old man's character that has led to his making such a success of life. He has been not only the most versatile man of his generation, but a storehouse of strength as well and of energy so great as to lead him, 15 years after he has passed the allotted span of life, to engage himself in an occupation that is caviare to the great majority of men at any age.

For how many men, left to themselves, would seek to find amusement or exercise in chopping down trees? Those who have to do it to earn their daily bread, do it grumblingly and grudgingly, wailing the while that fate is unkind enough to force them into such hard paths; and they fall to envying those whose lot is cast in pleasanter places. When amusement is wanted or exercise it is to the row boat or the cricket field men turn. They never think of chopping down trees or getting after a pile of cordwood with a bucksaw or an axe unless there is a bread and butter object in view. They waste their energies largely. Gladstone has cultivated his and at 85 we find him chopping down trees and enjoying it.

One of these days it shall happen that Gladstone will be the tree, while death will swing the axe and the sturdy old oak that has weathered so many storms will totter and topple over, a stately ruin, grander even in its fall and decay than scrub oaks growing on every side. But we may all hope that that day is long distant. For years past it has been said that the shadows that hang about the end of the path was falling fast upon the old man wonderful, but the old man wonderful of a score of years back is the old man wonderful of to-day, and he is moreover hale and hearty still, and the most remarkable personality of the dying century.

OLD LOVERS.

Oft while hurrying throught the crowd
I've met
A face like one I never shall forget.

Or wandering friendless on a foreign
shore,
Have heard a voice like one I've heard before.

Or passing some deserted street along,
Have caught the echo of a well loved
song.

Or strolling listless in a garden fair,
Have culled a flower like those she used
to wear.

Or thumbing o'er some musty books,
have hit
On one she used to call her favorite.

Or wrapped in dreams of night have lived with her
The once prized life of slave and worshiper.

* * * * * *

But old loves wither, droop and fade
away
Before the one that lives and blooms to-day.

ing Hall," "Bath," "Gymnasium," "Exhibition of Industries," "Academy of Science," "School of Talk," etc., but never a house.

I said:

"Doesn't anybody live in this town?"

He said:

"You do ask silly questions. Upon my word, you do. Where do you think they live?"

I said:

"That's just what I've been trying to think. I don't see any houses anywhere."

He said:

"We don't need houses—not houses such as you are thinking of. We are socialistic now. We live together in fraternity and equality. We live in these blocks that you see. Each block accommodates 1,000 citizens. It contains 1,000 beds, 100 in each room, and bathrooms and dressing rooms in proportion, a dining hall and kitchens. At 7 every morning a bell is rung, and every one rises and tidies up his bed. At 7.30 they go into the dressing rooms and are washed and shaved and have their hair done. At 8 o'clock breakfast is served in the dining hall. It comprises a pint of oatmeal porridge and half a pint of warm milk for each adult citizen. We are all strict vegetarians now. The vegetarian vote increased enormously during the last century, and their organization being very perfect they have been able to dictate every election for the past 50 years. At 1 o'clock another bell is rung, and the people return to dinner, which consists of beans and stewed fruits, with rolly polly pudding twice a week and plumduff on Saturdays. At 5 o'clock there is tea, and at 10 the lights are out and everybody goes to bed. We are all equal, and we all live alike—clerk and scavenger, tinker and apothecary—all together in fraternity and liberty. The men live in blocks on this side of the town, and the women are at the other end of the city."

"Where are the married people kept?" I asked.

"Oh, there are no married couples," he replied. "We abolished marriage 200 years ago. You see, married life did not work at all well with our system. Domestic life, we found, was thoroughly antisocialistic in its tendencies. Men thought more of their wives and families than they did of the state. They wished to labor for the benefit of their little circle of beloved ones rather than for the good of the community. They cared more for the future of their children than for the destiny of humanity. The ties of love and blood bound men together fast in little groups instead of in one great whole. Before considering the advancement of the human race men considered the advancement of their kith and kin. Before striving for the happiness of the greatest number men strove for the happiness of the few who were near and dear to them. In secret men and women hoarded up and labored and denied themselves so as, in secret, to give some little extra gift of joy to their beloved. Love stirred the vice of ambition in men's hearts. To win the smiles of the women they loved, to leave a name behind them that their children might be proud to bear, men sought to raise themselves above the general level, to do some deed that should make the world look up to them and honor them above their fellow men, to press a deeper footprint than another's upon the dusty highway of the age. The fundamental principles of socialism were being daily thwarted and contemned. Each home was a revolutionary center for the propagation of individualism and personality. From the warmth of each domestic hearth grew up the vipers comradeship and independence, to sting the state and poison the minds of men.

"The doctrines of equality were openly disputed. Men, when they loved a woman, thought her superior to every other woman and hardly took any pains to disguise their opinion. Loving wives believed their husbands to be wiser and braver and better than all other men. Mothers laughed at the idea of their children being in no way superior to other children. Children imbibed the hideous heresy that their father and mother were the best father and mother in the world.

"From whatever point you looked at it the family stood forth as our foe. One man had a charming wife and two sweet tempered children. His neighbor was married to a shrew and was the father of 11 noisy, ill dispositioned brats. Where was the equality?

"Again, wherever the family existed, there hovered, ever contending, the angels of joy and sorrow, and in a world where joy and sorrow are known equality cannot live. One man and woman in the night stand weeping beside a little cot. On the other side of the lath and plaster a fair young couple, hand in hand, are laughing at the silly antics of a grave faced, gurgling baby. What is poor equality doing?

"Such things could not be allowed. Love, we saw, was our enemy at every turn. He made equality impossible. He brought joy and pain and peace and suffering in his train. He disturbed men's beliefs and imperiled the destiny of humanity, so we abolish him and all his works.

"Now there are no marriages and therefore no domestic troubles; no wooing, therefore no heartaching; no loving, therefore no sorrowing; no kisses and no [illegible]

"We all live together in equality, free from the troubling of joy and pain."

I said:

"It must be very peaceful, but tell me—I ask the question merely from a scientific standpoint—how do you keep up the supply of men and women?"

He said:

"Oh, that's simple enough! How did you in your day keep up the supply of horses and cows? In the spring so many children, according as the state requires, are arranged for and carefully bred under medical supervision. When they are born, they are taken away from their mothers (who, else, might grow to love them) and brought up in the public nurseries and schools until they are 14. They are then examined by state appointed inspectors, who decided what calling they should be brought up to, and to such calling they are thereupon apprenticed. At 20 they take their rank as citizens and are entitled to a vote. No difference whatever is made between men and women. Both sexes enjoy equal privileges."

I said:

"What are the privileges?"

He said:

"Why, all that I've been telling you."

We wandered on for a few more miles, but passed nothing but street after street of these huge blocks. I said:

"Are there no shops nor stores in this town?"

"No," he replied. "What do we want with shops and stores? The state feeds us, clothes us, houses us, doctors us, washes and dresses us and buries us. What could we do with shops?"

I began to feel tired with our walk. I said:

"Can we go in anywhere and have a drink?"

He said:

"A 'drink!' What's a 'drink!' We have

It is said that Egypt contemplates helping the Italians by making a strong attack upon Dongola. No final decision has been reached, however. THE WORK OF SAVAGES.

CHINESE WERE RUTHLESSLY BUTCHERED AT PORT ARTHUR.

Japanese Soldiers Acted Like Savages, Says the Times—Affairs in the Orient—Chinese Hold a Position—The Peace Envoy.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Times will tomorrow publish advices from Kobe, under date of December 3, giving alleged details of the massacre at Port Arthur. The Times correspondent states that the slaughter was carried out with every revolting feature of primal barbarity. Four days were spent in murder and pillage, and from dawn to dark horrible mutilation of every conceivable kind and nameless atrocities were perpetrated. Prisoners were tied together in groups, riddled with bullets and then hacked to pieces. Boats crowded with fugitives, of both sexes and all ages, received a volley of bullets. The streets were strewn with corpses showing every ghastly form of mutilation.

COULD HAVE BEEN STOPPED.

The Times says editorially that it is impossible to doubt that the General in command could have stopped the barbarous mutilation if he felt so disposed, but his failure to prevent it has cast an indelible blot on the Japanese arms and has gone far to destroy the admiration which Europe was so liberally extending to the Japanese. It will scarcely be thought, either that the Japanese Government had hitherto shown sufficient sensitiveness in the matter.

The correspondent of the Times also said that the mutilations were carried on in every form that oriental cruelty has ever invented. The soldiers were apparently unchecked in their deeds of blood by their commanders, who, totally losing their European veneer, showed absolute unconsciousness of the effect of these brutalities on their western visitors. They did not forget to be effusively attentive to them, and did not appear to suspect that their guests were filled with indignation and disgust.

CHINESE OCCUPY A POSITION.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Central News' correspondent says Gen. Nonseu telegraphs that scouts sent in the direction of Kai-Ping report that 4,000 Chinese under Gen. Chang occupy a position between Kai-Ping and Twen Tien. Scouts returning from Kaio Kwang, he says, report that they saw a force of Chinese under Gen. Nishuen. Shung is said to be advancing upon Hi Ching.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A dispatch from Pekin to The Central News says Chan Yin Yoon, Chinese peace envoy to Japan, started for Tokio today.

The Times hears from its correspondent in Pekin:—The Chinese peace envoy to Japan had a farewell audience with the Emperor yesterday. Japan refused to conclude an armistice. Mr. Denby, the United States Minister, believes that the present negotiations will be fruitless, as the Japanese will withhold the terms till their army shall have occupied Pekin. Japanese landing parties are exploring the bays on the bays on the east coast of Shan Tug.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—The Red Cross Society of Germany will send 80,000 marks to the Red Cross Society of Japan to aid in its present work in the field.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Paris correspondent of The Central News says that the United States embassy in that city authorizes a denial of the reports that France has protested against the presence at French ports of American inspectors of emigrants. On the contrary it is asserted at the embassy every facility is given to these inspectors by the French authorities.

ANOTHER PETITION DROPS.

Dr. Willoughby, M. P. P., for East Northumberland Sits Secure.

COBOURG, Ont., Jan. 8.—The protest in the East Northumberland election petition against W. W. Willoughby, M. D., who has represented that riding in the Legislature uninterruptedly since the death of the last Liberal member, Richard Clark, came up for hearing today before Justices Osler and Street.

No evidence was offered by the prosecution and the petition was dismissed without costs. Dr. Willoughby will hold the seat and the cross petition will of course be dropped. E. F. B. Johnston, Q. C., and F. L. Webb for the petitioner, and Laidlaw and Payne for the respondent.

Large numbers of people from the east riding of Northumberland came to Cobourg which is nearly twenty miles distant to hear the case, and were much disappointed at the way it terminated.

Dr. Willoughby is whip of the Conservative party in the Legislature.

DENVER STRANGLERS.

Two Men Arrested on Suspicion of Being Implicated.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 8.—Victor Moucheraux and Alphonse Lamar are closely confined in the city gaol upon the supposition that they are implicated in the strangler cases of last autumn. There is a third man wanted, who has disappeared from town. Charles Challoup, the French master of the two Contassoit girls, also under arrest, manages to secure the continued postponement of the trial. The case has been set repeatedly, only to be put off upon one pretext or another.

Lamar, while drunk, confessed in the presence of Tony Sanders, that Victor Moucheraux was the murderer of the French girls and of the Japanese woman, killed last autumn, and that the object was money which they were supposed to [illegible] the Market street district, talking with friends when this intimation from Lamar was made. After several drinks had been supplied, Lamar began to talk more freely, resulting in a full story of the case. Both men were arrested and locked up.

A JAPANESE HOME.

LIFE OF THE PEOPLE DESCRIBED BY A NATIVE YOUNG LADY.

How the Houses Are Constructed—Interesting Interiors—Walls, Floors and Furniture—How They Keep Warm—Kitchen and Cooking.

So much is said nowadays in the world's press about our people's warlike spirit and exploits, writes a Japanese young lady educated in Europe to a friend, that you, my sisters in the west, may perhaps like to have a true description of our homes and the peaceful pursuits of our life amid the family circle.

People say our dwellings are like the Swiss chalet in outward appearance. Possibly so, if the latter is built of wood, with three substantial walls and an overhanging roof covered with tiles. The south side is always open and has only sliding doors, consisting of thin wooden frames covered over with white paper, called "shoji," to shut out the wind and cold. Along this side of the house there is a highly polished wooden veranda, and as it is every mistress' aim to keep the wood as bright and spotless as possible it is wiped over with a cloth many times a day.

At night heavy wooden shutters are put up, which are fastened on the inside by means of a hook and ring. In front of the house we have a small sliding door of lattice work. When any one wishes to enter, he stands outside and calls out, "O taho moshi masu" (I beg for honorable admittance) and then waits until some one answers from the inside, "Donata sama?" meaning who may it honorably be. The visitor thereupon gives his name and is admitted through the little door.

In the interior there are rarely any walls, the rooms being partitioned off by means of sliding doors called "karakami." These differ from the "shoji," or white paper walls, which lead to the veranda, in generally being covered with thick painted paper, silk or other materials. Instead of a door handle, we have pretty little bronze indentations on either side of the "karakami." The floors of the rooms are covered with beautiful white mats, made of many layers of rice straw fastened together, on the top of which the fine white matting is placed. The whole is 2 or 3 inches thick and is generally bound round with black glazed cotton cloth. As these mats are always made 6 feet long by 3 feet wide, the size of a room is determined by the number of mats it contains. There is no furniture in a Japanese house. Chairs are unnecessary, for everybody sits on the floor in a kneeling position, with the feet crossed underneath him. Soft silk or crape cushions filled with cotton wadding are strewn around the rooms and are always offered to a guest, but not used in a general way. At mealtimes small tables are brought in for each member of the family, on which are placed the dishes containing each one's portion of the dinner, the soup bowl, rice cup and chopsticks.

As a rule, the foreigner will find none of the many things considered indispensable for a western home to make it attractive. The sole decorations are found on one side, where a dais is raised four to five inches from the ground and made of pretty polished wood, supported by pillars of pine or cherry tree. Upon this are placed quaint curios or vases of flowers and suspended on the wall over it a silk picture called a "kakemono." These pictures are changed according to the season or special occasion. In November, for instance, a "kakemono" with the picture of a chrysanthemum will be hung up, in March one representing a branch of cherry blossoms, others for any particular function, as funerals or weddings.

The raised dais, or "tokonoma," is the only place where we put our pretty ornaments, and then only one at a time, so that none of the beauty of the article may be lost by close connection with other things. Perhaps this is the reason why foreigners call out about our rooms being so bare and comfortless. So they are to any one accustomed to move about in an apartment filled with a variety of things. The same simplicity of decoration is observed in every Japanese house, whether the owner be as rich as Crœsus or as poor as the proverbial church mouse.

As our houses are built of such light materials, we find it very difficult to keep out the cold during the months of November, December, January and February. Besides this we have no means of heating our rooms, and even if we had the wind would still penetrate through the paper "shoji." The only way we do keep warm is by wearing many thickly wadded "kimono" dresses and holding our hands over the "hibachi" brazier, containing pieces of burning charcoal. We are not, however, quite so destitute of all comforts as the foreigner thinks.

The "kotatsu" combines warmth and comfort. For this purpose a square of matting is taken out, and a good sized brazier, filled with charcoal and protected by a kind of wooden cage, is let in the hole. Over this is thrown one of the wadded quilts. Each member sits on a small cushion, places his feet against the [illegible]

When the whole family is thus gathered round the "kotatsu," many are the tales of the great deeds of warriors of bygone ages, of fearful ghosts and monsters and such like subjects, which are told for the amusement of old and young. Here all meet together and rest from labor. The father has returned from business, the mother from her household work, and the children have finished their daily tasks, and all are free to enjoy a quiet hour.

From the sitting and reception rooms we go into the kitchen. Its floors are made of polished boards and are so constructed that they can be taken up at will. As the whole house is raised some 20 to 30 inches from the ground, the space between the floor and the ground is used to store away charcoal and other things. In the middle of the kitchen a square charcoal brazier is let into the floor, and much of the cooking is done over its fire, but the most important utensil is the "kama," or large iron boiler, in which the rice is boiled. It is placed in a stand made of clay. Wood is generally burned in the clay stand, or "hetsui," as it is inexpensive and gives an even heat. The art of boiling rice is brought to great perfection in Japan, and in most houses a servant is kept who attends exclusively to the preparing of that article of food.

Tables and chairs are conspicuous by their absence in our kitchen. In place of the former we use small boards, raised on two legs, called "mana-ita," upon which we cut up our vegetables, "ekoko" (pickles) and other things, and the latter are not necessary, as every one sits on the floor.—Baltimore Sun.

THE AMATEUR FARMER.

How His Enthusiasm Oozed Out Before the Summer Was Over.

He was tired of the city and he thought it was a pity that people during summer in the heated town should stay; and he thought the prospect charming of a season spent in farming, where he'd grow his own corn and turnips and manufacture hay.

To a store he quickly speeded, bought the implements he needed, then a sturdy pair of horses fit to work the plough he sought; rented out his city dwelling, and, his breast with high hopes swelling, he started for country and the farm that he had bought.

Just at first it was enchanting, he'd come at eve descanting on the seeds that he had planted and the fields that he had ploughed; and of "Early Rose" potatoes, "Flat Dutch" cabbage and tomatoes, snapbeans, lettuces and carrots, he would talk both long and loud.

Soon, alas! his dream was over, for the wiry grass and clover went a straying o'er the turnips and no longer then they grew; then the locusts ate his cabbage and the worms his beans did ravage, and a cow got in the gate and ate his corn and carrots, too.

Next the devil-horses caught him and a lot of damage wrought him, and he saw that he would never make a decent crop that year. Said he to his [illegible] wife: "Kitty, we will go back to the city, for I'm tired and disgusted and I can't make headway here."

To the town they soon returned and no more his heart it yearned for a life out in the country and a home upon a farm; and if you want to set him humming, ask him how the crops are coming, then you'll have to skip out quickly, for he'll surely do you harm.

Real Estate Sale.

R. telegraph and ticket offices, and one of the most valuable properties in the city, has been sold by the Scottish Ontario and Manitoba Land Company, of Toronto, to a syndicate of Ottawa capitalists composed of C. A. Douglas, Peter Whelan, Wm. Scott, J. W. McRae, and G. P. Brophy for $80,000.

Cabinet and Governor.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—Lord Aberdeen's action in withdrawing his patronage to the carnival has aroused the strongest comment on every side, and citizens heretofore inert have come forward with generous subscriptions. Even Cabinet Ministers have privately strongly criticised the Governor's action. The attitude of the Ministry may be gathered from the fact that, whereas previous to this they have been rather backward in subscribing, yesterday the names of the whole Cabinet were down.

The Chinese Cornered.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Times will publish tomorrow a despatch from Shanghai saying: "Gen. Sung has sent a message to the Chinese Government to the effect that his force is completely at the mercy of the Japanese and begging for reinforcements or permission to return. A despatch from Tien Tsin says that Chinese agents have been discovered trying to induce British sailors to desert their ships in order to serve China."

CORN AND SILO.

The Manufacture of a Nutritious Food for the Cow.

At the Ontario Creameries Association which is in session at Chesley, the cutting of corn for and the preparation of silo was discussed. The information supplied will be invaluable to dairymen.

The afternoon was taken up with a discussion of corn for the silo, which was introduced by President Derbyshire, and engaged in by Messrs. J. Rowland, Aaron Wenger, D. M. Halliday, Samuel Savage, John Jackson, John Gould, of Ohio, and Prof. Shutt, of Ottawa Experimental station. Mr. Gould addressed the convention at some length. He commenced by saying that the farmer was a manufacturer, and one of his principal objects was to manufacture cheaply a nutricious food for the cow. He explained that the Indian corn crop occupied the first place among all coarse fodders that could be grown in Canada or the United States, and strongly advised farmers to plant corn and have silos if they wished to be prosperous dairymen. The corn crop, he said, was a tropical one, and required heat and moisture for its proper development. To obtain the former the best plan was to sow the corn on a sod soil, and the decomposition of the sod would raise the temperature of the soil 8 or 10 degrees and assist development very materially during the earlier months of the year. He next spoke of the culture of the crop, and said he did not believe it was a good practice to cultivate the soil as was done at present; the fine roots which exist near the surface, whose chief purpose is to absorb moisture, were cut off by the excessive and deep cultivation now in vogue. He believed that the best plan was to thoroughly prepare the sodbed, and then by means of a light harrow, the construction of which he explained, to keep the weeds down. After generating, when the corn was up, he thought it best to desist from further cultivation. He advised the sowing of the corn in drills, three and a half feet apart, the kernels to be planted at a distance of six inches in the rows. By this means the plant would have ample opportunity to absorb its nourishment both from the soil and atmosphere.

Prof. Shutt, at the request of the President, spoke on the growth of the corn crop and the proper time to cut it for the silo. He said he was exceedingly sorry that he had not the charts which he had prepared three years ago, as they would assist in emphasizing the points he wished to make. He explained that several years ago he had conducted a series of experiments with five varieties of Indian corn, viz., thoroughbred white flint, red corn ensilage, mammoth southern sweet, Pearce's prolific and Longfellow. These experiments were continued over two years. One-tenth of an acre of each variety was cut at five stages in the growth of the plant, viz., tasselling, silking, early milk, late milk and glazing. the yields per acre were calculated from the weight off this area. At the same time a chemical analysis was made of these corns in their several stages of growth in order to ascertain their true food value. From this chemical data, together with the weight of yield, he had found that there was a very large increase in the real food value of the corn plant from the tasselling to the glazing period, so that by merely allowing the plant to grow over one hundred per cent. of true cattle food was added to the corn crop between the tasselling and the mature condition. He further stated that the corn for any particular locality to grow was that variety which came to the glazing condition before there was much danger from frost; that it was not true economy to grow a large, heavy yielding corn, which had a few cobs and those immatured, but that proved late, rather than in planting a variety which would mature in about 100 days. He supposed that in this locality the Longfellow and the Pearce's prolific would be suitable varieties to plant. In closing he emphasized the importance of the corn crop to the dairy industry, and went so far as to say that, in his belief, it was the chief factor which had solved, and solved successfully, the question of winter dairying.

Thunder Hawk Hangs Himself

HOT SPRINGS, S. Dak., Jan. 9.—Thunder Hawk, an Indian brought here for his preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering a squaw named Her-Good-Horse and her seven-year-old son, at Rosebud agency, Dec. 12, hanged himself in the county jail last night with a towel. The recent execution of Two Sticks and the Indian dread of execution by hanging was the cause of the act. There was no doubt of his guilt.

Advertising in The Times Pays

THE LAW ABOUT TIPPING.

What a Visit to an English Home Will Cost a Guest.

Let me attempt to throw a ray of light into this cavern of darkness and try to suggest what are the sums generally given by knowing people in England under various circumstances. To begin with, let us take the simplest case—that of an unmarried man who stops from Sunday till Monday in the house of a friend who keeps only a parlor maid or single manservant. Here half a crown should be quite enough for the servant. In the case of a married couple, the lady, if without a maid, adds half a crown for the housemaid. The coachman, if there is one, must have his shilling after driving you to the station. If the visitor stops for a week, he should make his donation 4 shillings. He should allow, that is, about sixpence a night and sixpence over as a sort of ground tax.

We come next to the case of Saturday to Monday in a more elaborate establishment—i. e., where a butler and a footman are kept. Here the Saturday to Monday guest must distinguish. If the footman looks after him, the footman should have half a crown, and the butler also half a crown, in consideration of the fact that the butler will probably order your fly for you and look out for your trains. If, however, the footman is kept in the background altogether and the butler valets you, the butler takes the whole 5 shillings. If you stop for a longer time—any a week—these sums should be raised to 4 or 5 shillings in each case.

If the visitor brings a man of his own, the tip to the footman, of course, disappears, but that to the butler usually remains. When the really great establishments are reached, different rules prevail. The ordinary bachelor guest need perhaps only trouble himself about the special footman told off to wait on him. Unless the butler is an old friend or has to be asked to do something out of the way there is no cause to tip him.—National Review.

Grateful.

In Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller's volume, "Our Home Pets," is told a story of a dear collie dog and his gratitude. The dog, it appears, was a great pet in the family of a colonial soldier and was particularly noted for his antipathy to Indians, whom he delighted to track.

On one campaign against the French the dog insisted on accompanying his master, although his feet were in a terrible condition from having been frozen the previous winter. During the fight, which ended in the famous Braddock defeat, the dog was ever beside his master, but when it was over they became separated, and the soldier, concluding that his pet had been killed, went home without him.

Some weeks later, however, the dog appeared in his old home, separated from the battlefield by many miles of thick forest. He was tired and worn, but over his sore feet were fastened neat moccasins, showing that he had been among Indians, who had been kind to him. Moreover, he soon proved that he had changed his mind about his former foe, for neither bribes nor threats could ever again induce him to track an Indian.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 10, 1895.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Yesterday's Market.

The market yesterday was unusually large for the middle of the week. A very large quantity of hay was brought in. Much more hay has been offered for sale this season than in a number of years.

The National Fund.

The national subscription fund for Lady Thompson has not yet been compiled, but it is surmised to have reached a handsome figure. The fund in Peterborough has reached a creditable sum. This town is never behind in giving, if the cause is a good one.

Committed to Jail.

Old George Ayling, who is well-known as a wood turner, is in his 85th year. The old man is in a helpless condition, not fit for work, and with no prospect of a living except at the hands of the charitably disposed. Yesterday he was taken in charge by the police and housed in the jail for the winter months.

Kennedy's Majority Increased.

The official count of the votes cast in the Mayoralty contest on Monday was made yesterday by City Clerk Blevins, of Toronto. Mayor Kennedy was declared elected by a majority of 45, the increase being chiefly due to the correction of an error made by a deputy returning officer in giving the press the figures of his division.

Pleased with Peterborough.

Mr. Close, a representative of the Universal Knitting Company, Weston, was shown the town yesterday by Mayor Kendry, President Robert Fair, of the Board of Trade, and a number of the Councillors. Mr. Close expressed himself delighted with Peterborough. At 11 o'clock yesterday morning the Manufacturing Committee met and discussed the proposed location of the new concern in Peterborough, but no definite action was taken.

Millbrook Curlers.

The annual meeting of the Millbrook Curling Club was held on Monday last, when the following officers were elected: Hon. president, W. A. Fallis, M.L.A.; president, John Steele; vice-president, Charles Needler; sec.-treasurer, H. M. Wood; committee, D. Hampton, A. A. Smith, J. A. Vance; representative members, Capt. Winslow, L. F. Clarry; skips, W. T. Wood, Charles Needler, John Steele and George Hetherington.

An Enterprising Firm.

Mr. William Faint, of the Ashburnham Woollen Mills, with characteristic enterprise is adding to his business by the construction of a large building in which suitable machinery will be placed for the grinding of bones and the manufacturing of fertilizers. In addition to this Mr. Faint has purchased a new and improved carding machine, which will soon be in operation. The latter will be a great convenience to the farmers, who will appreciate Mr. Faint's enterprise.

Smallpox and Diphtheria.

Dr. Bryce has received a communication from Dr. Gilchrist of Orillia to the effect that 20 very severe cases of diphtheria have occurred at a point in that neighborhood, [illegible] miles distant from any doctor. Dr. Gilchrist asked for a supply of antitoxine, saying that if it were sent he would immediately proceed to the scene of the outbreak. Dr. Bryce wired him instructions to go to the place and the anti-toxine would be sent after him. Two cases of smallpox are reported in Ontario, one in Sandwich and one in Elma Township.

The Business World.

John Dykes, hotelkeeper, of Bismarck, has assigned to George Doble. A. McMurphy, general store-keeper, of Kamoka, has sold out to Wesley Dingman. Lipsit Bros., brick manufacturers, Mount Brydges, have assigned to Alfred Robinson. The bailiff is in possession of the boot and shoe stock of Chaffy & Co., Ottawa. The stock of John H. Netter, grocery and crockery, Owen Sound, has been sold. A. R. Thompson, clothing, men's furnishings, and boots and shoes, Toronto, has assigned to Richard Tew. Andrew Rockel, furniture dealer and builder, Waterloo, has assigned. D. A. McClure, grocer, of Wingham, has given up business.

A Trip Around the World.

Mr. W. E. Ramsay appeared in the opera house last night in his "Trip Around the World," which has won for him such unstinted success throughout Ontario. Unfortunately Mr. Ramsay's audience was very small, and in view of the meritorious character of the entertainment he gives, this can only be accounted for by one or both of two circumstances, namely the prevailing cold weather, or the fact that Mr. Ramsay did not use the advertising columns of THE TIMES in announcing his appearance here. However, the entertainment was really excellent, especially the songs which interspersed the main feature, and it is safe to predict that when Mr. Ramsay again favors Peterborough with an entertainment he will be greeted by a crowded house.

THE WEATHER.

Probs—Fair and moderately cold.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers.

Little Lake is again safe for skaters.

A number of lodges installed officers last night.

The present cold weather will continue, say the Probs.

Sleighing parties are numerous these moonlight nights.

The week of prayer series of meetings are being largely attended.

W. J. Pearson is at the Balmoral hotel prepared to pay the highest cash price for a carload of good sound horses.

The West Algoma and Kingston bye elections will take place on the 28th. The nominations will be on the 21st.

The Marine Minstrels, a local amateur organization, will make their initial bow to the public to a Young's Point audience soon.

You'd best begin to practice up,
For, sure as you're alive,
You'll put the date down "94"
Instead of "95."

The missionary anniversaries of the George and Charlotte street Methodist churches will be held on Sunday, January 24th. The preachers for the day will be Rev. Dr. Galbraith, President of the Toronto Conference, and Rev. Thomas Manning, B.A., of Whitby.

Provincial Analyst Ellis has received from Sarnia the stomach and other organs of Joseph Glass, who died at Sarnia, Dec. 22, after a short illness. The attending physician of Glass, Dr. C. L. Vail, expressed the opinion, when the inquest was held, that the victim died from the effect of an irritant poison.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

Mr. D. S. Green, of Brighton, was in town yesterday.

Mr. W. Senior, of Campbellford, was in town yesterday.

Messrs. Edward Murphy and D. J. LeRoy, of Toronto, are in town.

Mr. John Coughlan and sister, of Hastings, are at the Snowden House.

Jas. W. Gleeson, of Woodstock, is registered at the Grand Central.

Mr. John J. DeVoy and wife, of Detroit, are at the Grand Central.

ANOTHER FIRE.

Large Dry Goods Store in Lindsay Suffers a Big Loss.

Lindsay was visited by a disastrous fire yesterday. At 6 a.m. fire was discovered in the dry goods store of McGaffey, having broken out in the tailoring department. Before the firemen arrived the fire had made such headway that their efforts to save the stock were futile. About $1,200 damage was done the building which is owned by the Dominion Bank. The damage is fully covered by insurance.

The stock which was a total loss was valued at $28,000 to $32,000, insured in Alliance Insurance Co. for $5,000, Manchester for $3,000, United Fire Co. for $2,000, N. B. & M. Co. $6,000, Western $5,000 and Lancashire $3,000.

A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Dashes Down George Street on the Sidewalk Dragging a Cutter.

Pedestrians on George street late last night, and fortunately there were few, were started by a novel sight.

A large fine looking horse, attached to a cutter, took to the sidewalk on the west side of George street and dashed down the ice coated walk at a spanking gait. From Hunter to Charlotte streets, the animal tore along keeping straight in the centre of the narrow thoroughfare. At the corner of Charlotte street, the horse made a neat turn, running about a block down that street when it came to a stop.

The owner of the outfit, who refused to divulge his name, followed in close pursuit, and drove away. The horse had been left standing in front of a store. It is almost incomprehensible that the beast did not run into the many poles along the sidewalk, or some of the store windows. As it was a broken dashboard was the only damage done.

AFTER A SITE.

The Proposition of the Universal Knitting Company.

A committee of the whole Council conferred with Mr. Close, of the Universal Knitting Company last night. Several of the newly elected Councillors were also present.

Mr. Close stated the intentions of his company. He said that they would employ from 80 to 150 employees. The company desired a site where water power could be utilized as a motive power.

The meeting was not open to reporters, and the entire proceedings could not be learned. It is understood, however, that the company will locate in Peterborough if the town will give them a free site. The company proposes to erect a factory with a depth of 200 feet.

The matter was discussed and referred to the Manufacturer's Committee with instructions to report at the next meeting of the council.

A CHIEF ON A LARK.

Hamilton's Police Officer out for a "Little Time."

Hugh McKinnon, Hamilton's chief of police, who is known in Peterborough, has been out for a quiet little time. But Hamilton misses her chief, and the authorities became so anxious that Tuesday night the following despatch made the rounds of the province:

HAMILTON, Jan. 8.—Chief of Police Hugh McKinnon has not been seen in the city for the past week and enquirers at his office are told that he is out of town. A week ago he was given permission to go to Toronto for a day, and whether he is still in Toronto and is working on a case is not known. There is much talk about his continued absence, and on his return it is not unlikely the commissioners will ask him to explain matters.

It fell to the lot of a Toronto reporter to find the missing chief. In yesterday's Mail the following item appeared:

Hamilton's Chief of Police, Hugh McKinnon, formerly of Belleville, and a well-known man in athletic circles, has been having a really pleasant time in Toronto since Saturday last. Late on that evening he appeared at the Grand Union hotel, at the foot of Simcoe street, in company with two very distinguished looking young ladies, and the trio were enrolled on the register as "H. B. Collins, New Haven, Conn.," "Miss Ella ditto," and "Miss Maud ditto." Sunday, Monday and yesterday were spent in Toronto, and last night "Mr. Collins" settled up by a cheque signed "Hugh McKinnon," and the three left the hotel.

HOCKEY.

The hockeyists are getting in readiness for the season's play, which promises to be interesting. The Morrisburg hockey team will play with a local team in Peterborough on January 23.

OTHER SPORTS.

The Canadian featherweight, Jack Fitzpatrick, of Cornwall, has been matched in England to fight Harry Spurden at London for a purse of $500 and $1,000 a side. Fitzpatrick is the man who appeared in Toronto three winters ago at Paul Pettit's place on Adelaide street, Paul undertaking to stop the featherweight in eight rounds. Paul had a little beer on board, and when the two men entered the ring Fitzpatrick went at him like a tiger. In the second round Paul was knocked cleanly out, blood gushing from his nostrils as he fell to the floor.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

Charley Maddock, manager of the Toronto Baseball Club, left yesterday for a two weeks' tour of the big American cities in search of first class players for the Toronto professional ball team. Any number of applications for positions on the nine have been received, but not a man will be signed that is not up to mark.

Richard Croker has entered Dobbins for the Gold Cup and Montauk in a number of two-year-old stakes in England. Montauk will also be nominated for the Derby of 1896.

Ten rinks of the Toronto Curling Club will leave for Hamilton this morning to take part in the big bonspiel.

OUT ON BAIL.

The Case Against Mr. Timothy Cavanagh Appealed.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. A. P. Poussette, on behalf of Mr. T. Cavanagh, who was convicted of selling liquor without a license in the second offence, and sentenced to four months in gaol on Tuesday, instituted the proper proceedings for an appeal, and secured the release of his client on bail until such time as the case will come up before the County Judge for argument.

Mr. Cavanagh was warmly received by his many friends when he made his appearance from the house on the hill.

Rev. William King, who with late Hon. A. McKellar, founded the Elgin settlement 50 years ago in the interest of colored slaves, died at Chatham on Saturday, aged 83.

BROKE JAIL.

Three Prisoners Escape From the Lock-up at Lindsay.

Lindsay is excited over a jail breaking episode, in which three prisoners made their escape.

Early yesterday morning the keeper of the lock-up, when he went to carry breakfast to the prisoners, was astounded to find that three of them had broken jail and escaped.

A search in the town was at once instituted, but no trace of the fugitives could be found. It is feared they have made off to small country villages where they will live by petty pillaging. The three men bear the reputation of being dangerous characters.

LA GRIPPE AGAIN.

It is Epidemic in New York and of a Deadly Nature.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The leading physicians of the Board of Health admit that an epidemic of grippe is raging in the city. They say it is of a very deadly kind, and unless people guard their health, disastrous results may follow. From 3 o'clock yesterday to 10 o'clock today four more deaths from the disease were reported.

Hundreds of people in Jersey City and Hoboken are down with the grippe.

The bill providing for the winding up of the Commercial Bank has passed the Newfoundland legislature.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

A HURRICANE OF FIRE

Again Sweeps Over Toronto's Wholesale District.

LOSSES REACH MILLIONS

Firemen Were Totally Unable to Control the Flames.

CITY SAVED BY RAIN.

Large Wholesale Houses on Both Sides of Wellington Street Razed to the Ground—Women Jump from Five-Storey Windows—The Fire Only Checked by a torrent of Rain—Toronto Visited by the Most Disastrous Conflagration in its History—Sunday's Fire Eclipsed in Point of Destruction and Loss.

Special to the Times.

TORONNO, Jan. 10.—From box 12 an alarm was turned in at 7.30 tonight that prefaced a fire even more destructive than that of Sunday morning. Hardly had the alarm been rung before every reel in the city was at the scene. The fire began at the Osgoodby building on Melinda street which had such a narrow escape on Sunday. The building stood next to the half destroyed warehouse of S. F. McKinnon & Co., and the firemen feared danger from the ruined walls that towered above the smaller structures.

As flat after flat flamed up the extent of the conflagration became more appreciable. None but the firemen knew the full extent of the danger. They knew the way the buildings lay in the rear and understood only too well the difficulty of even the impossibility of confining the blaze to the building where it originated. From the Osgoodby building to the warehouse at the rear was the next jump of the flames.

ON WELLINGTON STREET

The Flames Get a Foothold in the Wholesale District.

As the fire burst through on to Wellington street the crowd commenced to gather in earnest. Thousands of people came from all over the city to witness the conflagration.

On Wellington, from Jordan to Yonge they were jammed in an inextricable mass. On Wellington street west they gathered at first, but the place grew too uncomfortable, as the sparks began to fly in millions into the faces that were upturned. The sight from the windows over the Merchants bank was one never to be forgotten. West, to Bay street, was a mass of fire. On the north side of Wellington west the light of the flames from the fire tongues that darted out across the street, fell on the upturned faces of thousands.

Buntin Reid Building Ablaze.

The fire jumped to the Buntin Reid building on the south side of the street and soon the upper two storeys were in a blaze. Firemen mounted the top of the Kilgour Bros.' warehouse, but they could get no water and their attempts to attack the fire from above were futile.

The First Firemen Hurt.

The first fireman injured was Archibald Crawford, 19 Lippincot street, of the College street hall, a piece of cornice fell on him and injured his hip and back [illegible] the general hospital. The second was Arthur E. Robinson, 141 Cumberland street, whose arm and wrist were hurt while breaking in a door. He went home in a hack

At 7.30 it looked like a sweep from Yonge to York and from Adelaide to Front at least. Sometimes the work of the firemen would tell in the deadening of the fire, but the wind would rouse the flames into forks that seemed to carry the fire north, west and east. The streams of water turned on the flames were pitifully ineffective. Acres and acres in the business centre of Toronto would be a burning waste to-night but for the snow on the roofs and the rain that came to help the firemen.

A Timely Rainfall.

The wind changed to south-west, the rain began to fall and at 8.30 the firemen had forced the flames southward and were fighting hard to stop their march.

A LEAP FOR LIFE

A Woman Jumps from a Fifth Story Window to the Ground.

James Chambers, private night watchman for Roberts, the mattress manufacturer, on the north side of Melinda street opposite the Osgoodby building, was the first to discover the fire. His attention was called to it by the screams of the women on the top flat, where the fire started. The family of Caretaker Cavan were on the fifth floor. As soon as the alarm was given, Mrs. Elizabeth Cavan, seeing that all means of escape were cut off, jumped from the top storey. In her descent she struck the telegraph wires and fell to the ground. She was attended to by Dr. Garrett and sent to St. Michael's hospital, where she now lies in a dangerous condition. Another woman, who was in the Osgoodby building at the time, also jumped from the fifth floor. She was more fortunate than Mrs. Cavan, being able to walk away. The burned district is as follows

THE BURNED DISTRICT

The Heart of the Business Center Ravaged By the Fire.

No. 31 and 33 Melinda street, the Osgoodby building, occupied by the following firms: W. S. Johnson & Co. blank book manufacturers; J. E. Knox, manufacturers agent; Eaton manufacturing Company of Sherbrook; Murray Printing Company; Simmons & Evel, undertakers supplies; J. H. Seecombe, saddlers, hardware; Cobbett Printing Company; G. I. Gorle show cards. No. 35 Melinda street occupied by James O'Brien and James Rigney.

On Wellington Street.

On Wellington street, North side, No. 18, old store of S. F. McKinnon & Co.

No. 20, James A. Cantlie.

No. 22, Williamson & Co, Manufacturers' agents.

W. P. White manufacturers agent; Corticelli Silk Company.

No. 24 and 26, R. H. Gray & Co.

No. 28, Brereton and Manning, furs

No. 32, E. Boisseau & Co.

No. 34, Robert Darling & Co.

Wellington Street—South Side

No. 27, Harte & Riddell.

No. 29, Buntin Reid & Co. (partly) destroyed.

INTO THE MILLIONS

Will the Losses Reach—No Estimate Formed at Present.

The above list only covers the larger buildings and firms burned out. Nobody knows yet how the fire originated, but it started in the Osgoodby building which was owned by James Wood and was valued at $50,000. It was insured for $25,000.

The Globe Suffers Again.

The Saturday supplement of the Globe was being printed in the Osgoodby building and was destroyed. The audience of the Grand Opera House became so alarmed over the fire that they deserted the place in a body and the theatre was closed.

The Fire Department worked hard, but their efforts were of little avail. A high wind was blowing, and the flames could not be checked. Mayor Kennedy telegraphed to Hamilton and other adjacent towns for assistance, but the order was cancelled about 9 o'clock, when it was seen that the rain, which came down in torrents then, was drowning the fire out.

The Loss Not Estimated.

No possible estimate can be made of the loss at present, but it will be enormous and will probably reach far above a million dollars. The immense and costly stock of Wyld, Grassett & Darling, wholesale dry goods, was ruined by water.

It is impossible at this writing to convey anything but a mere outline of the enormous havoc wrought by the conflagration. The excitement is at fever heat, and the streets are lined and jammed with thousands of people. It is impossible to ascertain or estimate any idea of the immense loss. The fire swept through and left in ruins some of Toronto's most substantial and wealthiest wholesale concerns. The loss to the insurance companies will be enormous. It is feared that some of them may be embarrassed.

The Effect

The concerns burned out employed a large number of hands and thousands of people will be out of employment.

Had it not been for the rain which came as a God send, the entire business centre of the city would have been swept away. The firemen were helpless to stop the progress of the devouring element.

At this writing it is still raining, and the fire is subdued. The firemen will work all night. Should the rain stop and the high wind continue, the fire may again get a foot hold.

HAMILTON'S CHIEF.

He Was Registering in Toronto With Another Man's Wife.

HAMILTON, Jan. 10.—Not having officially heard from Chief of Police McKinnon for over a week, when he was given one day's leave, the Commissioners met to investigate the cause of his continued absence.

Magistrate Jelfs said that it was not the first time that the Chief had neglected his duties and had been away from his post. He moved that he be suspended.

Judge Muir agreed that the Chief's conduct was deserving of censure, but he thought it only fair that McKinnon should be given an opportunity to make an explanation.

Accordingly a day's grace was granted. Unless the chief makes a good defence he will certainly be suspended. The probability is that he will be dismissed.

The report that he registered at the Grand Union hotel, Toronto, as "H. P. Collins, New Haven Conn.," and was accompanied by two women, caused a great sensation here.

"Tommy" Gould says that the chief is accompanied by his wife, a captivating young women, and her sister. Gould has decided to institute divorce proceedings. It is said that the two women returned to the city this afternoon.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 11 1895.

Good morning !

The municipal campaign for this yerr of grace developed the fact that the liquor interest is in much greater dread of 9 o'clock closing than of prohibition. They regard the latter as a dream, but an early closing movement is too practical to suit their views.

The reports of the Ontario Bureau of Industries, and of the allied Department of Mines are very interesting, but they are all too slow in coming out. For instance, the mineral statistics for '93 are just out now. They should have been published six months since at latest.

Hot, mild drinks are coming extensively into vogue in place of spirits. This winter in some of the larger cities there is a regular furore for hot non-intoxicating drinks. Tea, coffee, cocoa and chocolate, beef tea, beef boullion, chicken boullion, clam broth, oyster broth, ginger tea—the list is a long one, and the man finds that a cup of any one of them, served in dainty china, is just as good for warming up purposes as whiskey or hot Scotch, and sometimes he almost thinks it is a good deal better.

The Globe is now being written in the editorial rooms of the Empire, the Globe's moulders of public opinion sitting on one side of the table while the Empire's guiders of the destinies of nations are at work on the other side. If you notice a tone of ethereal mildness in the editorial pages of our two esteemed contempories, it is because instead of [illegible] each other in the columns of their papers, they merely reach across the table, pull a few fistfull of each other's hair out by the roots and then settle down to grinding out copy again. This is a new way for newspaper men to adjust their little differences, but it saves the public a deal of agony and apprehension.

The candidates who were defeated for the Council on Monday last should remember that whenever some one wins somebody loses. The defeat is not very easy to bear as a rule. People try to hide their heart aches and griefs, smiling pleasantly and trying to make those they meet believe that it is just as much fun to be a loser as it is to be a winner, but the pretense never deceives any one very seriously. We all look upon it as a sort of necessary humbug, and certainly it is a good deal better for people to take their set backs good naturedly than to go about looking cross and grumpy as if the times were quite out of joint. Frowning or smilling they feel badly enough themselves without the victors making them feel worse by rubbing salt in the wounds. There are a great many healthy lessons to be learned from defeat, but the defeated are not always willing to learn them. One thing the defeated candidates can say to themselves is that the campaign has been a valuable experience, and they will know better how to do things and perhaps have better luck next time.

BUSINESS IN THE STATES.

Henry Clews, banker, of New York, in his last circular, remarks that the immediate outlook in commercial and manufacturing circles is as promising as could be expected at this season of the year and under existing circumstances; for, with the exception of some sections of the west and North-west, the prospects for 1895 is decidedly more favorable, and indicates a business of large proportions than existed in the year just passed. No better barometer of the trade conditions can be produced than the iron industry and this is in far more satisfactory shape as regards the future than was the case a year ago. The stock of manufactured goods of all classes throughout the country is at a very low ebb. Consumption is going on all the while, and the time must soon come when fresh stocks will have to be taken on, and it is not very far away either, as is proven by the increased desire on the part of spinners to buy raw material. Every small depreciation in value is being taken advantage of by them to replenish supplies and this is certainly a gratifying feature after the hand to mouth policy which existed for so long a period.

MASONIC FUNERAL.

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Samuel Ridpath was conveyed to his last resting place by Clermont Lodge, No. 313.

Deceased with his family came to reside here about 15 years ago and conducted a very successful tailoring establishment. He has been a sufferer for a number of years with asthma, but latterly dropsy set in, which finally caused his death on Monday morning at 8 o'clock, the news of which caused quite a shock to the community, as nearly all knew that he was ill but did not think the end would be so soon.

He was a charter member, past master and honorary member of Peterboro Lodge, A.F. & A.M., and, as such it was expected that a number of Peterborough brethren would have been present, although two of the Lakefield brethren who reside in Peterboro were present.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. C. Reeves, after which the impressive service of the Masonic order was read by Bro. Hilliard and responded to by the members.

The funeral was a very large one and was headed by Clermont Lodge, No. 313, A.F. & A.M., with their regalia draped in mourning. At the grave the Masons completed their service.

Mr. Ridpath was a kind and agreeable man, an affectionate husband and father, he leaves behind him a widow and nine children. As a token of respect the stores were all closed.

The sympathy of the whole village is extended to the bereaved family.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. Charles Jory, son of Mr. James Jory died on Monday forenoon very suddenly. He had been suffering for some time back with an abscess on his lungs, and was thought to be getting better. He drove his sister Mrs. Lemay into Peterboro on Saturday. On Monday noon he had a very severe fit of coughing, which caused the abscess to break and it eventually caused his death by smothering he being troubled with asthma. The friends have the sympathy of the community.

BENTLEY'S FAIR.

half a pint of cocoa with my dinner. Do you mean that?"

I did not feel equal to explaining the matter to him, and he evidently would not have understood me if I had, so I said:

"Yes, I meant that."

We passed a very fine looking man a little farther on, and I noticed that he only had one arm. I had noticed two or three in the course of the morning, and it struck me as curious. I remarked about it to my guide.

He said:

"Yes, when a man is above the average size and strength we cut one of his arms off, so as to make things more equal. We lop him down a bit, as it were. Nature, you see, is somewhat behind the times, but we do what we can to put her straight."

I said:

"I suppose you can't abolish her?"

"Well, not altogether," he replied. "We only wish we could. But," he added afterward, with pardonable pride, "we've done a good deal."

I said:

"How about an exceptionally clever man? What would you do with him?"

"Well, we are not much troubled in that way now. We have not come across anything dangerous in the shape of brain power for some very considerable time now. When we do, we perform a surgical operation upon the head, which softens the brain down to the average level.

"I have sometimes thought," mused the old gentleman, "that it is a pity we couldn't level up sometimes instead of always leveling down, but of course that is impossible."

I said:

"Do you think it right of you to cut these people up and tone them down in this manner?"

He said:

"Of course it is right."

"You seem very cocksure about the matter," I retorted. "Why is it of course right?"

"Because it is done by the majority."

"How does that make it right?" I asked.

"A majority cannot do wrong," he answered.

"Oh! Is that what the people who are lopped think!"

"They!" he replied, evidently astonished at the question. "Oh, they are in the minority, you know."

"Yes, but even the minority has a right to its arms and legs and heads, hasn't it?"

"A minority has no rights," he said.

I said:

"It's just as well to belong to the majority if you are thinking of living here, isn't it?"

He said:

"Yes; more of our people do. They seem to think it more convenient."

I was finding the town somewhat uninteresting, and I asked if we could not go out into the country for a change.

My guide said:

"Oh, yes, certainly," but did not think I should care much for it.

"Oh, but it used to be so beautiful in the country," I urged, "before I went to bed. There were great green trees, and grassy, wind waved meadows, and little rose decked cottages, and"——

"Oh, we've changed all that!" interrupted the old gentleman. "It is all one huge market garden now, divided by roads and canals cut at right angles to each other. There is no beauty in the country now whatever. We have abolished beauty. It interfered with our equality. It was not fair that some people should live among lovely scenery and others upon barren moors. So we have made it all pretty much alike everywhere now, and no place can lord it over another."

"Can a man emigrate into any other country?" I asked. "It doesn't matter what country—any other country would do."

"Oh, yes, if he likes," replied my companion. "But why should he? All lands are exactly the same. The whole world is all one people now—one language, one law, one life."

"Is there no variety, no change anywhere?" I asked. "What do you do for pleasure, for recreation? Are there any theaters?"

"No," responded my guide. "We had to abolish theaters. The histrionic temperament seemed utterly unable to accept the principles of equality. Each actor thought himself the best actor in the world and superior, in fact, to most other people altogether. I don't know whether it was the same in your day?"

"Exactly the same," I answered, "but we did not take any notice of it."

"Ah, we did," he replied, "and in consequence shut the theaters up. Besides our White Ribbon Vigilant society said that all places of amusement were vicious and degrading, and, being an energetic and stout winded band, they soon won the majority over to their views, and so all amusements are prohibited now."

I said:

"Are you allowed to read books?"

"Well," he answered, "there are not many written. You see, owing to our all living such perfect lives, and there being no wrong or sorrow or joy or hope or love or grief in the world, and everything being so regular and so proper, there is really nothing much to write about, except, of course, the destiny of humanity."

"True," I said. "I see that. But what of the old works, the classics? You had Shakespeare and Scott and Thackeray, and there were one or two little things of my own that were not half bad. What have you done with all those?"

"Oh, we have burned all those old works," he said. "They were full of the old, wrong notions of the old, wrong, wicked times, when men were merely slaves and beasts of burden."

He said all the old paintings and sculptures had been likewise destroyed, partly for that same reason and partly because they were considered improper by the White Ribbon Vigilance society, which was a great power now, while all new art and literature were forbidden, as such things tended to undermine the principles of equality. They made men think, and the men that thought grew cleverer than those that did not want to think, and those that did not want to think naturally objected to this and, being in the majority, objected to some purpose.

He said that, from like considerations, there were no sports or games permitted. Sports and games caused competition, and competition led to inequality.

I said:

"How long do your citizens work each day?"

"Three hours," he answered. "After that all the remainder of the day belongs to ourselves."

"Ah, that is just what I was coming to!" I remarked. "Now, what do you do with yourselves during those other 21 hours?"

"Oh, we rest."

"What, for the whole 21 hours?"

"Well, rest and think and talk."

"What do you think and talk about?"

"Oh, oh, about how wretched life must have been in the old times, and about how happy we are now, and—and—oh, and the destiny of humanity!"

"Don't you ever get sick of the destiny of humanity?"

"No, not much."

"And what do you understand by it? What is the destiny of humanity, do you think?"

"Oh—why to—to go on being like we are now, only more so—everybody more equal, and more things done by electricity, and everybody to have two votes instead of one, and"——

"Thank you. That will do. Is there anything else that you think of? Have you got a religion?"

"Oh, yes."

"And worship a God?"

"Oh, yes."

"What do you call him?"

"The majority."

"One question more. You don't mind my asking you all these questions, by the bye, do you?"

"Oh, no. That is all part of my three hours' labor for the state."

"Oh, I'm glad of that. I should not like to feel that I was encroaching on your time for rest, but what I wanted to ask was, Do many of the people here commit suicide?"

"No; such a thing never occurs to them."

I looked at the faces of the men and women that were passing. There was a patient, almost pathetic, expression upon them all. I wondered where I had seen that look before. It seemed familiar to me.

All at once I remembered. It was just the quiet, troubled, wondering expression that I had always noticed upon the faces of the horses and oxen that we used to breed and keep in the old world.

No. These people would not think of suicide.

Strange, how very dim and indistinct are the faces growing around me! And where is my guide, and why am I sitting on the pavement? And—hark, surely that is the voice of Mrs. Biggles, my old landlady! Has she been asleep a thousand years too? She says it is 12 o'clock—only 12—and I'm not to be washed till 4:30, and I do feel so stuffy and hot, and my head is aching. Hello, why, I'm in bed! Has it all been a dream? And am I back in the nineteenth century?

Through the open window I hear the rush and roar of old life's battle. Men are fighting, striving, working, carving out each man his own life with the sword of strength and will. Men are laughing, grieving, loving, doing wrong deeds, doing great deeds, falling, struggling, helping one another—living!

And I have a good deal more than three hours' work to do today, and I meant to be up at 7, and, oh, dear, I do wish I had not smoked so many strong cigars last night!—Boston Home Journal.

THE INOFFENSIVE OYSTER.

Other Enemies Than Man Love to Feed Upon His Tender Flesh.

Those who eat these oysters will be interested in some of the facts concerning the oyster. The enemy encountered before meeting the gormand is the drumfish.

The drumfish illustrates one of the curious freaks of nature. Usually when nature arms a hereditary enemy of some other living thing it is equipped with means to conceal its approach. The feet of a heron fold up so that when it walks in the water it sticks its legs in like the point of a knife, and the webs open out under the water. The tiger approaches its prey noiselessly, and the chameleon adapts itself to the color of the tree so that it cannot be seen.

But this interesting principle of nature is reversed in the case of the drumfish. The drumfish notifies the oyster of its approach. It is provided with a natural drum, which it beats, and when a shoal of drumfish come along they make a noise like a fife and drum corps. But the drumming does not help the oyster the least bit, because the oyster cannot run away. He hears the drummers coming. Their loud booming can be heard on any oyster bed on a still night.

Quite different is the method of the starfish. He is another hereditary enemy of the oyster. The starfish gives no notice of his approach.

The starfish has no bones and is like a piece of rubber. There is hardly any limit to the stretch of its mouth. He can keep on stretching his mouth until it envelops the largest oyster. Then he begins to contract his mouth as it goes under the shell of the oyster until it closes on the other side. In this event the starfish is spread about the oyster like a thin layer of flesh, and although the oyster is larger than the starfish yet he finds himself, to his infinite amazement, in the stomach of the latter.

Here an interesting process begins. The starfish squeezes and squeezes until the oyster sets up what a fisherman the other day called "a boiler." The oyster in his agony in the viselike grip of the starfish closes in about him opens his mouth just one little bit, and the moment he does so he is gone, for the starfish is loaded with a sort of poison for just this emergency.

He has a little bill like a hypodermic syringe. This is slipped in between the shells of the oyster the minute he opens them and a deadening liquid injected. This deprives the oyster of all further fight, and the starfish simply sucks him out from his shell. Then the starfish unrolls his stomach and makes off with the dainty morsel, leaving the empty shell for the disgusted planter of the oyster to haul to the surface.

Your oyster must be at least 3 years old. You can take up the shell and count each year of growth. It seems funny to a good many people that the oyster should not only grow in size, but that the shell should also grow with him. The shell only grows frontward. All the increase is made about the lips by the laying on of thin layers of shell from lime extracted from the water. Where the hinge is there is never any material growth.

By the way, very few people are aware that the tail end of an oyster contains its mouth. The oyster feeding at the wrong end gets his food in a nicely purified condition, as it must first pass through a multitude of gills and thin lips, which clear it of many ingredients.

The strongest part of the oyster is in his abductor muscle. That is the scientific name of the thick, heavy muscle which holds both shells together, and it is here that all the physical strength of the oyster is concentrated. His heart, his lungs, his stomach and other organs are scattered about in a curious medley, seemingly held together by light filaments.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Expert Dyers.

The Tyrians, it is claimed, were the most expert dyers of ancient times. The fabrics dyed with the famous tyrian purple did not assume their proper color until after two days' exposure to the light and air. During this time they passed through a gradation of shades of yellow, green, blue, violet and red, which the dyers understood how to arrest and fix at any moment.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RIOTING IN THE COLONY.

PREMIER GREEN COMPELLED TO FACE A HOWLING MOB.

Shops Were Ransacked and the Legislature Was Raided—Order Restored by Tars The Premier's Pledge to the Rioters.

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 9.—Disorder prevailed here all day and serious bloodshed was narrowly averted. The unemployed assembled early this morning and marched to the man-of-war Tourmaline, whose captain promised them yesterday he would use his influence with the authorities in their behalf. When the crowd appeared he referred them to the government. The men then marched to the Government House, where a deputation waited upon the executive. The latter informed them that the government was considering measures of relief and advised them to call on city representatives for their immediate wants. The mob then went to the legislative buildings, but were refused admission. They burst open the doors and surged into the corridors. The police on guard attempted to drive them out but were overwhelmed and

FORCED TO RETIRE.

The police reserves were sent for and after a desperate struggle managed to eject the intruders. In the evening the crowd re-assembled and returned to the Government House, where it complained to the Governor of its treatment during the morning and reiterated its demand for relief. The Governor repeated his advice of the forenoon and said he was powerless to act without the co-operation of the ministry. Then the crowd once more made its way to the Legislative Buildings. The police were powerless to control the mob and many officers were injured. Finally Premier Green appeared on the balcony, and in a speech expressed regret at the condition of the people. He promised that employment would be given within three days, and begged the crowd to have patience and confidence in the government. He promised to resign if work was not provided within the specified time. This did not satisfy the crowd, who told him they would break into stores and get food. This threat of the mob was immediately put into effect. Several stores were looted, but finally a large force of police appeared on the scene and

DROVE THE MOB AWAY.

Four of the leaders have been arrested. The streets tonight are crowded with people. A guard from the warship Tourmaline is doing patrol duty in front of the principal buildings, as it is feared that other raids may be attempted during the night.

Premier Greene presented a pitiful picture when he appeared on the balcony of the legislative building this afternoon to address the crowd. He has been ailing since he accepted office and the worries over the present turbulent condition of the colony has reduced him to almost a skeleton.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

St. John's, Nfld. Jan. 9.—There was a wild time here yesterday. Disorder prevailed all day, and serious bloodshed was narrowly averted. In the morning all the unemployed marched in a body to the Legislature buildings carrying a flag bearing the words "Bread or Work." After being refused admission they burst in the doors and surged into the corridors. After a desperate fight the police managed to get the upperhand and ejected the intruders.

The experiment was repeated in the afternoon and half a dozen of the police were badly injured while attempting to repel the mob. Premier Greene promised work within three days but the crowd was not satisfied and finally looted a number of stores. To restore order the police were compelled to draw their swords.

A SINGULAR SUICIDE.

Under Very Peculiar Circumstances a Railroad Man Takes His Life.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 9.—George W. Davis, aged 28 years, a claim agent on the Lake Shore railroad, committed suicide last night under peculiar circumstances. Early in the evening he went to a barber shop with his brother, and they returned to their home. He seemed cheerful, as usual. Going to a spare bedroom, he lighted the gas, sat down on a chair before the mirror, put his feet upon another chair and shot himself in the temple, the bullet passing through his head. He had not been dead an hour when there came to the house two little girls, who enquired for him, and explained that their sister, whom he was to have married last evening, was waiting for him at her home. The young lady is Miss Anna Noonan, an intelligent and handsome girl. Davis was to have met her last evening at her home, and they were to have gone to Rev. R. A. George, of Trinity Congregational church, to be married, and planned a short trip. Miss Noonan was greatly distressed by the sad affair. It is understood that Davis' mother knew of his having paid attention to Miss Noonan and upbraided him for it on social grounds.

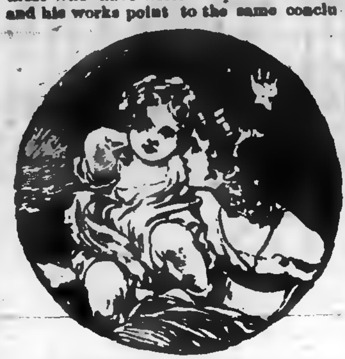
CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"THE LOVELY CHILDREN."

Story of the Painting of One of Sir John Lawrence's Famous Pictures.

The delightful study of children which has been christened "Nature" and engraved under various other titles must be considered Sir Thomas Lawrence's masterpiece in this direction. The painter himself held that his fame must be justified by this and three or four works of similar quality. The pronouncements of those who have written upon the artist and his works point to the same conclusion, and beyond the testimony of literary and artistic criticisms there stands the evidence of the engraver's art to prove that the reproduction of no picture of childhood has probably ever reached the popularity attained by "The Lovely Children," "Nature," "The Daughters of Mr. Charles B. Calmady," "The Calmady Children," or whatever title this work has reappeared under.



F. C. Lewis, who was evidently a friend of the family, had often assured Mrs. Calmady, the wife of Captain Calmady of Woodcote, near Alresford, Hants, that her children, "ere their loveliness as babes should fleet into beauty of a more advanced childhood," would be admirable subjects, and that if Lawrence were to see them he would be glad to paint them on any terms. The eventuality—a lucky one for all concerned—occurred. Sir Thomas saw the children in July, 1823. This must have been at his painting room in Russell square. Captivated by the loveliness of the children, he asked a price lower than his current fee, which would have been 250 guineas. "I suppose," said Mrs. Calmady, "I must still have looked despairingly, for he immediately added, without my saying a word, 'Well, we must say £150 for merely the two little heads in a circle, and some sky—and finish at once.'" The next morning the sittings commenced with zest and pleasure. During the progress of the painting we find the artist deeply interested and showing himself the sympathetic friend of childhood. He was already so enthusiastic over his work that he continually assured the happy parents "it would be the best piece of the kind he ever painted." He retained the children the entire day, kept them entertained with stories, fed them himself, and when, by food and sport refreshed, they were again placed in the "sitter's chair," and the portraits proceeded with, Lawrence seemed to be rivaling Reynolds, as far as concerns his aptitude for making friends with youth. The children caught his humor, played with him as la bonne nourrice, and at one long sitting the little cherub, with her fat, rosy cheeks, relieved her own ennui and supplied him with a fund of laughter by her nursery tales of "Dame Wiggens" and "Field Mice and Raspberry Cream." At another sitting, after Lawrence had had little Emily Calmady's shoe often taken off and had attempted to catch her playful attitudes and expressions, he could not help exclaiming, "How disheartening it is, when we have nature before us, to see how far—with our best efforts and all our study—how very far short we fall of her!"

The little anecdotes concerning the progress of the Calmady picture, including how Sir Thomas was, with his servant, found, instead of painting, washing the face of one of the fair infants, who had got at the artist's palette and paints and bedaubed her countenance grotesquely, represent Lawrence in a familiar light.

A Spider at Home.

The invitations sent out to a child's party had each in the corner a golden web, in the center of which was entangled a brown spider. They were invitations to "a spider at home," an English substitute for a Jack Horner pie, or, it might be, for a Christmas tree. On their arrival at the house of their hostess the little guests were shown into a good sized room, where an immense glittering spider seemed to have spun a web that stretched across the room. The web was composed of many webs, each started from a spider in the center and extended to many nails and projections, where each one terminated in a little wooden winder. After choosing a winder each child followed its wanderings to the spider in which it terminated. Inside these spiders were concealed small gifts. Instead of spiders, beetles or other insects might be used. A variety of insects for such a party could be found at the large Japanese stores or could be fashioned at no very great expense at home. While white cotton threads can be used, a much prettier effect would be gained by using tinsel cord like that used by confectioners for tying boxes of bonbons.—Kansas City Times.

SPORTS OF ALL KINDS.

George Johnson, the English lightweight, offers to box Livigne, of Saginaw, for £200 a side at 126 pounds.

Both Sutton and Capron, the Canadian experts, will enter the next short stop billiard tournament in Chicago.

Ball players, whose habits make it necessary to watch them night and day, will not find places on the Toronto team.

Postmaster Hesing, opening the Chicago cycle show, said that Chicago had 100,000 wheelmen and 10,000 women riders.

The chief attractions at the Seaside Athletic Club, Coney Island, this week will be Dempsey and Ryan today, 15 rounds; and Dixon and Griffo today, 15 rounds. Griffo has been drinking heavily, and he is not likely to be fit to meet Dixon.

John Roberts, jr., the billiard champion of England, offers to play Alfred De Oro a limited number of games of pool, under English and American rules, for £300 a side and the championship of the world. Roberts will give expenses to De Oro if the match is played in England, or accept them if De Oro desires to play in this country.

A Southampton cable says:—The American yacht Vigilant is now lying at Fay's dock out of commission. It is not probable that she will go to the Mediterranean in the spring, but it is believed she will race in English waters until July, when she will be taken to America to compete in the trials for the selection of a cup defender.

ANTI-TOXINE KILLS A HORSE.

Dr. Paul Gibier Gave Him Three Times the Regular Dose.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Dr. Paul Gibier is sending anti-toxine to all parts of the country. The supply of horses with which the Pasteur Institute is provided enables the doctor to give the serum to all who request it.

Dr. Gibier made an experiment yesterday. Complaints have been received that in certain cases inoculation with the serum produced hives. It was found that all the serum complained of had been taken from one horse.

It was decided to kill the horse, and Dr. Gibier, who wished to try the effect of an overdose of anti-toxine, gave the horse three times the regular dose. The horse showed signs of blood poisoning immediately.

He seemed to grow dizzy, and fell to the floor of his stall. In five hours he was dead. His death appeared to be painless. Dr. Gibier says, and the experiment proved that the pure anti-toxine from the bacillus of diphtheria is an active poison.

Death of Gen. Hawkins.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Lieut.-General Sir John Summerfield Hawkins, R. E., K. C. M. G., is dead. He was born in 1816. General Hawkins was commission for marking out the boundary between the British and United States territories west of the Rocky Mountains from 1860 to 1863, and was retired in 1881.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—It is reported here that the decision of the Judicial committee of the Privy Council on the Manitoba school case will be given very soon.

In well-informed circles it is expected that the decision will reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, thus giving the Roman Catholic petitioners in Manitoba the right to appear before the Governor-in-Council of the Dominion and argue their claims.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Slipped on George Street.

Mr. T. Workman, the well known artist, slipped and fell on George street yesterday, hurting himself pretty badly. Mr. Workman was considerably shaken up and bruised by the fall. He is confined to his bed.

Swallowed a Skewer.

An iron skewer 8 inches in length, which had been swallowed by Mr. A. Cox's large mastiff in eating a piece of meat, was removed from the dog's stomach yesterday by Dr. Thomas Johnston. The dog stood the operation well.

C. L. A Debate.

The Catholic Literary Association held their second assembly last night, at which a large number of young people were present. The feature of the evening was a debate, a very interesting and instructive source of amusement.

Collegiate Institute vs. Volts.

The Collegiate Institute hockey team will play the Edison team on Saturday afternoon at the rink. The Collegiate team will be comprised of: J. Hamilton, goal; H. Lewis, point; C. Poussette, cover point; Greesley, R. Belleghem. L. King and G. White, forwards.

Another Runaway.

About 8 o'clock last night a horse attached to a cutter made a break for liberty at the corner of George and Brock streets, and ran northward at a furious rate. The owner, a farmer started in pursuit, and at last accounts was still looking for his equestine.

A Survey Party.

A surveying party under the direction of Superintending Engineer Rogers, of the Trent Valley Canal, has started out for the purpose of surveying those lakes and dams in the Northern country which are tributary to the Trent Valley Canal. The party is in charge of Mr. T. A. Hay.

Two Weddings.

Mr. Ralph H. Reville, of the Brantford Courier, was married yesterday to Miss Anna Gould, daughter of the well-known manufacturer of the Gould bicycle. The groom is well-known in Peterborough and Lakefield. At Brighton Miss Rose Lockhardt was wedded to Dr. J. Campbell, of Rochester. The bride has many friends in Peterborough.

Their Loss Was Little.

The many patrons of Miller & Richards, type founders, Toronto, will be glad to learn that the firm's loss will be very small in the recent fire and this was caused more by water damage than by fire. The firms large warehouse remained intact, nothing being destroyed, and the business of this well known concern has gone on uninterruptedly.

A Provincial Constabulary

A circular has been issued all over the Province by the Provincial Constabulary Committee, for the purpose of agitating and getting the views of all parties dealing with criminal justice upon the formation of a Provincial Constabulary Bureau in the Province. The proposed constabulary is to be formed of County constables to be paid by the province, and the aims and objects are the "better protection in the country." The chief is in receipt of a circular.

After a Foundry.

We have heard whisperings lately that Peterborough and a couple of other towns have been offering inducements to Mr. Dryden with a view of encouraging the removal of his foundry business from Port Perry. Knowing also that Mr. Dryden feels he is too highly assessed, leads us to ask the question whether it would not be prudence on the part of the council to meet Mr. Dryden and offer him a reduction in his foundry assessment? If that gentleman were to see it to his interest to leave Port Perry owing to the stringency of the times, the town would then, and not till then: fully realise the loss of the foundry. It seems to us every effort should be made to hold whatever business there is here, and not sit quietly by and allow other centres to snatch from us that which we would be sorry to lose.—Port Perry Standard.

Didn't Like Serenading.

A rather elderly farmer living in Otonabee, was married about 10 days ago to a very young woman. This was his second venture in the matrimonial market. It appears that after his first marriage he was serenaded by the neighboring young men, although he had a detestation of that sort of a thing, and this time he pleaded with the boys not to come around and bother him. However the boys had no intention of leaving him alone, and so on the night of his marriage they surrounded the house and serenaded the bride and groom with numerous tin instruments. In a few minutes the groom stuck his head out of the window and asked them if they would go away if he gave them a jug of whiskey. The offer was accepted and the jug was lowered from the window by means of a cord. The boys had a great time with the contents, but an hour afterwards the entire party were taken deathly sick. The liquor was liberally mixed with croton oil. A young man in town was one of the party.

THE STORM.

A Blinding Snow Storm From the North-east.

This town was struck by a blinding snow storm yesterday morning which continued with more or less violence all day and last night.

Sheets of sleet snow swept the streets, covering the sidewalks and blowing into the faces of pedestrians. The storm had a noticeable effect on business, merchants experiencing a dull day.

The street railway traffic was handicapped, the tracks being kept clear by the sweeper which was kept going all day. The sweeper also made several rounds during the night.

The storm came from the northeast and was not forecasted by the weather bureau. In Toronto the street railway traffic was demoralized.

None of the trains were delayed on account of the storm.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

AFTERMATH OF THE FIRE.

THE LOSS ESTIMATED AT NEARLY ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

Insurance Companies Lose Half a Million—The Walls of the Osgoodby Building Fall With a Crash—The Injured Doing Well.

Special to the Times.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—The scene of desolation was further increased by the fall of the north wall of the Osgoodby building about ten o'clock this morning. It fell outwards across Melinda street, striking and carrying down the hundreds of telegraph wires along there. All the poles in the locality were snapped by the strain on the wires and fell at the same time.

All morning the fall of the wall had been expected. It was of great height, and strange to say when the woodwork was burned on the inside nothing was left to support the wall but its own base. It kept swaying for nearly a foot at the top from the time the wind arose last night until it fell.

The drop of some 200,000 bricks on Melinda street made every structure in the neighborhood quiver.

The tangle of wires is very great and the police have much difficulty in keeping the crowds out of danger of falling bricks and live wires.

A DREARY SPECTACLE.

By the light of day the dismantled buildings presented a desolate appearance. Where previously tall and handsome edifices reared skyward, containing thousands of dollars worth of goods, nothing remained except bare gaunt walls enclosing a smoking mass of debris.

Every building that suffered any damage of any considerable size was thoroughly gutted. Hunter, Rose & Co.'s premises on Wellington street were scorched in the top storey, but the fire did not gain much headway in that direction.

LOSSES AND INSURANCE.

The aggregate loss will probably reach a round million. The known losses are:

J. W. Woods, owner of the Osgoodby building, loss $60,000, insurance $25,000.

Cohen Bros., manufacturing jewellers, loss $9,000, insurance $1,800.

INSURANCE COMPANIES' RISKS.

This morning the insurance men had a busy time looking up entries of policies, receiving reports of damages; and in some cases taking increased risks from merchants whose spring stock is coming in. Judging from the figures obtainable, the loss will not fall so heavily on any one as in the last fire, although the amount is larger, the sums being distributed upon a greater number of companies.

The following figures give the risks carried by the various companies, but not the losses, which have yet to be calculated:

The Northern Insurance Company had $3,000 on Buntin, Reid & Co. In all the Company will not lose more than $10,000, one fourth of their loss by Sunday fire.

The Guardian is hit hard, having $20,000 on Robert Darling & Co., and $10,500 on R. H. Gray & Co.

Mercantile Insurance Company, $5,000 on Hunter & Rose.

Caledonian Insurance Company, $2,500 on Cohen Bros.

THE INJURED DOING WELL.

Mrs. Caven, whose perilous jump from the burning Osgoodby building is chronicled, was the most startling feature of the fire, is doing remarkably well at St. Michael's hospital. The physicians who are in attendance are hopeful of saving her life.

The injured firemen are getting along as well as can be expected.

MUCH MARRIED.

The Matrimonial Adventures of Mrs. James Dempster of Gananoque—Placed Under Arrest.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 11.—Mrs. Jas. Dempster was arrested at Gananoque today on a charge of bigamy and the circumstances of the case are somewhat romantic. The woman's name was formerly Annie Graham and in 1890 she married a man named Dowsley, a resident of Mallorytown, a village a few miles west of Brockville. The bliss matrimonial ventures was conspicuously absent in this instance, and after a month's life in double harness the pair separated.

The woman travelled under the name of Dowsley until recently, when she assumed that of McDonald and took up her residence in Gananoque. Here she ran across one Jas. Dempster, a man of comfortable means and in search of a life partner. Marriage was the result and everything went happily along until a few days ago, when the first husband, Dowsley, turned up. He threatened to expose the pair unless given a deed of Dempster's farm, and when this was not forthcoming, carried his threat into effect. The arrest of the woman was the result. She will be given a preliminary hearing before a magistrate tomorrow.

THREE WERE DROWNED.

SOLDIERS MEET A WATERY GRAVE IN THE NIAGARA RIVER.

Impeded by Ice While Crossing the Niagara They Call for Help but Succumb to Cold and Exhaustion Before it Arrives.

NIAGARA, Ont., Jan. 11.—About five o'clock last evening, during a heavy north east gale with rain and sleet, three American soldiers of the 21st Infantry, named William Trentner, of the 21st Band, son of the bandmaster, Private Tuttler and Corporal Deaborgh, left Fort Niagara in a small boat to cross the Niagara River to this place. When within about two hundred yards of the Canadian shore they became fast in the ice. They were first seen by some fishermen about six o'clock, and when the report spread that they were in the ice the river bank was soon lined with hundreds of people.

The men all this time were calling for help and many efforts were made to save them but it was utterly impossible to get a boat or line near them. About 7 o'clock, when they had drifted below the Queen's Royal wharf, their boat was struck by a heavy sea, upsetting it and throwing the men into the water. They managed to crawl, however, on top of the upturned boat, where they clung for an hour. The cries of the poor fellows for assistance now became heartrending to the crowds on the bank, who could do nothing but watch them as they were gradually compelled by exhaustion and the cold to drop off the boat and sink. Six boats are now out grappling for the bodies. The sea was the heaviest seen here in years.

BOMBARDED BY THE FRENCH.

A Madagascar Fort Assailed and Stoutly Defended.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A despatch to the Globe from Port Louis, Maritius, says news has been received from Madagascar stating that the French have bombarded Fort Farafatra, four miles inland from Tamatave. The Hovas defended the fort, replying to the French fire with well-directed shots from the seven guns comprising the armament of the fort. The advices received at Port Louis give no details of the engagement.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Further advices from Madagascar, via Port Louis, say the attack upon Fort Farafatre was made December 24. The Hovas were defeated and retired with heavy loss.

Governor's Salary Reduced.

MELBOURNE, Jan. 11.—This evening the Assembly adopted the government's proposal to reduce the Governor's salary from £10,000 to £5,000, beginning with the next Governor. It is believed that in consequence of this decision only a rich man will be able henceforth to maintain the dignity of the governor's office. The assembly also adopted the proposal to reduce the salaries of members of the assembly from £400 to £240. The legislative council rejected the income and land tax bill, thereby creating a deadlock between the two Houses. The council would have passed an income tax alone.

Desperate Moonshiner Dead.

IUKA, Miss., Jan. 11.—News comes from Red Sulphur Springs, Tenn., of a double tragedy in which a commercial traveller named Steele and a noted moonshiner, Gus Thomas, lost their lives. Thomas was the outlaw who, a week ago, murdered Dr. Martin, and was in the party which, a couple of years ago, fired into a posse of Federal revenue officers, wounding Marshal J. W. Brown and killing Deputy Marshal Garner. He was the most desperate moonshiner in the south.

Position of the Japs.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Times will publish tomorrow a despatch from its Tien Tsen correspondent saying: The Japanese armies are posted in a curve extending from the Kaiphing seashore to Hai Cheng, which is strongly fortified and thence to Metien Ling, a strong offensive and defensive position. The Chinese peace envoys will go to Hiroshima on a passenger steamer, Japan objecting to special vessel. The Japanese Foreign Minister Mutsu has been delegated to negotiate with them.

Aground in a Fog.

GLASGOW, Jan. 11.—A dense fog overhangs the river Clyde today. The Anchor Line steamer Anchoria, Captain Campbell, is aground on Skelmorlie bank. Passengers will be landed at Wemyss bay and forwarded by train to Glasgow. Five steamers which left Greenock yesterday for Glasgow have not been reported, and it is believed that they have anchored in the river waiting for the fog to lift.

Murder and Suicide.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 11.—Today O. W. Rollings and his wife were found dead in their home at 610 Emerson Ave. They had not been seen for several days and this morning the neighbors forced an entrance to the house. A revolver was found indicating murder and suicide.

The Anti-Revolution Bill.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—In the Reichstag today the debate on the Anti-Revolution Bill was resumed. Count Von Limburg-Stirum, Conservative, declared that his party hailed the bill with satisfaction. The Socialists, he added, were not justified in claiming to be the sole labor party.

HE TALKED TOO MUCH.

PRISONER HENDERSHOTT'S TONGUE MAY HANG HIM.

When He Heard of His Nephew's Death He Remarked that a Tree Must Have Fell on Him While He was Getting His Watch.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 11.—The fifth day of the investigation into the Middlemarch murder has come and gone and the case still drags on. Three sessions were held today, and a large number of witnesses examined.

At the morning session Duncan Hendershott of Fingal was on the stand for a couple of hours, and described a pitiable dispute between the relatives of the murdered man over his clothes.

James Howker, John McLachlin and Colin A. Gregory told of the position of the body under the tree, the bloody pool of water in which the ax was washed, and identified the clothes.

THOSE TELEGRAMS.

W. H. Partridge gave unimportant evidence, and George Rowley produced copies of telegrams sent by Charles Welter and Duncan Hendershott on the night of the killing.

At the afternoon session, David Hendershott, father of the deceased, N. W. Moore, jailer, W. R. Jackson, jeweler, and T. Caugan, turnkey Elgin Jail, gave evidence proving conclusively that the watch worn by the prisoner Welter was the property of the murdered man, and the one given to the father of the deceased as that of his son was the property of prisoner Welter. When Welter was questioned in the jail by County Crown Attorney Donahue, he said the watch was his own, that he had got it six or eight weeks before in a trade with a stranger he could not describe at the Penwarden Hotel, giving his own watch and $1 to boot for it.

A PECULIAR ADMISSION.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ketchabaw of Bayham told of receiving the telegram, saying "William Hendershott is dead," and the discussion as to whether it was the uncle or nephew. Prisoner Hendershott expressed the opinion that it was his nephew and that perhaps a tree fell on him.

W. J. Ostrander, blacksmith, Eden, said that Hendershott told him that his nephew had probably been killed by a tree falling upon him. He had bought a new watch in the fall, said Hendershott, and probably while running for his clothes and watch had been struck by a falling tree and killed. When going to bed in Eden that Friday night a policy fell from Hendershott's pocket, and prisoner produced the other policy and Ostrander read them both.

Hendershott swore at the inquest that he never carried the policies with him.

CONTRADICTORY STATEMENTS.

At the evening session George Stanton, Middlemarch; A. McGregor, Southwold, and Mrs. W. J. Ostrander, of Eden, told of the visit of the Hendershotts there, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bancroft of visits, and related conversations which took place in the presence of the prisoners in the Penwarden hotel, contradicting the statements of the two prisoners and Miss Hendershott in regard to those conversations.

The taking of the evidence of Crown witnesses will occupy a couple of days more, and the case will not be concluded this week.

THE FIGHTING GOES ON.

TWO JAPANESE ARMIES PUSHING ONWARDS TO PEKIN.

Britain Will Not Allow China to Accede to Japan's Demands—The Latter Too Eager for the Spoils of War.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Central News correspondent at Tokio says word has been received from Kaiping that at dawn on the 10th inst. a brigade of the second Japanese army, under the command of Gen. Nogi, attacked a large body of Chinese in the vicinity of Kaiping and routed them after four hours' hard fighting, at the conclusion of which a detachment of the Japanese forces occupied Kaipink. The Chinese force exceeded 3,000 men, with two Gatling guns and 12 field guns. The enemy fled towards Haishatsai, vigorously pursued by the victorious army. Any Chinese forces remaining in the vicinity of New Chwang are now between the two Japanese armies.

[illegible], Jan. 11.—The Cologne Gazette advises the Government of Japan to make peace with China at once. It will be a dangerous thing for Japan, the Gazette says, if her desire for the fruits of victory increases, as her demands might become so exaggerated that the European powers could not allow China to concede them.

A telegram from Shanghai says: The Japanese army occupied Ka Hing on the 10th instant. Gen. Sung and the other Chinese officers and soldiers made a precipitate retreat to Ting King, and the latter town is now in great confusion.

VICTORIA, B.C., 11.—Tokio advices up to December 14, per steamer Tacoma, says: The Japanese Diet opened today with an entire absence of excitement, and only a limited attendance. Count Ito, the Minister President, attended and read the following Imperial rescript, in which occurs the following:—"Of the progress of the war there is little to be said. The first and second army divisions are pushing on toward Pekin, meeting with a stubborn resistance as they proceed. The third division has also landed on Manchurian soil, and has taken part in several engagements, in which the Chinese conducted themselves with great valor. Preparations are rapidly advancing for the defence of Pekin, and there is every indication that the next blow of the war will be struck at this, the one vital spot of the Chinese empire."

McKinnon Was in Guelph.

GUELPH, Jan. 11.—Chief McKinnon, of Hamilton, who has attained such notoriety lately, spent the latter part of the last week in this city. On Friday he was accompanied on the streets by two gaily attired and pretty girls. The did considerable shopping, and money appeared to be no object with them. The chief's magnificent physique and the beauty of his fair companions were freely commented upon. One of the ladies gave her name as Mrs. Gould. They left here on Saturday for Toronto. The chief was noticed by several of his friends here, but gave the information that he was here on the quiet and did not want anything said about his visit.

Good-bye to Bismarck.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—Count Shouvaloff, the retiring Russian Ambassador, who succeeds Gen. Gourko in Warsaw will go to Friedrichsruhe to say good-bye to Bismarck.

A HURRICANE OF FIRE

Again Sweeps Over Toronto's Wholesale District.

LOSSES REACH MILLIONS

Firemen Were Totally Unable to Control the Flames.

CITY SAVED BY RAIN.

Large Wholesale Houses on Both Sides of Wellington Street Razed to the Ground—Women Jump from Five-Storey Windows—The Fire Only Checked by a torrent of Rain—Toronto Visited by the Most Disastrous Conflagration in its History—Sunday's Fire Eclipsed in Point of Destruction and Loss,

Special to the Times.

TORONNO, Jan. 10.—From box 12 an alarm was turned in at 7.30 tonight that prefaced a fire even more destructive than that of Sunday morning. Hardly had the alarm been rung before every reel in the city was at the scene. The fire began at the Osgoodby building on Melinda street which had such a narrow escape on Sunday. The building stood next to the half destroyed warehouse of S. F. McKinnon & Co., and the firemen feared danger from the ruined walls that towered above the smaller structures.

As flat after flat flamed up the extent of the conflagration became more appreciable. None but the firemen knew the full extent of the danger. They knew the way the buildings lay in the rear and understood only too well the difficulty of even the impossibility of confining the blaze to the building where it originated. From the Osgoodby building to the warehouse at the rear was the next jump of the flames.

ON WELLINGTON STREET.

The Flames Get a Foothold in the Wholesale District.

As the fire burst through on to Wellington street the crowd commenced to gather in earnest. Thousands of people came from all over the city to witness the conflagration.

On Wellington, from Jordan to Yonge they were jammed in an inextricable mass. On Wellington street west they gathered at first, but the place grew too uncomfortable, as the sparks began to fly in millions into the faces that were upturned. The sight from the windows over the Merchants bank was one never to be forgotten. West, to Bay street, was a mass of fire. On the north side of Wellington west the light of the flames from the fire tongues that darted out across the street, fell on the upturned faces of thousands.

Buntin Reid Building Ablaze.

The fire jumped to the Buntin Reid building on the south side of the street and soon the upper two storeys were in a blaze. Firemen mounted the top of the Kilgour Bros.' warehouse, but they could get no water and their attempts to attack the fire from above were futile.

The First Fireman Hurt.

The first fireman injured was Archibald Crawford, 19 Lippincott street, of the College street hall, a piece of cornice fell on him and injured his hip and back and he was sent in the ambulance to the general hospital. The second was Arthur E. Robinson, 141 Cumberland street, whose arm and wrist were hurt while breaking in a door. He went home in a hack

At 7.30 it looked like a sweep from Yonge to York and from Adelaide to Front at least Sometimes the work of the firemen would tell in the deadening of the fire, but the wind would rouse the flames into forks that seemed to carry the fire north, west and east. The streams of water turned on the flames were pitifully ineffective. Acres and acres in the business centre of Toronto would be a burning waste to-night but for the snow on the roofs and the rain that came to help the firemen.

A Timely Rainfall.

The wind changed to south-west, the rain began to fall and at 8.30 the firemen had forced the flames southward and were fighting hard to stop their march.

A LEAP FOR LIFE

A Woman Jumps from a Fifth Story Window to the Ground.

James Chambers, private night watchman for Roberts, the mattress manufacturer, on the north side of Melindas treet opposite the Osgoodby building, was the first to discover the fire. His attention was called to it by the screams of the women on the top flat, where the fire started The family of Caretaker Cavan were on the fifth floor. As soon as the alarm was given, Mrs. Elizabeth Cavan, seeing that all means of escape were cut off, jumped from the top storey. In her descent she struck the telegraph wires and fell to the ground. She was attended to by Dr. Garrett and sent to St. Michael's hospital, where she now lies in a dangerous condition. Another woman, who was in the Osgoodby building at the time, also jumped from the fifth floor. She was more fortunate than Mrs. Cavan, being able to walk away. The burned district is as follows:

THE BURNED DISTRICT.

The Heart of the Business Center Ravaged By the Fire.

No. 31 and 33 Melinda street, the Osgood by building, occupied by the following firms: W. S. Johnson & Co. blank book manufacturers; J. E. Knox, manufacturers agent; Eaton manufacturing Company of Sherbrook; Murray Printing Company; Simmons & Evel, undertakers supplies; J. H. Seecombe, saddlers, hardware; Cobbett Printing Company; G. I. Gorie show cards. No. 35 Melinda street occupied by James O'Brien and James Rigney.

On Wellington Street.

On Wellington street, North side, No. 18, old store of S. F. McKinnon & Co.

No. 20, James A. Canthe.

W. P. White manufacturers agent; Corticelli Silk Company.

No. 24 and 26, R. H. Gray & Co.

No. 28, Brereton and Manning, furs.

No. 32, E. Boisseon & Co.

No. 34, Robert Darling & Co.

Wellington Street—South Side.

No. 27, Harte & Riddell.

No. 29, Buntin Reid & Co. (partly) destroyed.

INTO THE MILLIONS

Will the Losses Reach—No Estimate Formed at Present.

The above list only covers the larger buildings and firms burned out. Nobody knows yet how the fire originated, but it started in the Osgoodby building which was owned by James Wood and was valued at $80,000. It was insured for $25,000.

The Globe Suffers Again.

The Saturday supplement of the Globe was being printed in the Osgoodby building and was destroyed. The audience of the Grand Opera House became so alarmed over the fire that they deserted the place in a body and the theatre was closed.

The Fire Department worked hard, but their efforts were of little avail. A high wind was blowing, and the flames could not be checked. Mayor Kennedy telegraphed to Hamilton and other adjacent towns for assistance, but the order was cancelled about 9 o'clock, when it was seen that the rain, which came down in torrents then, was drowning the fire out.

The Loss Not Estimated.

No possible estimate can be made of the loss at present, but it will be enormous and will probably reach far above a million dollars. The immense and costly stock of Wyld, Grassett & Darling, wholesale dry goods, was ruined by water.

It is impossible at this writing to convey anything but a mere outline of the enormous havoc wrought by the conflagration. The excitement is at fever heat, and the streets are lined and jammed with thousands of people. It is impossible to ascertain or estimate any idea of the immense loss. The fire swept through and left in ruins some of Toronto's most substantia and wealthiest wholesale concerns. The loss to the insurance companies will be enormous. It is feared that some of them may be embarrassed.

The Effect.

The concerns burned out employed a large number of hands and thousands of people will be out of employment.

Had it not been for the rain which came as a God send, the entire business centre of the city would have been swept away. The firemen were helpless to stop the progress of the devouring element.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW PERSON"

This is the Testimony of a Prominent Toronto Merchant.

Paine's Celery Compound, a Boon to Business Men.

J. C. FROST.

Legislators, judges, doctors, lawyers, bankers, merchants and all prudent and wise people now use Paine's Celery Compound when sickly, weak, run-down, nervous, sleepless, billious or dyspeptic. The virtues of this great healer of disease are known everywhere, and many of our ablest physicians are prescribing it daily, because they know it to be a medicine of wondrous power.

Mr. John C. Frost, of the well-known firm of Francis Frost & Co., Toronto, was speedily cured of billiousness, headache and severe neuralgia.

Mr. Frost writes as follows:—

I have been subject to severe billious attacks and headaches for the past fifteen years. During that time I have been doctoring, and have also tried patent medicines, but nothing seemed to give me relief. Last winter, after suffering with neuralgia for about two months, I started to take Paine's Celery Compound, and before the first bottle was finished my neuralgia was completly cured. I have now taken six bottles, and I am very pleased to inform you that my old complaint has entirely disappeared and I feel like a new person.

HAMILTON'S CHIEF.

He Went Sky-Larking in Toronto With Another Man's Wife.

HAMILTON, Jan. 10.—Not having officially heard from Chief of Police McKinnon for over a week, when he was given one day's leave, the Commissioners met to investigate the cause of his continued absence.

Magistrate Jelfs said that it was not the first time that the Chief had neglected his duties and had been away from his post. He moved that he be suspended.

Judge Muir agreed that the Chief's conduct was deserving of censure, but he thought it only fair that McKinnon should be given an opportunity to make an explanation.

Accordingly a day's grace was granted. Unless the chief makes a good defence he will certainly be suspended. The probability is that he will be dismissed.

The report that he registered at the Grand Union hotel, Toronto, as "H. P. Collins, New Haven Conn.," and was accompanied by two women, caused a great sensation here.

"Tommy" Gould says that the chief is accompanied by his wife, a captivating young women, and her sister. Gould has decided to institute divorce proceedings. It is said that the two women returned to the city this afternoon.

EDITOR IN COURT.

Proprietor of the World Charged with Publishing on Sunday.

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—There appeared in the Police Court today Lawyer W. G. Murdoch for W. F. Maclean, M.P., who was charged with "exercising the worldly business of his ordinary calling on the Lord's Day" by publishing an edition of The World last Sunday morning containing an account of the big fire.

Mr. Murdoch asked for a remand until next Wednesday, which was granted.

Inspector Archibald, who is prosecuting, asked that the defendant admit publication to facilitate matters.

"We won't admit anything," said Mr. Murdoch, "except that the information does not disclose an offence."

These newsboys, charged with a breach of the Lord's Day Act by selling the papers were remanded until the same day: Meyer Grismen, Samuel Papernick, Abraham Philcroft, Abie Rosen, Samuel Goodman, Frank Lombard, Jas. Wilson, Jacob Spring, Frank Foley, Charles Brown, Isaac Wilks, Joseph Woods, John Clark, James De Rosey and Thomas Shannessy.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 10.—The American Consul here will confer with the clergy to arrange for the effectual distribution of supplies forwarded from the United States for the amelioration of the distress. No further riots have occurred although a mob surrounded the court where the riot-ringleaders were on trial. The four men were remanded.

The investigation into the cases of the five accused bank directors, before Judge Conroy, shows that on June 30th last the firms of the five men carried liabilities of $2,035,288. Duder's own liability was $656,000 while the bank's capital was $306,000.

THE WALLS FALL

Two Firemen Buried Beneath a Mass of Falling Brick—One Killed Outright.

The first alarm was turned in at 12 minutes to three. The central section of the brigade including Lombard street, Bay street, Berkley street, Queen street, and Yonge street responding, but when the first section reached the scene the flames were already burning through every window in the Globe and were mounting heavenward with an angry roar. A general alarm was at once sounded and soon every section of the brigade was at work. The large aerial truck from the Lombard street hall was placed on Melinda streets midway between Yonge and Jordan street, and the 85 foot ladder hoisted to the highest story of the building.

A daring fireman attempted to ascend it with a section of hose but was driven back by the blaze. The chief saw that it was hopeless to force a free fight in that quarter and gave orders for the lowering of the ladder and the withdrawal of the wagon from its dangerous position.

The Walls Crash In.

The first part of this order was being complied with when, with a resounding crash that awakened many citizens from their slumbers a dozen blocks away, the north wall of the building fell out into Melinda street, burying two of the firemen, Robert Bowery and Robert Foster, in its fall. These two stood on the south side of the wagon and were caught directly beneath the heaviest portion of the debris. Five of their more fortunate companions standing on the north side of the wagon escaped injury. These quickly extricated Bowery and Foster who were removed to the hospital in the waiting ambulance.

THE FLAMES EXTEND.

Firemen Hurled Through a Shaft by a Mass of Debris.

Chief Ardagh and a number of firemen were in the offices of Brough & Caswell, Jordan street, when the walls of the Globe building fell. An enormous mass of brick and mortar crashed through the roof and walls of Brough & Caswell's building and dashed several of the firemen down the the elevator shaft. The Chief sustained an ugly gash on the forehead and internal injuries. He was taken to his home in a carriage. Fireman Frank Forsyth, of the Queen street fire-hall, was wounded in the head, but he remained on the spot. Foreman Charles Smedley, of the College street fire-hall, received the most serious injuries at this point. Firemen Henry Saunders and James Davidson, of the Portland street fire-hall, were also injured, but to a lesser extent. Davidson sustained a severe wound on the hand and Saunders had a foot crushed.

The Flames Spread.

In the meantime fanned by the stiff south west wind the flames had extended across Melinda street and fastening beneath the eaves of Harry Webb's rapidly worked their way into the head of the building, the firemen being unable to send a stream to any greater height than the fourth story. Nicholas Rooney's dry goods house, adjoining the Globe to the south, quickly fell a prey to the flames and was a complete ruin in less than an hour from the time the alarm was sounded.

From the west end of the Globe building the fire was communicated across Jordan street to the large new building of S. F. McKinnon & Co., on the south east corner of Jordan and Melinda streets.

THROUGH SEVEN STORIES

The Flames Worked Ruin in a Large Wholesale House.

From the top story of this building the flames spread downward through its seven stories, working complete ruin as it went. The building was almost destroyed before the walls showed any signs of falling and it was the hope of the firemen that the substantial walls would enable them to keep the blaze within their boundaries and thus prevent its westward spread.

Millions of sparks were carried to the west and fell on the roofs of houses as far distant as Bathurst street, but the four inches of snow, which mantled the city, extinguished them before they could work any injury.

Some Who Suffered.

To the south of the Globe, on Jordan street, were buildings occupied by Brough & Caswell, printers; Reuben Sadler & Haworth, leather beltings, and Miller & Richard, type founders. These buildings, occupied by the first two mentioned of these firms, were totally destroyed, while the premises of Miller & Richard were badly gutted before the progress of the flames were stayed in this direction.

The Second Death.

LATER:—Charles Smedley, the injured fireman, died at the hospital after a few hours of intense suffering.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 11 1895.

Good morning!

It is said that when the Czar heard the news that Mayor Kennedy's majority had been reduced from 4,000 to 14, he wept bitterly.

It is said that a man who Hughes straight to the line is bound to succeed. But there must have been a mighty curve in the line that ex-Councillor Hughes used on Monday.

They have been subjugating patients in the insane asylum at New Westminister, B. C., by flogging, dark cells, ice cold baths and numerous other devices of brutality. A royal commission has made an investigation, and the staff is to be reorganised immediately.

The recent glut in the New York poultry market has led dealers to an organization for mutual protection. Twenty-three firms met for this purpose, and decided not to advance more than 5 cents a pound upon consignments. Liberal advances had previously been made in order to obtain business, and the result was heavy loss.

Owing to the opposition of archæologists the plans for the proposed resevoir at Assouan, in Egypt, has been modified so as to make the top of the dam 26 feet lower. This will save the temples at Philæ and other monuments, but will only supply water enough to irrigate either middle or lower Egypt instead of both.

The Council of 1895, while not as White as that of last year, is the Best that can be afforded under the circumstances. The Stone Mason who constructs Mills that employ Sawyers, has no greater contract on his hands than the present body when it comes to deal with the outfall sewer muddle.

The municipal campaign for this yerr of grace developed the fact that the liquor interest is in much greater dread of 9 o'clock closing than of prohibition. They regard the latter as a dream, but an early closing movement is too practical to suit their views.

The reports of the Ontario Bureau of Industries, and of the allied Department of Mines are very interesting, but they are all too slow in coming out. For instance, the mineral statistics for '93 are just out now. They should have been published six months since at latest.

Hot, mild drinks are coming extensively into vogue in place of spirits. This winter in some of the larger cities there is a regular furore for hot non-intoxicating drinks. Tea, coffee, cocoa and chocolate, beef tea, beef bouillon, chicken bouillon, clam broth, oyster broth, ginger tea—the list is a long one, and the man finds that a cup of any one of them, served in dainty china, is just as good for warming up purposes as whiskey or hot Scotch, and sometimes he almost thinks it is a good deal better.

A wandering phrenologist is gathering in many shekels in Galt. Which ought to cause the esteemed Reformer to remark that a phrenologist is a fellow who gets rich by head work.

Oscar Wilde's new play, A Model Husband, is said to be something of a failure, which is not very surprising when you come to think of it. None of the Wildes have ever made model husbands.

Another Canadian Premier cannot be laid aside by serious illness during this Parliament without giving the Dominion Premiership the evil fame of being a mighty unhealthy job.

Is China's growing unwillingness to concede all that Japan demands due to a belief that the coming winter will do for the victorious Japanese what the winter of 1813 did for Nepoleon legions after the burning of Moscow left them exposed to the full fury of the northern blast.

The United States Postmaster-general reports a deficit of $9,243,935 in his department for the current year. He does not favor the taking over the telegraphs of the country by the Government, urging against it the enormous expense that would be entailed, and citing the fact that in England their operation involves a loss of $2,000,000 a year.

The poor man if he be in perfect health, has no reason to envy the poor man, who, while he owns more money than he knows what to do with, cannot purchase health with it. Not many days ago there died in California one of the richest men in the world, Senator Fair. He had been a sufferer for years. His physician says that two years ago, when complaining of his physical suffering, he remarked: "I would not pass another such a night for every cent of my $38,000,000.

While there has been no official announcement yet, the impression is general that there will be another session of Parliament before the general election is called on. The best proof that this is the programme is the fact that there is to be a by-election in Cumberland over Hon. A. R. Dickey's appointment as Secretary of state. With an immediate general election in contemplation, the bye-election would be unnecessary. Mackenzie Bowell evidently wants to get a better idea of where he is at before pressing the button.

The Globe is now being written in the editorial rooms of the Empire, the Globe's moulders of public opinion sitting on one side of the table while the Empire's guiders of the destinies of nations are at work on the other side. If you notice a tone of ethereal mildness in the editorial pages of our two esteemed contempories, it is because instead of pounding the life out of each other in the columns of their papers, they merely reach across the table, pull a few fistfull of each other's hair out by the roots and then settle down to grinding out copy again. This is a new way for newspaper men to adjust their little differences, but it saves the public a deal of agony and apprehension.

Many are the suggestions for municipal reform which are put forward. One which has the merit of simplicity is that of the Rev. Joseph Odery, of Toronto. Mr. Odery suggests that every meeting of a council be opened with prayer and the singing of a hymn. The elevating and purifying influences of these devotional exercises would, he thinks, have its effect upon the characters and conduct of the aldermen. Mr. Odery failed to elaborate his scheme—he merely threw out the suggestion. He did not say whether the mayor should offer a supplication, or whether he should invite one of the aldermen to lead in prayer. It would be easy to select appropriate hymns for the use of the council. "What Shall the Harvest Be?" might be sung with much soulfulness by some; others could appropriately warble "No Foot of Land Do I Possess;" while "A Charge to Keep I Have," might stir some to a sense of their duty.

The candidates who were defeated for the Council on Monday last should remember that whenever some one wins somebody loses. The defeat is not very easy to bear as a rule. People try to hide their heart aches and griefs, smiling pleasantly and trying to make those they meet believe that it is just as much fun to be a loser as it is to be a winner, but the pretense never deceives any one very seriously. We all look upon it as a sort of necessary humbug, and certainly it is a good deal better for people to take their set backs good naturedly than to go about looking cross and grumpy as if the times were quite out of joint. Frowning or smiling they feel badly enough themselves without the victors making them feel worse by rubbing salt in the wounds. There are a great many healthy lessons to be learned from defeat, but the defeated are not always willing to learn them. One thing the defeated candidates can say to themselves is that the campaign has been a valuable experience, and they will know better how to do things and perhaps have better luck next time.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

The record of railroad construction for the year is not unfavorable so far as this continent is concerned. Depressed as the railroads were by the slowly lifting depression of 1893, unsettled by the action of a radical revision of the tariff, excited by what practically amounts to a revolution in the political sentiment of the country and disturbed by the labor troubles which culminated in the great outburst of anarchy in Chicago, it would not have been wonderful had the work of construction been totally abandoned. It is therefore encouraging to find that, up to the present, in spite of all the difficulties and discouragements, new track to the extent of 1919 miles have been laid in the United States and 322 miles in this country. It was only to be expected that the new mileage of 1894 should fall under that of its predecessors, but the fact that it is the smallest for the past twenty years is not so encouraging. Ever since the culminating year of 1887 when nearly 13,000 miles of new track were laid, the falling off in construction has been steady and marked. In 1890 the amount of new track had dropped to 5,670 miles. In 1891 it was 4,282 miles. In 1893 it was 2,665 miles, and finally last year it is 2,241 miles. These figures show how continuous the reduction has been until it has reached the apex of the descending triangle during the past year, it is to be hoped that this is the lowest point that construction is destined to fall to, but at present the indications of a revival of railway building are few and far between, and it is to be feared that the figures of 1895 will show very little improvement over those of 1894.

THE CORONER'S QUEST.

The Hamilton Spectator asks of what use is a coroner's inquest? Take the Hendershott murder case for example, The coroner's jury wrestled with the case for days. Witnesses were examined; the body was looked at, and a great deal of expensive palaver was had. The coroner's jury said it was a case of murder, and that William David Welter killed the victim at the instigation of John Hendershott, accessory. Then the magistrate took the case up, and is plodding through precisely the same evidence; barring the little contradictions which always crop up when the average witness endeavors to tell the same story twice. After much expensive palaver the magistrate will committ William David Welter for trial on a charge of murder, and John Hendershott will be committed for trial as an accessory before the fact. Then in due time the grand jury will take the matter up, and will listen to a third telling of the same old evidence, at the expense of the community, and will bring in true bills against William David Welter and John Hendorshott as charged." Then the prisoners will appear in court, and the same old evidence will be given for the fourth time!

What necessity is there for all this? What is to be gained by so many tellings of the same story? Why should the people be compelled to pay for three acts of of this solemn four-act farce? If the grand jury must be maintained, surely it is not necessary to have two preliminary hearings before the case reaches that bulwark of liberty. Why not cut off the coroner's inquest, and have the only preliminary examination take place before the magistrate? It seems to us that to put a man on trial four times for the same offence is once or twice too often. The people should not be called upon to pay for investigations which can have no result.

A STEP TOWARD PEACE.

The Paris arbitration of the Behring Sea dispute was an object lesson in the practicability of permanent peace. While it is to be sincerely hoped that the value of the lesson will not be mimized by subsequent wrangling over terms of settlement, its main import cannot be destroyed—the living proof it gave of the fact that when nations agree to submit their differences to an international court, there is vitality enough in civilization to assure a reasonably just finding. It was inevitable that such a spectacle should suggest to lovers of peace the possibility of providing for the permenence of such a system; and now we are told that Mr. William Randall Cremer, a Radical member of the British House of Commons, is coming out to Washington during the present month, armed with a document, signed by 354 members of the British Parliament declaring in favor of a permanent treaty of arbitration between Great Britian and the United States. One would fancy that such a proposition emanating from a fully armed power and made to a but partially armed power, could not fail of a heartily favorable response. And such a treaty, could it be duly signed, would stand as as a practical invitation to the world to go and do likewise. So long as it stood between two nations only, it could be nothing more than a barrier to war, not a positive preventative. One of the nations could always break the treaty and declare war, and there would be no power to punish it. But the existence of this agreement would lead diplomats to think first of arbitration instead of war in case of a difference of opinion. Moreover, it would stand before the world as a permanent suggestion, and if signed at any time by three or more powers, would be a convention dangerous to break.

BUSINESS IN THE STATES.

Henry Clews, banker, of New York, in his last circular, remarks that the immediate outlook in commercial and manufacturing circles is as promising as could be expected at this season of the year and under existing circumstances; for, with the exception of some sections of the west and North-west, the prospects for 1895 is decidedly more favorable, and indicates a business of large proportions than existed in the year just passed. No better barometer of the trade conditions can be produced than the iron industry and this is in far more satisfactory shape as regards the future than was the case a year ago. The stock of manufactured goods of all classes throughout the country is at a very low ebb. Consumption is going on all the while, and the time must soon come when fresh stocks will have to be taken on, and it is not very far away either, as is proven by the increased desire on the part of spinners to buy raw material. Every small depreciation in value is being taken advantage of by them to replenish supplies and this is certainly a gratifying feature after the hand to mouth policy which existed for so long a period.

THE CASE OF MR. CAVANAGH.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, who was convicted of selling liquor not having a license therefor, and sentenced to four months in goal at hard labor, has the sympathy of a very large portion of the community. While it is true that he was an old offender, the peculiar circumstances connected with his case, has caused a strong feeling that he is being very harshly treated. At the trial it was shown that that the magistrate was inclined to be merciful, indeed he had no option but to do as he did. Officer Roszel, who had laid the information was appealed to to have it amended so as to make it a first offence, but he flatly refused to do so. It was pointed out that a substantial fine would probably deter Cavanagh from further violation of the law, and that imprisonment was a serious matter to a man of his years—but all to no purpose. With bull-dog tenacity he gruffly refused the strong plea for mercy that was made on behalf of the prisoner by his counsel.

Whether the active part which Cavanagh took in the election the day before in favor of candidates for the Council, who propose to re-organize the police force, had anything to do with Roszel's stubbornness, is a matter of conjecture. There is one thing certain, however, he has long had the credit of being exceedingly vindicative, a trait which unfits him for the responsible position he holds.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

One of the interesting things about Japan's campaign in China is that the Japanese themselves have subscribed all the money needed for the conduct of the war. The loan which the government asked for a short time ago was subscribed at once, and the amount offered was greater than that accepted. The European money lenders have not been called upon, and it seems that some of them, who had expected to make big profit out of a Japanese war loan, are disappointed, and do not like the Japanese ways.

China, on the other hand, has been negotiating for loans in Europe ever since she got into trouble, but her prospects of getting the taels which see needs or of being able to furnish the security wich is required are very poor.

In battle, in diplomacy, an in finance the experiences of China are unlike those of Japan.

ECONOMY IN FUNERALS.

A committee of Episcopal archdeacons of New York, appointed two years ago to consider and report on the subject of burials and funerals, with a view to reduce the expense, has recommended some very sensible reforms.

The extravagance indulged in at funerals is a great burden upon those who are not wealthy. The committee propose to reduce the cost of a funeral down to $40, and this is the way they intend to do it: They will adopt plain hearses and discard trappings indicating grief; a few cut flowers; only immediate members of the family to go to the cemetery; no expenditure of money by clubs or societies, material of coffin which will decay quickly; early interment; disuse of family vaults; removal of body to a mortuary instead of retaining it in rooms occupied by the living, and proper and reverent burial of the poor by public officials.

The inquiry was made in the interest of the poor, but it will have some influence in directing the attention of the public to the subject of burials in general. There is no doubt but a reform in the mode of conducting funerals is greatly needed. Pride and habit and affection have a great deal to do with the extravagance at funerals. Under a system of well-intentioned economy the undertaker would be more certain of getting paid for his services, and a heavy burden would be taken from the shoulders of the bereaved relations.

Figures show that cremations have increased in the United States from two in 1876 to 808 in 1894, and in Europe from two in 1876 to 4,735 in 1893. The total for all these years was in this country 3,670 and in Europe 19,700, nearly 15,000 of this total being in France. Of the 1,346 bodies incinerated at Fresh Pond, L.I., during these 19 years, 997 were of German birth. 446 were born here, but of what ancestry is not stated, while the other 203 covered all nationalities to be found here. And of the 1,346 the males numbered 944 and the females 402.

THE TREE CHOPPER OF HAWARDEN.

Gladstone, on the authority of his son, is said to have so far recovered in health as to be able to devote himself continually to his favorite pastime of chopping down trees. The remarkable energy shown in this gives a hint of one of the sides of this wonderful old man's character that has led to his making such a success of life. He has been not only the most versatile man of his generation, but a storehouse of strength as well and of energy so great as to lead him. 15 years after he has passed the allotted span of life, to engage himself in an occupation that is caviare to the great majority of men at any age.

For how many men, left to themselves, would seek to find amusement or exercise in chopping down trees? Those who have to do it to earn their daily bread, do it grumblingly and grudgingly, wailing the while that fate is unkind enough to force them into such hard paths; and they fall to envying those whose lot is cast in pleasanter places. When amusement is wanted or exercise it is to the row boat or the cricket field men turn. They never think of chopping down trees or getting after a pile of cordwood with a bucksaw or an axe unless there is a bread and butter object in view. They waste their energies largely. Gladstone has cultivated his and at 85 we find him chopping down trees and enjoying it.

One of these days it shall happen that Gladstone will be the tree, while death will swing the axe and the sturdy old oak that has weathered so many storms will totter and topple over, a stately ruin, grander even in its fall and decay than scrub oaks growing on every side. But we may all hope that that day is long distant. For years past it has been said that the shadows that hang about the end of the path was falling fast upon the old man wonderful, but the old man wonderful of a score of years back is the old man wonderful of to-day, and he is moreover hale and hearty still, and the most remarkable personality of the dying century.

Market Reports.

PETERBOROUGH.

The market this week was well attended, and prices were very satisfactory. There will undoubtely be a large market to-day, as there is a good demand for all kinds of produce. A keen competition still exists among the grain buyers; farmers would be likely to secure better prices for their grain by bringing it on the market square.

Hog and sheep market on Tuesday and Friday next, respectively; prices same as before.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 12, 1895

THE CARNIVAL.

A Lindsay Skater Takes the First Prize—A Large Attendance.

The first fancy dress carnival of the season, under the auspices of the Sons of Canada, was held in the rink last night, and its success was contributed to and established by all needful accessories in point of attendance, splendor and grotesque costumes, good music and excellent ice.

The rink was gayly decorated with flags, streamers and colored bunting, which enhanced by the brilliant glare of electric lights, presented an appearance of magnificent splendour. The skating surface of the rink was a scene of indescribable grotesqueness, thronged as it was with an ever moving mass of costumed skaters, some magnificently so, others almost hideously, yet withal picturesque. The Italian mandolin girl glided hand in hand with the negro dude from "de souf." The dignified King of Hearts locked arms with the scullery maid. The "Emblem of Purity," with streaming, glinted hair, robed in silver white and spangles, skated side by side with the hideous Indian Chief, generously bedaubed with vermillion. "Housemaids" considered it no honor to circle the rink hand in hand which princes. Heroines of historic renown smiled upon clowns and jockeys, and there was a general mix up of Memphistopholes, goddesses, kings, clowns, queens and Indians, while "Summer" bowed to "Spring," and "Autumn" swung gracefully away hand in hand with "Winter."

Crowds packed the galleries and viewed the scene. The attendance was all that could be desired. The Fire Brigade Band furnished the music. The list of the skaters in costume, is given below:

An Alien Judge.

BUFFALO, Jan. 11.—Edward Barry, a Canadian, said to be a wealthy fruit and produce dealer visited Buffalo Tuesday and took in the sights. Yesterday he caused the arrest of Kittie Higgins, a woman of the town for stealing $10 from him. He could not testify that the woman took it and Judge King, who does not particularly love Canadians, dismissed the case this afternoon with this terse remark to the plaintiff "A fool and his money are soon parted. Get out of here and go home to Canada."

Bridge Mishap.

HAMILTON, Jan. 11.—By the collapse of a partially constructed bridge on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway, between Hamilton and Dundas last evening, three men were injured, one of whom will probably die as a result of his injuries. Peter Rogers, married, of 28 Strachan street, this city, had both legs broken, left arm fractured and scalp badly torn.

A Detective Jailed.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 11.—John T. Norris the Ohio detective, has been locked in gaol charged with attempting to bribe Commonwealth Attorney Smith to consent to admit Thomas H. Parker, alias "Red" Austin, to bail. Austin was recently arrested on the charge of having worked the "gold brick" swindle upon A. W. Withers, a wealthy Englishman of Gloucester County, Va.

The Circassia's Mishap.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Anchor line steamer Circassia, from New York Dec. 29, for Glasgow, ran around at Skelmorlie, Scotland, during the prevalence of a thick fog. Her passengers were landed at Wemyss bay and forwarded thence by rail to Glasgow. The vessel was floated with the next tide.

THE STORM.

A Blinding Snow Storm From the Northeast.

This town was struck by a blinding snow storm Thursday morning which continued with more or less violence all day and last night.

Sheets of sleet snow swept the streets, covering the sidewalks and blowing into the faces of pedestrians. The storm had a noticeable effect on business, merchants experiencing a dull day.

The street railway traffic was handicapped, the tracks being kept clear by the sweeper which was kept going all day. The sweeper also made several rounds during the night.

The storm came from the northeast and was not forecasted by the weather bureau. In Toronto the street railway traffic was demoralized.

None of the trains were delayed on account of the storm.

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Samuel Ridpath was conveyed to his last resting place by Clermont Lodge, No. 313.

Deceased with his family came to reside here about 15 years ago and conducted a very successful tailoring establishment. He has been a sufferer for a number of years with asthma, but latterly dropsy set in, which finally caused his death on Monday morning at 8 o'clock, the news of which caused quite a shock to the community, as nearly all knew that he was ill but did not think the end would be so soon.

He was a charter member, past master and honorary member of Peterboro Lodge, A.F. & A.M., and, as such it was expected that a number of Peterborough brethren would have been present, although two of the Lakefield brethren who reside in Peterboro were present.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. C. Reeves, after which the impressive service of the Masonic order was read by Bro. Hilliard and responded to by the members.

The funeral was a very large one and was headed by Clermont Lodge, No. 313, A.F. & A.M., with their regalia draped in mourning. At the grave the Masons completed their service.

Mr. Ridpath was a kind and agreeable man, an affectionate husband and father, he leaves behind him a widow and nine children. As a token of respect the stores were all closed.

The sympathy of the whole village is extended to the bereaved family.

On Monpay noon he had a very severe fit of coughing which caused the abscess to break and it eventually caused his death by smothering he being troubled with asthma. The friends have the sympathy of the community.

OLD LOVERS.

Oft while hurrying throught the crowd
I've met
A face like one I never shall forget.

Or wandering friendless on a foreign
shore,
Have heard a voice like one I've heard
before.

Or passing some deserted street along,
Have caught the echo of a well loved
song.

Or strolling listless in a garden fair,
Have culled a flower like those she used
to wear.

Or thumbling o'er some musty books,
have hit
On one she used to call her favorite.

Or wrapped in dreams of night have lived with her
The once prized life of slave and worshiper.

* * * * * *

But old loves wither, droop and fade
away
Before the one that lives and blooms today.

NIGHTLY EPISODE.

Crispy air,
Lovely night,
Twinkling stars
Spirits bright.
Bashful man,
Timid maid
Both in love,
Half afraid,
Bob-tail nag,
Shining snow,
"Get along!"
Away they go
Narrow sled,
Cozy rug;
"Dear!" she said.
Little hug,
Coming back,
Laughing moon;
Yum, yum—smack!
Wedding soon.

Yesterday he was taken in charge by the police and housed in the jail for the winter months.

John A. Jamieson Buried.

The funeral of the late John A. Jamieson took place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the Little Windsor Hotel under the auspices of the True Blues. The cortege was very large being formed of members of the Orange order, the 'Prentice Boys, besides a large number of friends and relatives. The remains were interred in the Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. W. R. Young officiating.

Death of Samuel Ridpath.

Mr. Samuel Ridpath, of Lakefield, died early Monday morning at his residence in that village, in his 64th year. Deceased was father of Mr. J. W. Ridpath, of the Lakefield News, and was also a brother-in-law of Mr. Jacob Isbister, of Peterborough. For 17 years he resided in this town and at his death was a prominent member of Peterborough Lodge, A.F. & A.M. He leaves a widow and nine children. The funeral will take place at 2 30 this afternoon to the Lakefield cemetery.

Death of Patrick Tangney.

Mr. Patrick Tangney, who has been a resident of Peterborough for many years, died late on Monday night in his 80th year. He came to Canada from Limerick, Ireland, fifty years ago, and has long been a respected resident of this town. Mrs. Daniel Fitzgerald, Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald and Mrs. W. Merrill, of Peterborough, are daughters of the deceased. The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

A Case of Perjury.

At the liquor case trial Tuesday, William Robertson, a boarder at the Cavanagh house, swore that he had not sold liquor on December 22. Two other witnesses testified that they had purchased liquor from Robertson. The latter was immediately arrested for perjury and locked up. Bail was fixed at $1,000, the prisoner to be taken in the sum of $500 and two securities of $250 each. An effort is being made to secure the bail. The trial has been set for Tuesday next.

Kennedy's Majority Increased.

The official count of the votes cast in the Mayoralty contest on Monday was made Wednesday by City Clerk Blevins, Toronto. Mayor Kennedy was declared elected by a majority of 45, the increase being chiefly due to the correction of an error made by a deputy returning officer in giving the press the figures of his division.

Millbrook Curlers.

The annual meeting of the Millbrook Curling Club was held on Monday last, when the following officers were elected: Hon. president, W. A. Fallis, M.L.A.; president, John Steele; vice-president, Charles Needler; sec.-treasurer, H. M. Wood; committee, D. Hampton, A. A. Smith, J. A. Vance; representative members, Capt. Winslow, L. F. Clarry, Watkins, W. T. Wood, Charles Needler, John Steele and George Hetherington.

Their Loss Was Little.

The many patrons of Miller & Richards, type founders, Toronto, will be glad to learn that the firm's loss will be very small in the recent fire and this was caused more by water damage than by fire. The firms large warehouse remained intact, nothing being destroyed, and the business of this well known concern has gone on uninterruptedly.

A Provincial Constabulary.

A circular has been issued all over the Province by the Provincial Constabulary Committee, for the purpose of agitating and getting the views of all parties dealing with criminal justice upon the formation of a Provincial Constabulary Bureau in the Province. The proposed constabulary is to be formed of County constables to be paid by the province, and the aims and objects are the "better protection in the country." The chief is in receipt of a circular.

After a Foundry.

We have heard whisperings lately that Peterborough and a couple of other towns have been offering inducements to Mr. Dryden with a view of encouraging the removal of his foundry business from Port Perry. Knowing also that Mr. Dryden feels he is too highly assessed, leads us to ask the question whether it would not be prudence on the part of the council to meet Mr. Dryden and offer him a reduction in his foundry assessment? If that gentleman were to see it to his interest to leave Port Perry owing to the stringency of the times, the town would then, and not till then fully realize the loss of the foundry. It seems to us every effort should be made to hold whatever business there is here, and not sit quietly by and allow other centres to snatch from us that which we would be sorry to lose.—Port Perry Standard.

HENRY PHALEN LEADS.

THE VOTE BY WARDS.

The elections yesterday passed off very quietly, and the large vote cast was a surprise to those who took the quiet appearance of the streets as an indication of the interest that was being manifested. But the electors were out in force, the result being that a very large vote was cast. The vote by wards was as follows:

Analysis of the Vote.

An analysis of the vote shows that the Council of 1895 will be composed of five members of the old Council and seven new members. The new Council's personnel will be:

HENRY BEST,
THOMAS BRADY,
THOMAS CAHILL,
ROBERT CLINKSCALE,
ADAM DAWSON,
T. H. G. DENNE,
JOSEPH MILLS,
FRANCIS MASON,
HENRY PHELAN,
GEORGE B. SPROULE,
JOHN SAWERS,
ERASTUS B. STONE.

The result of yesterday's election cannot but be most gratifying to citizens who have the best interests of the town at heart. The election to the Council Board of men who possess good business qualifications, undoubted integrity and abundant resources of energy, is always to be desired, and in this respect, Peterborough today, as in the past, has been most fortunate in the selection of her public administrators.

The electors of the town have elected a strong Council. Such men as Mr. Thomas Cahill, Mr. Henry Best and Mr. Adam Dawson, have by long years of service in the Council proved themselves safe and wise guardians of the town's interests. Mr. Thomas Brady has served one year in the Council. His record was a good one, and there is no doubt but that his brief experience in 1894 has but befitted him for greater efforts in the future. Mr. Francis Mason, another of the old Council, is eminently deserving of the confidence of the electors of his ward, as demonstrated by the large vote he polled. While not aggressive, Councillor Mason is generally found on the right side of every issue, and he generally votes right.

The "new blood," as the new members of the Council are termed, are young men. They will ably back up the "older heads" on the new Council Board. With their ability and unlimited energy added to the experience of their seniors, a most happy combination is formed.

Mr. Henry Phelan, of the Peterborough Hardware Company, polled the largest vote in any of the wards, an honor that any young man can be justly proud of. Messrs. Joseph Mills, Robert Clinkscale, E. B. Stone, T. H. G. Denne, George B Sproule and John Sawers make up the seven new Councillors. They are all good men.

OUT ON BAIL.

The Case Against Mr. Timothy Cavanagh Appealed.

Wednesday afternoon Mr. A. P. Poussette on behalf of Mr. T. Cavanagh, who was convicted of selling liquor without a license in the second offense, and sentenced to four months in goal on Tuesday, instituted the proper proceedings for an appeal, and secured the release of his client on bail until such time as the case will come up before the County Judge for argument.

Mr. Cavanagh was warmly received by his many friends when he made his appearance from the house on the hill.

ANOTHER FIRE.

Large Dry Goods Store in Lindsay Suffers a Big Loss.

Lindsay was visited by a disastrous fire Wednesday. At 6 a.m. fire was discovered in the dry goods store of McGaffey, having broken out in the tailoring department. Before the firemen arrived the fire had made such headway that their efforts to save the stock were futile. About $1,300 damage was done the building which is owned by the Dominion Bank. The damage is fully covered by insurance.

The stock which was a total loss was valued at $28,000 to $32,000, insured in Alliance Insurance Co. for $5,000, Manchester for $3,000, United Fire Co. for $2,000, N. B. & M. Co. $6,000, Western $5,000 and Lancashire $3,000.

THE DISTRICT LODGE

Loyal Orangemen Meet and Elect Officers—12th of July Demonstration.

Peterborough District Loyal Orange Lodge held their annual meeting Tuesday night in Unity Hall. There was a very large attendance of the brethren present. The feasibility of holding a demonstration in Peterborough next 12th July was fully discussed and a committee appointed to wait on the business men of the town to ascertain what guarantee, financially, may be obtained—and if sufficient, steps will be taken at once to arrange for the same.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

H. S. Armstrong—Worthy Master.
S. B. Weir—Deputy Master.
Joseph Batton—Chaplain.
Capt. W. J. Green—Recording Secretary.
A. T. Duggan—Financial Secretary.
W. H. G. Armstrong—Treasurer.
Robert Mahood—Director of Ceremonies.
Robert Campbell—Lecturer.

The newly elected officers were duly installed by Bro. S. Stenson, County Master. The next meeting will be held the second Tuesday in June next, in the Orange hall at Downer's Corners.

AFTER A SITE.

The Proposition of the Universal Knitting Company.

A committee of the whole Council conferred with Mr. Close, of the Universal Knitting Company Wednesday. Several of the newly elected Councillors were also present.

Mr. Close stated the intentions of his company. He said that they would employ from 80 to 150 employees. The company desired a site where water power could be utilized as a motive power.

The meeting was not open to reporters, and the entire proceedings could not be learned. It is understood, however, that the company will locate in Peterborough if the town will give them a free site. The company proposes to erect a factory with a depth of 100 feet.

The matter was discussed and referred to the Manufacturer's Committee with instructions to report at the next meeting of the council.

A CHIEF ON A LARK.

Hamilton's Police Officer out for a "Little Time."

Hugh McKinnon, Hamilton's chief of police, who is known in Peterborough, has been out for a quiet little time. But Hamilton misses her chief, and the authorities became so anxious that Tuesday night the following despatch made the rounds of the province:

HAMILTON, Jan. 8.—Chief of Police Hugh McKinnon has not been seen in the city for the past week and enquirers at his office are told that he is out of town. A week ago he was given permission to go to Toronto for a day, and whether he is still in Toronto and is working on a case is not known. There is much talk about his continued absence, and on his return it is not unlikely the commissioners will ask him to explain matters.

It fell to the lot of a Toronto reporter to find the missing chief. In yesterday's Mail the following item appeared:

Hamilton's Chief of Police, Hugh McKinnon, formerly of Belleville, and a well-known man in athletic circles, has been having a really pleasant time in Toronto since Saturday last. Late on that evening he appeared at the Grand Union hotel, at the foot of Simcoe street, in company with two very distinguished looking young ladies, and the trio were enrolled on the register as "H. B. Collins, New Haven, Conn.," "Miss Ella ditto," and "Miss Maud ditto." Sunday, Monday and yesterday were spent in Toronto, and last night "Mr. Collins" settled up by a cheque signed "Hugh McKinnon," and the three left the hotel.

A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Dashes Down George Street on the Sidewalk Dragging a Cutter.

Pedestrians on George street Wednesday night, and fortunately there were few, were started by a novel sight.

A large fine looking horse, attached to a cutter, took to the sidewalk on the west side of George street and dashed down the ice coated walk at a spanking gait. From Hunter to Charlotte streets, the animal tore along keeping straight in the centre of the narrow thoroughfare. At the corner of Charlotte street, the horse made a neat turn, running about a block down that street when it came to a stop.

The owner of the outfit, who refused to divulge his name, followed in close pursuit, and drove away. The horse had been left standing in front of a store. It is almost incomprehensible that the beast did not run into the many poles along the sidewalk, or some of the store windows. As it was a broken dashboard was the only damage done.

THE C. N. & P. RAILWAY.

Meeting of the Directors—It Looks Like a Certainty.

A meeting of the Directors of the C. N. & P. Railway was held in Cobourg on Tuesday. Mr. Cameron explained the action taken in submitting plans to the C. P. R. and to the Government, and their approval of the same; also as to crossing of C. G. Railway and level crossing at Cobourg; also correspondence with the owners of the branch line running north through the village of Marmora to the Belmont mines. Mr. Riddell, the Company's solicitor, was heard in reference to amendments to the contract. A resolution was moved by Mr. Cochrane, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, approving of the amendments to the contracts and ratifying the same. Mr. Cochrane moved a resolution, seconded by Mr. Carlaw, authorizing the execution of the contract by the President, Secretary and Vice-President.

Mr. Armstrong moved a resolution, seconded by Mr. Carlaw, sanctioning the alteration of the point of junction with the C.P.R., which is some distance east of Springbrook. Mr. Crossen moved, seconded by Mr. G. Guillet, that Mr. F. Turner be appointed chief engineer at $300 per month while the road is being built, to be paid by the contractor. Mr. Mulholland moved moved, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that Mr. Riddell be appointed solicitor for the company at $50 per month to be paid by the contractor. The construction of the road at an early date is a certainty.

Didn't Like Serenading.

A rather elderly farmer living in Otonabee, was married about 10 days ago to a very young woman. This was his second venture in the matrimonial market. It appears that after his first marriage he was serenaded by the neighboring young men, although he had a detestation of that sort of a thing, and this time he pleaded with the boys not to come around and bother him. However the boys had no intention of leaving him alone, and so on the night of his marriage they surrounded the house and serenaded the bride and groom with numerous tin instruments. In a few minutes the groom stuck his head out of the window and asked them if they would go away if he gave them a jug of whiskey. The offer was accepted and the jug was lowered from the window by means of a cord. The boys had a great time with the contents, but an hour afterwards the entire party were taken deathly sick. The liquor was liberally mixed with croton oil. A young man in town was one of the party.

A Thief at Lindsay.

One night last week a would-be thief raised a window of the bar-room of the hotel owned by Mr. John Dorgan, but in removing an inside screen or shutter he was not quite so fortunate, for the screen slipped from his hands and falling on the floor, made a terrible "racket," almost frightening the housebreaker out of his boots and causing him to beat a hasty retreat. The inmates of the house were in no way disturbed by the noise, however, and it was not until some time later that Constable Reeves happened along and noticed the window open at once aroused the proprietor and made them aware of the fact that the house had been almost burglarized. Nothing was missing.—Watchman.

Committed Suicide.

A sad case of suicide occurred at Bath on Monday, Allen Aylesworth, as strong and healthy a looking man as might be seen in many miles, and who came of a very highly respectable family, was found suspended from a beam in his own barn. The deceased was subject to temporary fits of insanity, and it is supposed that during one of these he committed the rash deed. William Thurston, who works Mr. Aylesworth's farm, having occasion to go to the barn at noon to feed his cattle found the lifeless body of the young man hanging. He at once called the neighbors who removed the body to his own home. Deceased was about thirty years of age, and was a son of the late P. P. Aylesworth.

Sad Accident and Death.

The Almonte Times says: A sad accident and untimely death occurred here on Monday morning, by which Miss Bella Armstrong, a lady of some 22 years, and youngest daughter of Mr. John Armstrong, of the 10th line Ramsay, lost her life. It appears that she came to town with her sister, Mrs. Richard Griffith, and children, who resides near Pike Falls, and who took the morning train for her home. Miss Armstrong went into the train with her sister, but delayed too long, and the train was well under way when she emerged from the car; when near the switch she jumped, her head striking the switch frame, breaking her neck and left arm. Death was instantaneous. Shortly afterwards she was removed to her home, Dr. Hanly and Mr. Thos. James going in advance to apprise the aged mother, who is rather feeble health, of the sad fate of her daughter, who was the only child left at home to comfort the aged couple in their declining years. The mission of the gentlemen named was a sad one and one few would care to undertake. The poor mother was prostrated, and it looked for a time as if the shock would end in her death also.

Stabbing in Lakefield.

On Monday afternoon last, while Willard Tippett and Austin Hanrahan along with a number of other boys, were returning home from the Ward school, they got into an altercation when some distance from the village, and got into a fight. From what the boys say who were with them it seems that young Tippett made a rush at young Hanrahan with an open pocket knife in his hand, and throwing his arms around him stabbed him in the back just above the hips. The little lad lost quite a quantity of blood from the cut, and when he came home, told his father about it. Mr. Hanrahan communicated with Inspector Brown and a consultation was held on Wednesday afternoon with reference to the matter, but we have been unable to learn what took place. It is a serious matter and one which should be looked into, and prevent its occurrence a second time.—News.

MUNICIPAL GOSSIP.

The Councillors Who Will Likely Get Chairmanships.

The last meeting of the old Council will, in all probability, be held on Monday night for the winding up of the year's business. The following Monday, the new Council will meet.

There is much speculation rife as to who will be given the chairmanships of the thirteen committees.

Councillor Cahill, without doubt, will again be installed at the helm of the Finance Committee.

It is altogether likely that Councillor Best will be made chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee, which position he has ably filled.

The chairmanship of the Fire, Water and Light will likely fall to either Councillors Dawson or Brady. The former does not think his business is near enough to the center of the town to enable him, without a great inconvenience, to attend to the duties of that position. It is altogether probable, therefore, that Councillor Brady will be appointed.

The other committees are not sure, and speculation as to whom the chairmen will be, is not based on anything but conjecture.

GREEN GOODS CIRCULARS.

A Number of Citizens Have Been Receiving Them of Late.

It would seem that the Lexow Committee in New York has had little effect in scaring the green goods operators of that great metropolis.

Three citizens received circulars from green goods men in New York yesterday, and promptly turned them over to the police. This is nothing new in the fact of these circulars being sent to Peterborough for in the past year as many as fifty have been received. It will be interesting however to know that the old tactics pursued by these swindlers, which are well known having been published time and again, have been changed.

Formerly the circular stated that the sender, who of course made the offer in strict confidence, was formerly an employee of the government bank note engraving bureau, and had stolen some of the plates from the United States from which greenbacks were printed. With these he could print genuine bank notes which could never be detected, being exactly, in every detail, fac similes of the genuine greenback. Then there would be enclosed a newspaper clipping telling of the theft of these plates, and how safe the thief was from detection in printing and selling notes printed from them.

The new green goods man has dropped all this kind of business, and makes the plain statement that the notes he sells are bogus and printed from counterfeit plates, but so good an imitation as to defy detection.

So far nobody in Peterborough has ever been bitten by these clever swindlers.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

Agents wanted in every town and county in the Dominion, $100 to $200 a month easily made. For further particulars address

DISGRACE OF A LAWYER.

PROMISING YOUNG MAN CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF BURGLARY.

A Well Known Young Lawyer, of Toronto, Arrested for Rifling a Vault in Brantford—Had a Duplicate Key—Remanded for a Week.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 12.—The legal firm of Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy have for some time suspected that their office was being entered at nights and their vaults opened and sundry sums of money and papers removed therefrom, and these thefts had become so common that the firm determined to inform the police.

Chief Vaughan detailed Constable Wallace for the work, and for some weeks he has on occasional nights hidden himself in the office awaiting results. This evening, Constable Wallace took his station in a corner of the front office and shortly after 8 o'clock he heard foot steps around the rear part of the building.

BURGLAR AND CONSTABLE.

The intruder made his way into the cellar underneath the main office, and after remaining there a short time he began climbing up a ladder and emerged from a trap door to the main hall in the rear of the building. When once in the back office he made his way to the front room where the vault was.

As the burglar entered the room the constable stole behind the stove. The man walked towards the vault with a key in his hand. The officer jumped forward and seized him and to his surprise discovered the man to be Charles Elliott, barrister-at-law, now practising in St. George, having come from Toronto, where some six months ago he passed his final examination as a lawyer.

A SCUFFLE ENSUED.

After a short scuffle Constable Wallace handcuffed Elliott and took him to the police station, where he now is. Elliott made only a brief resistance.

Hitherto the accused man has borne a good character. Nothing dishonest or unprofessional had ever been charged against him. He served his apprenticeship in this city with Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy whose premises he will be charged with entering.

When arrested he threw a key upon the floor. This the officer picked up, and the police say it is a duplicate key to the vault.

Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy think that altogether they must have lost about $50.

Elliott's people, who live in St. George are of the highest respectability.

The arrest has caused quite a sensation. He will be brought before the Police Magistrate today.

HAS A HEARING.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 12.—Charles Elliott, barrister, who was found by a detective entering the locked premises of Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy, was brought before the Police Magistrate this morning charged on four counts, with having stolen a duplicate key of their safe in his possession; with entering their premises on December 17th and 21st and January 4th and 11th; with the theft of sums amounting to $25, $10 and $2, and with house-breaking and larceny.

Accused is a young lawyer of much promise and most respectably connected in this neighborhood.

His brother, W. J. Elliott, of Toronto, asked for an enlargement until Tuesday, which was granted.

No bail was asked and Elliott will remain in jail.

RUSSIA'S CONVICTS HAPPY.

So Says a Traveller who has been to Siberia and Seen its Prisons.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Harry de Windt, the traveller and journalist, who intends to lecture in America to refute the statements of George Kennan in regard to Siberian prison life, gave a surprisingly attractive picture of prisoners in Siberia. Describing a typical political prison, that at Akatu, in the Nertchinsk mining-district he says that the prisoners are confined in rooms, well lighted and warmed cells, decorated with jugs filled with flowers that had been picked by the prisoners while en route to their work in the mines, a mile distant. The convicts march to their work daily, smoking and singing choruses. They have three good meals daily, and are supplied with an unlimited quantity of beer at dinner. Only three of the prisoners wore chains, which weighed seven pounds, and these were removed during their work in the mines. The condition of the mines is quite as good, and the labor less, than in English mines. The men sleep on mattresses and pillows. There is no work done on Sundays and Saints' days, and concerts and plays are given.

Mr. de Windt gives the following instances to show the cheerful existence of even the most cheerful convicts:

Gotise, the leader of the Yakutsk prison mutiny in 1889, lives in a large well lighted cell. He is supplied with writing materials and receives parcels of Russian, French, German and English books. His wife lives in the village and is allowed to see him weekly.

Stavinsky, one of the heads of international Nihilism, who was implicated in nearly all the recent explosions, is in similar quarters. He also receives books and has his own medicine chest.

Emilianoff, who was implicated in the murder of Czar Alexander II, now lives at liberty at Kharovsk.

Kaloujin, an ex-officer of the navy, who attempted to blow up the Czar's yacht, serves in a bank and has a circulating library.

UNION AND NON-UNION.

The Way to Secure Sympathy—Shoe Workers' Trouble—A Collision.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan 12.—The first blood in the Haverhill shoe strike was drawn last night. The strikers had a parade, and when the line reached Beach street, near the River street factories, a collision between union and non-union men occurred.

Eight or ten men participated in the row and when it was over Napoleon LePoint was found lying in the gutter with four gashes in his head and his skull fractured by a blow with a bayonet wielded by John Henry Meyers. Blanchard, another striker, was stunned by a similar blow, inflicted by one of Meyers' companions. Meyers and the other assailant were arrested.

Control of Cables.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Representative Hitt, of Illinois, who is recognized as the Republican leader in the House on foreign affairs, said today that he fully agreed with President Cleveland that the Hawaiian Islands should have the benefit of telegraphic communication with the world at large, but was strongly opposed to putting their cable facilities under control of any Government but the United States.

A COLD WAVE.

It is Coming This Way from the West—Chicago Gets a Touch of It—The Mercury Falling Rapidly—Lives Lost in Omaha.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Reports from Iowa, Illinois and the northwest show that the mercury is from 10 to 15 degrees below zero. A heavy snowstorm prevails in Northern Michigan and Wisconsin, which will be of great benefit to lumbermen.

OMAHA, Jan. 12.—The Missouri Valley was swept yesterday by a cold wave of unusual severity. A repetition of the blizzard of seven years ago, in which many lives were lost, is feared. The wind reached a velocity of 30 miles an hour last night, accompanied by snow in some sections. There will probably be great suffering among the destitute people in Western Nebraska.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 12.—One of the most remarkable and sudden declines of the mercury occurred here yesterday, a change of 30 degrees being recorded. This morning at nine the thermometer registered 10 degrees below zero.

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 12.—Snow began to fall shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon and has been coming down ever since, there being now six inches of snow on the ground. The thermometer registers 6 below zero.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The thermometer here registers 10 degrees below zero. A brisk wind and a dense fog of smoke add to the discomfort. A fine dry snow is falling this morning.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Jan. 12.—A heavy snow storm traversed the upper peninsula from west to east yesterday and lumbermen are feeling much more cheerful.

The promised cold wave is on the way and tonight will see a zero temperature. The ring of frost is closing in on Toronto rapidly and the furs that were soaked at the Thursday night fire will just about be dry in time to do service tomorrow.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

A MAN RUN OVER BY A TRAIN AND KILLED.

W. F. Maclean Secures the Nomination in East York—A Woman Sues the Street Railway for $5,000—Toronto's Poor Fed.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—Cold in death lies William Jordan, painter and paperhanger, at the General hospital, and Coroner Powell has issued a warrant for an inquest.

Jordan left his home at Dovercourt road this morning to go to work at the Junction. He took the C.P.R. track and being deaf did not hear the approach of the C.P.R. suburban train as it came behind him from Leaside Junction.

The engineman saw the man on the track and whistled, but Jordan did not hear the danger signal and kept right on. The driver thought that the man ahead of him would get off and did not dream of stopping until it was too late.

The cowcatcher struck the unfortunate man and rolled him over into the ditch. The train was stopped, and the trainhands picked Jordan up and put him on board the train which conveyed him to the Junction.

Dr. Clendennan was summoned, and, after attending to his injuries, brought him into the city and had him conveyed to the General hospital, where he died about half an hour after his arrival.

His injuries were chiefly about the head, which was badly cut, the skull being probably fractured. The immediate cause of death was concussion of the brain.

SUES FOR $5,000.

For the serious injuries she sustained while alighting from a Yonge street car, Mrs. Georgina Bell, of 126 Dalhousie street today entered a suit against the Street Railway Company for $5,000 damages. The accident occurred in the latter part of last July and the plaintiff declares that the conductor negligently started the car before she had time to get off at Gerrard street, at which street she had twice requested that the car should stop. The writ in the action was issued this afternoon by T. C. Robinette.

MACLEAN NOMINATED.

At the East York Conservative Convention, which was held yesterday at East Toronto Village, Mr. W. F. Maclean, M. P., was again chosen as the party candidate in the approaching election. The convention was well attended, was very representative, and when Mr. Maclean was declared to have received more votes than his opponent, Mr. Henry Duncan, the nomination was made unanimous. Hon. N. C. Wallace was present and he made an address.

THE HUNGRY FED.

At the free supper held last night in the Mission Hall on Adelaide street a very large number of men and women were present, glad to get a warm, comfortable tea, to many of them the only good meal of the week. There were good faces amongst the motley crowd, which told the tale that they were not accustomed to being in such society, but, nevertheless, necessity has no law.

HOBBS BANQUETTED.

Thomas Hobbs, M.P.P. for London, was banqueted by a few Toronto friends last night at the Queen's. T. C. Irving presided, with Dr. J. E. Elliott in the vice-chair.

PERILS OF THE CAPITAL.

Falling Ice on its Leading Street Crushes the Life Out of an Italian.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—An Italian named Gaetio Gissa, only four years from his native home, was crushed to death by falling ice on Sparks street at 2 o'clock.

Clerk Featherstone, of the Surrogate Court announced his annual statement today. Chattel mortgages for the year numbered 3,261, covering a value of $465,480. Of these, civil servants furnish the largest number, viz., 165, covering a value of $52,000.

Noble Bros. had an interview with Hon. John Costigan today and asked him to personally attend the next investigation into their case. He will be unable to do so.

Tariff on Milk Cans.

BUFFALO, Jan. 12.—The News today comments on an article in the Chatham Banner on the milk can controversy advising the farmers to use Canadian cans and see if the United States customs officers will admit them free. To this the News replies:—"United States customs officers must follow the letter of the law as closely as the Canadian officers. We have many times pointed out to our Canadian friends in the case of Commissioner De Barry's efforts in a similar direction that the officers must follow the instructions of the Government. The only way to remedy the matter incontrovery is to have the obnoxious regulation changed."

WOMEN PLAYING POKER.

A GAMBLING RESORT WHERE THIS IS DONE IN OTTAWA.

Philadelphia Wants a Boodle Investigation—Nervy Burglars in Brantford—Big Storms in Europe.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—The discovery of a poker club in a fashionable quarter of this city would have attracted little attention had it not become known that the club is composed of women as well as men, who are classed among the leaders in Ottawa's society.

The fact first leaked out through a prominent member of the Civil Service having to mortgage his house to pay for his wife's losses at the gambling table.

Whiskey and water appears to have been the favorite beverage at the club. Some husbands of the women who have membership at this fashionable Monte Carlo have been ignorant of what was going on, a sewing circle or church guild accounting for their wives' absence during the evening they were at play."

WANT A BOODLE INQUIRY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A special from Philadelphia to the Times says: The people in this town, aroused as they have seldom been aroused before, to the corruption in the city government, are crying for a Lexow Investigating Committee. There are a thousand rumors in the air of movements looking to an investigation. Whichever way the people turn there are signs of rottenness and corruption. The political events of the last two days have simply created in everybody a feverish desire to get right down to the roots of what it is that controls the city.

Yesterday it was announced that James Breen, a reputable man, and the president of a telephone company, had prepared an affidavit in which he said that $300,000 worth of stock of a certain telephone company had been distributed to purchase the passage of blanket franchise through the councils. Mr. Breen said today that if he were put under oath in the witness chair by a committee appointed to either by the councils of the courts, or the state legislatures, he would give further details.

BIG STORMS IN EUROPE.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 12.—Over twelve steamers have sought refuge here from the fierce gale which is blowing. A terribly heavy sea is running outside the harbor and the shore is strewn with wreckage.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—A terrific gale, accompanied by a heavy snow storm, is raging over South Devonshire. On the Dartmoor tableland the snow is several feet deep.

NERVY BURGLARS.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 12.—The house of Geo. Williams, one mile west of Burford village, was entered by three burglars last night.

Williams came home and found the intruders. He was told at the point of a revolver that he was not running the house at the moment.

He gave the alarm, and some neighbors coming to the rescue, the thieves were driven off.

The police are on their track.

DOCTORS TESTIFY.

Hendershott's Wounds Described in Court—The Middlemarch Murder.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 12.—The preliminary trial of the Hendershott case was resumed yesterday, and a great many witnesses were examined. Miss Edith Welter, who was engaged to be married to W. H. Hendershott, the dead man, said that he told her his $11,000 insurance was to be made over to her after their marriage. After the body was discovered William Welter drove her to St. Thomas. On the way she asked him if he would be in the city again on a certain day.

He said, "Yes, if I'm not in gaol."

She answered, "There's no danger of that."

He replied, "I don't know what they'll do. I left Will Hendershott lying in a pool of blood, and there was time for some one to spatter the blood around."

She then said, "If the worst comes to the worst have Osler. I don't think you did it, but if you did I could see you hanged," and he answered, "I suppose you could."

Dr. Frank O. Lawrence, of this city, read the report of the post mortem examination of the body of deceased made by him, at which four other physicians were present. The edges of many wounds were clear cut and well defined. The doctor advanced the opinion that these were not caused by the tree; an axe could have produced them.

Dr. T. W. Duncombe thought the head might have been struck by the tree without completely crushing it, if the earth beneath was very soft but the wounds could nearly all have been caused by some blunt instrument.

In the opinion of Dr. E. W. Gustin, the coroner, an accident could not possibly produce all the cuts, although it might cause some of them. The larger portion of them, he had no doubt, were caused by some instrument, such as an axe.

ATTACKED BY SOMALIS.

Mission Stations in Africa—The Church Militant Represented by an American.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Mail advices from Zanzibar give further particulars of the attack upon the American and Swedish mission at Culesea, on the Tana river, by a band of Somalis on October 30th. An American missionary who took part in the fight which resulted in the repulse of the natives, reports that after the Somalis retreated they were harassed by their enemies, the Gallas. The Somalis were without food and became exhausted by the constant activity and enforced marches to which they were driven by the cruel attacks of the enemies. The Somalis finally reached their villages after having lost fully half their number, which when they made the attack upon the mission was fully 1,700.

Carnegie Men to Unite.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 12.—There is much excitement among the workmen at the Carnegie works here. A mass meeting has been called for Sunday morning for the purpose, it is said, of forming a labor union among the men. President Garland and Vice President Carnegie of the amalgamated association will address the meeting, which gives promise of being largely attended. Last night 1,500 hand bills were circulated among the men in the mill announcing the meeting. Today's developments will be anxiously awaited by all concerned.

Killed on the Track.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Three men, who were walking on the tracks of the New York Central railroad, near Riverdale station, were struck by a train at 10.30 o'clock last night. Two of them were instantly killed and the third so badly injured that he will die.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 14 1895.

Good morning!

If Toronto is to keep on burning itself up in this fashion it will soon have nothing left to set fire to except its blooming old Island and its sewerage-infected bay.

Over in Cleveland the other day a young man killed himself to avoid getting married. The luck that girl is playing in ought to make her life one long, blissful dream.

A contemporary says that the Belleville Sun is clamoring for the January thaw. If the Sun would exercise a little January thawt, it would remember that the thaw made its appearance several days ago.

The Japanese have been walloping the Chinese again, despite the fact that Li Hung Chang has been hopelessly sidetracked. It takes quite a lot of whipping to make the Chinese realize that they are whipped.

The Dominion Government has made it part of one of the Trent Valley contracts that only British subjects shall be employed on the work. This is a good move, but the Government should go further and make the same condition applicable to all public contracts.

Beer and ale are growing more popular with the passing years, and the people of Orient are welcoming them with open—mouths. The total number of breweries in the world is 51,000, of which Germany has 26,240, over one-half. England comes next with 12,874. The United States has 2,500, but they are much larger than they are in Europe.

Reports in regard to anti-toxine are as a rule, very favorable. One of the most encouraging is that from Ashtabula, Ohio, where diphtheria of a malignant type broke out on December 6th. In a short time there were ninety-five cases and twenty deaths had occurred. Then anti-toxine was procured from New York, and it was used successfully in all cases, and no complications have been observed.

When the Scotch-Canadian curler wends his way under a dripping umbrella to the rink, views the sheet of water where ice should be, and thinks of the graun' curlin' there is now on Loch Lomond, he feels keenly the burden of exile. Yet, although the delights of cold Scotland are denied him, he may still have his hot Scotch.

Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, has serious doubts as to the efficacy of the death penalty in preventing murders. "I respectfully submit for your consideration," he says in his message to the Legislature, "the question whether the death penalty does any substantial good; whether we are any better off than they are in those States where they long ago abolished it, and whether it would not be better to have a more rational system of managing our prisoners, and then abolish capital punishment entirely.

THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION.

The New York World has been endeavoring to sound the alarm anew as to the contagiousness of dread consumption. This known scientific fact has been published widely enough, one would think; but old superstitions die hard. It is not too much to say that the majority of people still act as if consumption were no more contagious than a broken leg. Yet the highest medical authorities assure us that no person ever has the disease unless he catches it from some one else. The following paragraphs from the World ought to arouse people to a sense of the danger that ignorance of this fact spreads abroad:

"Consumption kills 100,000 persons every year in this country (the United States). It is the worst scourge known to man. In the absence of sanitary precautions every human being is exposed to the infection every day of his life, and Dr. Briggs declares that quite one-half of all the people take the disease at one time or another.

* * * *

"We know perfectly how to stamp it out, how to save the 6,000 who annually die of it in New York city and the 100,000 who fall victims every year in the country."

It quotes Dr. Herman S. Briggs as saying that "by proper sanitary measures the disease might be utterly stamped out within a single generation." Surely if anything is worth the doing, this is. At any rate, when infection can be so easily avoided in individual cases, it should be done through the instinct of self-preservation. It is only necessary to destroy the sputa of the victim before it dries, to make his presence in the house as safe as that of a well person. If this is not done, he not only runs the risk of infecting others, but is very apt to re-infect himself again and again, thus preventing recovery. A disease, so easily quarantined as this, surely ought not to be allowed to maintain its position as the chief scourge of the human race. It can be isolated by the simple precaution of burning the sputa, and one of the most effective remedies is fresh air. And yet the contagion is found everywhere and thousands die of it.

Surely intelligent agitation can impress the whole people into a Health Office corps capable of driving this plague of northern and temperate climes off the continent. It is a case in which knowledge is the vaccine most needed; and an industrious educational campaign should be begun.

SUNDAY PAPERS.

W. F. Maclean, M.P., of the Toronto World, and a number of Toronto newsboys are in a peck of trouble. Mr. Maclean publishes a newspaper called the Sunday World. The Sunday World is not ordinarily a Sunday paper. It is issued late on Saturday night, and is distributed throughout the city before midnight and throughout the country by the late trains. On Sunday last, however, it was thought advisable to get a Sunday issue of the paper containing an account of the Globe fire. The paper was printed and hawked about the streets of Toronto, on Sunday morning.

We agree with the Hamilton Herald that as Toronto has to do something to maintain its reputation as the headquarters for earthly piety, Mr. Maclean and the naughty newsboys have been invited to appear before the police magistrate and explain their iniquity. The case came up Friday and was enlarged for a week, and we are informed that Mr. Maclean proposes to make a test case of it and settle the most point as to whether the law prohibiting the printing and sale of newspapers on Sunday in Ontario is sound. If he succeeds it will simply mean that Sunday newspapers will blossom out in every city in the province.

For this reason it is to be hoped that he will fail. The Sunday newspaper is an unnecessarily evil. It is not wanted in this country. There is no demand for it. It means extra work for an army of newspaper writers without any compensating benefit. It means that instead of having some little time during the week that they can usually call their own, the men who make newspapers will have to keep their noses at the grindstone from week's end to week's end; and that it means that the gradual secularization of Sunday will follow in the Sunday newspaper's wake. It will be a bad hour for the day of rest when the publication of Sunday papers is permitted in Ontario.

HOW TO CLEAN HOUSE

THE WAY ONE WOMAN MAKES HARD LABOR SEEM EASY.

She Learned to Economize In Strength and Has a System—Taking Up Carpets and Scrubbing Floors—Battling With Moths and Getting Rid of Rubbish.

I always begin to clean house at the top—in the attic, which is the storeroom for castoff things of the year in clothing and furniture. In the course of six months an awful lot of rubbish accumulates there, and at housecleaning is a good time to get rid of it. In a house where there are children there is always considerable castoff clothing to look over. Some of it will do very nicely to cut over for younger children, and that should be brushed and aired, then folded away in a box kept for that purpose. The garments that are outgrown and cannot be remodeled should be put in another box, ready to bestow on some worthy person less fortunate than yourself.

Do not hoard up old garments against possible need "next year." If you do not see a possible chance of making use of them in the next six months, put them in the poorbox. They will bring you a richer blessing there. Examine the broken furniture that has been stowed away. If it can be mended, have it done at once, before knocking about has destroyed the usefulness of a piece to which you are attached. If you find that it is too worn and shabby for your own house, perhaps you know some deserving person who is ingenious enough to fix it up and would be very glad to do so for the gift of it. Otherwise throw it into the kindling wood heap. There isn't a particle of sense in cluttering up a house with a lot of useless old rubbish. Unless you are sure that dilapidated furniture can be fixed up it is bad judgment to send it to the attic anyhow.

Look over the old papers and magazines and make a package of those you do not intend to have bound to send to the hospital or some institution, where a bit of reading material is a perfect boon. After sorting over and putting away all the trash in the attic you have a heap of litter that it is useless to try to put away. Dump it on the ash heap or bribe your scrubwoman to relieve you of it. Then sweep and dust and mop out the attic all ready to receive the stores that will come up from the lower part of the house. It will probably take you a whole day to go over the attic properly. If you discover any signs of that terror of the housewife—bedbugs—make war on them at once. A machine oil can of gasoline is a good companion in such an emergency. Use it freely on infected spots. It will kill eggs and insects instantly and evaporates almost as soon as applied. Do not have a lighted lamp or gas around when you use it, though, nor for some time after, unless you have raised the windows and aired the attic.

If you have found moths, take all the infected clothes out into the sunshine. Beat and shake them well, then brush and if practicable dampen and run a hot iron over them. Moths are the meanest pests that ever got into a house. They do more damage in a day than can be repaired in a year, and there is absolutely no way known yet, except vigilance, that will keep them out of woolen clothing and furs. After you have everything cleaned and sweet smelling in the attic, get a pint of sulphur and put in an old iron kettle and set it over an oil stove or charcoal fire in the attic. Close the windows and doors and let it burn itself out.

Then you may be reasonably sure that there are no microbes or bacilli lurking around to descend upon and destroy the family. Be sure to remove all clothing that sulphur will be apt to discolor. It will injure nothing else. After cleaning the attic I go through every closet in the house next and give each the same treatment. Then I begin on the house proper.

In cleaning the other rooms of the house I seldom attempt more than two at once. I select one room on the floor to be cleaned—that I want for a workroom—and have the carpets taken up and the furniture covered. Into this room I have all the pictures, bric-a-brac and furniture carried and piled up out of harm's way. The carpets from the two rooms are carried out to be shaken and dusted, and then I have the dusty floors sprinkled with bits of torn paper that have been dampened. When swept, no dust is raised to penetrate other portions of the house. The walls are swept down with a broom, over which a flannel cloth is pinned, and an application of elbow grease.

If there are grease spots, I take them out with an application of pipe clay made into a paste and applied damp. The grease is generally extracted by the time the clay is dry. Where there are smoke stains from gas or from the register I have the places rubbed with a rag and corn or oat meal. This will not remove the smoke stains always, but will as a general thing. I have taken such stains off with a rag saturated with gasoline, but that has to be done very carefully, or you will smear the paper. After the walls are cleaned the woodwork should be washed with ammonia water, or borax if you like. I use borax for everything because I like its action better. If you have soap used, see that it is not lye soap, because that will take the life out of the paint and make it look dead. It will soon wear off, too, after being washed with strong soap.

Then have the floor scoured with good strong lye water unless it is stained or oiled; then of course you will have it wiped up with hot water only, as anything else would extract both color and oil. If you have feared that there might be moths in the edges of the room, the hot water should be used freely and then a train of gasoline put around all the cracks. As soon as the floor is dry have the carpets put down.

While the carpets are being put down you can be cleaning the pictures. Remove the backs and wash the glass and dust the picture, then clean the frame carefully and hang as soon as the carpets are down. Dust and rub up the chairs, using some good furniture polish if necessary, or if there are no scars a rubbing with a kerosene rag and an after polish with a flannel cloth will benefit almost all kinds of wood. Clean the bedstead and other furniture the same way. Clean everything before you carry it back into the room, and for this purpose you will find the workroom quite handy. Put up your curtains and draperies the last thing. Some housekeepers do not take up their stair or hall carpets till the lower floor is reached in the process of cleaning, preferring to cover them with linen. I always take mine up the first thing and wipe up the halls and stairs, for the tramping and dragging of heavy furniture over the carpets wear them out.—Washington Star.

Hints About Gloves and Shoes.

It is a science to put on gloves for the first time. The bands must be perfectly fresh and dry and cool. After putting in fingers and thumb fasten the second button from the bottom, coming to the first one last. Remove the gloves from the wrist, and not by the fingers, and leave them turned thus inside out, so that all moisture may be dissipated. When putting away gloves, do not roll, but lay them lengthways in a sachet. Place white flannel between pairs of light gloves. A little new butter rubbed on perfectly new chevrette gloves tends to keep them in good condition. Light gloves can be cleaned with flour, and rubbed places in black suede or kid covered with a mixture of olive oil and ink and left to dry. With boots, if damp, it is a good plan to fill them with paper and leave them to dry far away from the fire. Paraffin is useful to soften leather hardened by mud and rain. To make the soles of boots rain tight and durable paint with copal varnish and dry. Repeat the process twice or thrice. The secret of keeping veils fresh is to smooth and fold them immediately on coming indoors.

The People Victoria Likes.

Although it has frequently been stated that newspapers are carefully kept from her majesty, it is well known among those acquainted with the queen's private life that no current events or topics escape her attention. Indeed so curious is she about the principal personages of the day that she never rests until she has obtained their photographs. Among her majesty's most curious photographs is one of Louise Michel.

The queen likes two classes of people—those of rank who keep within the limits of court etiquette, for which the queen is as great a stickler as the emperor of Germany, and those who are no "respecter of persons," who can neither flatter nor cringe, who will repeat or gossip or repeat an amusing anecdote, such as the Scotch peasants or the most confidential servants of the royal household.

The queen has a great personal influence over children and is very much interested in getting the opinions of nurses and governesses connected with the royal household as to their training.—Woman at Home.

In Cases of Croup.

A standard medical authority says that the first thing to do for the child is to put his feet into as hot mustard water as he can bear and be sure that the room is very warm. If possible, put him into a hot bath, and then quickly drying him put him in bed between blankets. Even before putting him in bed give him sirup of ipecac in teaspoonful doses until he vomits. For external applications take 2 tablespoonfuls of turpentine and 4 tablespoonfuls of goose oil, or sweet oil, or lard oil, mix well and rub thoroughly on the outside of the throat. Saturate a flannel and lay it over the chest and throat. Hot bricks or bottles filled with hot water should be placed at the child's feet and at the sides of his body to induce perspiration. Keep him carefully covered. After the vomiting the bowels must be kept open with sirup of squills. The best drink for the child is slippery elm water. Give plenty of nourishment to keep up the strength.

Cleaning Pots and Pans.

A woman naturally hates to clean up a bread or cake bowl after the dough has got hard. They should be cleaned as soon as used, but if necessary to leave them for a time run the tray or bowl full of cold water and let it stand so. When you get ready to clean it, the dough will be in the bottom of the utensil as a general thing, and you will only have to rinse and dry it. The same is true of kettles and skillets. I do not approve of setting any utensils aside when the dishes are washed, for if you keep an oyster shell with a thick, smooth edge at hand you can clean the roughness out of anything in half a moment, but if you don't want to do it just then you will find that an iron pot in which potatoes have burned to the bottom, or a skillet in which meat or gravy has simmered to a crust, will be easy enough to clean after standing an hour or two filled with cold water.

Worry and Cooking.

More than half of a housekeeping woman's time is spent in worrying and a good share of the other half in preparing food, as though the stomach were the immortal part of us. Take one-quarter of the time a woman devotes to making pies, preparing puddings, putting up preserves, baking cakes and frying, etc., and let her devote it to rest and recreation, and she would not look like a shred of parchment paper at 40. It is the nonessentials that kill us. We must learn to simplify before we can escape the doom of premature age. Nature never intended us to live as we do. If she meant us to eat puff pastry, she would have grown it on some of her trees. She has provided simple food in the shape of cereals, fruits and vegetables, and if we conformed ourselves more closely to her established order of diet we should be a happier and hardier race.—New York Telegram.

Filling Up a Window.

An excellent way of filling up an unnecessary window, or one that looks out on an ugly view, is to have the lower part built out into a small alcove, lined with plush, with a small shelf running round it and brackets for china. At the back a little window is covered with gilded fretwork, and in the front a space is left which can be filled up as the owner desires. One of the advantages is that light is not excluded from the top of the window or from the top of the alcove, so that it would be especially suitable for the small libraries where the back window looks out on a mews, and yet where light is distinctly needed.

Keeping Young.

American women might learn an advantageous lesson of their French sisters in the art of keeping young. But it is no recipe for cosmetics that they would acquire. First of all, French dames do not worry, or, if they do, they conceal the fact admirably. They are apparently on the crest of the wave of good fortune perpetually. Next, and almost equally important, they decline to hurry. They take life moderately, perform their duties without haste and linger over their pleasures. And in these two simple rules lies a mine of wealth for her who is wise enough to appropriate it.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Black Rope Designs.

Black rope is often used to embroider the designs stamped on pillows and tablespreads of colored linen or denims. It is particularly effective on old pink or shades of olive, and if the articles are to be used in a sitting room is often preferred to white embroidery silk or linen floss. Outlining the designs thus worked in black, a fine gold cord or thread is sometimes added to brighten the work.

"I am 29. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued till 19. I then became "one of the boys" and led a gay life. Exposure produced Syphilis. I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, sunken and blurr; pimples on face; hair loose, bone pains; weak back; varicocele; dreams and losses at night; weak parts; deposit in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

Finally "The Golden Monitor," edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan fell into my hands. I learned the Truth and Cause. Self abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of Consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. THE FIGHTING GOES ON.

TWO JAPANESE ARMIES PUSHING ONWARDS TO PEKIN.

Britain Will Not Allow China to Accede to Japan's Demands—The Latter Too Eager for the Spoils of War.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Central News correspondent at Tokio says word has been received from Kaiping that at dawn on the 10th inst. a brigade of the second Japanese army, under the command of Gen. Nogi, attacked a large body of Chinese in the vicinity of Kaiping and routed them after four hours' hard fighting, at the conclusion of which a detachment of the Japanese forces occupied Kaipink. The Chinese forces exceeded 3,000 men, with two Gatling guns and 12 field guns. The enemy fled towards Haishateal, vigorously pursued by the victorious army. Any Chinese forces remaining in the vicinity of New Chwang are now between the two Japanese armies.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—The Cologne Gazette advises the Government of Japan to make peace with China at once. It will be a dangerous thing for Japan, the Gazette says, if her desire for the fruits of victory increases, as her demands might become so exaggerated that the European powers could not allow China to concede them.

A telegram from Shanghai says: The Japanese army occupied Ka Hing on the 10th instant. Gen. Sung and the other Chinese officers and soldiers made a precipitate retreat to Ting King, and the latter town is now in great confusion.

VICTORIA, B. C., 11.—Tokio advices up to December 14, per steamer Tacoma, says: The Japanese Diet opened today with an entire absence of excitement, and only a limited attendance. Count Ito, the Minister President, attended and read the following Imperial rescript, in which occurs the following:—"Of the progress of the war there is little to be said. The first and second army divisions are pushing on toward Pekin, meeting with a stubborn resistance as they proceed. The third division has also landed on Manchurien soil, and has taken part in several engagements, in which the Chinese conducted themselves with great valor. Preparations are rapidly advancing for the defence of Pekin, and there is every indication that the next blow of the war will be struck at this, the one vital spot of the Chinese empire."

BOMBARDED BY THE FRENCH.

A Madagascar Fort Assailed and Stoutly Defended.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A despatch to the Globe from Port Louis, Maritus, says news has been received from Madagascar stating that the French have bombarded Fort Farafatra, four miles inland from Tamataves. The Hovas defended the fort, replying to the French fire with well-directed shots from the seven guns comprising the armament of the fort. The advices received at Port Louis give no details of the engagement.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Further advices from Madagascar, via Port Louis, say the attack upon Fort Farafatre was made December 23. The Hovas were defeated and retired with heavy loss.

Governor's Salary Reduced

MELBOURNE, Jan. 11.—This evening the Assembly adopted the government's proposal to reduce the Governor's salary from £10,000 to £5 000, beginning with the next Governor. It is believed that in consequence of this decision only a rich man will be able henceforth to maintain the dignity of the governor's office. The assembly also adopted the proposal to reduce the salaries of members of the assembly from £300 to £240. The legislative council rejected the income and land tax bill, thereby creating a deadlock between the two Houses. The council would have passed an income tax alone.

Desperate Moonshiner Dead.

IUKA, Miss., Jan. 11.—News comes from Red Sulphur Springs, Tenn., of a double tragedy in which a commercial traveller named Steele and a noted moonshiner, Gus Thomas, lost their lives. Thomas was the outlaw who, a week ago, murdered Dr. Martin, and was in the party which, a couple of years ago, fired into a posse of Federal revenue officers, wounding Marshal J. W. Brown and killing Deputy Marshal Garner. He was the most desperate moonshiner in the south,

Position of the Japs.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Times will publish tomorrow a despatch from its Tien Tsen correspondent saying: The Japanese armies are posted in a curve extending from the Kaiphing seashore to Hai Cheng, which is strongly fortified and thence to Motien Ling, a strong offensive and defensive position. The Chinese peace envoys will go to Hiroshima on a passenger steamer, Japan objecting to special vessel. The Japanese Foreign Minister Mutsu has been delegated to negotiate with them.

Aground in a Fog.

GLASGOW, Jan. 11.—A dense fog overhangs the river Clyde today. The Anchor Line steamer Anchoria, Captain Campbell, is aground on Skelmorlie bank. Passengers will be landed at Wemyss bay and forwarded by train to Glasgow. Five steamers which left Greenock yesterday for Glasgow have not been reported, and it is believed that they have anchored in the river waiting for the fog to lift.

Murder and Suicide.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 11.—Today O. W. Billings and his wife were found dead in their home at [illegible] Ave. They had not been seen for several days and this morning the neighbors forced an entrance to the house. A revolver was found indicating murder and suicide.

BUILDING NOVELS.

Mrs. Southworth Describes Her Methods, Which Are Partly Realistic.

"My stories always have a foundation in fact," Mrs. Southworth says. "To show you how they are evolved from small beginnings I will give you a history of the manner in which the 'Hidden Hand' was produced. I was in wretched health at the time, my sister was dying of consumption, and yet in the midst of these depressing circumstances the brightest and gayest of my novels came to me. One day, in the year 1857, my eye chanced to fall upon a paragraph in a New York paper, which stated that a little 9-year-old girl, dressed in boy's clothing and selling newspapers, had been arrested in that city. This item fell like a seed into my mind and germinated there. The little seller of newspapers was Capitola, but I must find an origin for her.

"Suddenly an incident which occurred in my childhood just across Benning's bridge came back to me. An old nurse was met and blindfolded one night by two masked men and carried into a house, where, a few hours later, a child was born. Bribes were offered the woman to destroy this child, but she refused them. The young mother was also bent upon the preservation of her infant, the result being that, braving the displeasure of her family and being discarded by them, she brought up her child. It lived and thrived and was afterward well known in Washington. This was the fact upon which Capitola's birth was founded, and almost every adventure of her life was similarly obtained. Her sparkling speeches to Old Hurricane were taken from conversations which occurred between my sister and a Mississippi uncle. Her duel was suggested by a like adventure of a Mississippi girl, who was misunderstood and offended by a British officer. The girl appealed to her brothers to avenge the insult which she had received. They treated the matter lightly, and she challenged the officer to a duel. Her challenge was received with contempt, and meeting him later and being armed she fired at him—not with dried peas, as Capitola did, but with bullets. He was severely wounded, and the girl gave herself up to the authorities, but when her case was investigated she was released.

"As to Old Hurricane—liberal, kind hearted, but blustering and overbearing in manner—you might meet him any time among Maryland and Virginia planters. It was when at work upon the 'Hidden Hand' that I contracted the habit of writing at night. My invalid sister lived in the extreme east end of Washington, I in the western part of Georgetown. My visits to her were made in the morning, so that I never got to my desk until noon, and I generally remained at it until midnight. Anxious as I was about my sister, when I took up my pen I became possessed of the spirit of Capitola, and care and sorrow left me. Although I have been such an indefatigable worker, writing every day for many years from 12 o'clock in the morning until the same hour at night and scarcely taking any time for my meals, I have never had a threat of pen paralysis. I have avoided it by increasing the size of my holder every year.

"I have used a typewriter to a limited extent, and it has relieved me as a tired child on a long walk is relieved by getting astride of his father's cane for a ride. I have taken my seat at this instrument sometimes to make a few notes, and the change from my pen has been so grateful that I have frequently roughly jotted down as much of a story as would ordinarily have occupied me for several days. For 30 years I wrote exclusively for the New York Ledger, producing a novel for every one of those years. During that time I adapted my style to the tastes of its readers, but when my connection with it was severed—which occurred when the paper passed into the hands of Mr. Bonner's sons—I wrote with less embarrassment. I have never written a play, but many of my works have been dramatized, and the 'Hidden Hand' was played in three London theaters at once, with profitable results."—Philadelphia Times.

The Ideal Nursery.

The ideal nursery should be on the top floor if more quiet, air and sunshine can be had there. It should, to be artistic, be done in light colors, but first be clean. Matting on the floor, with a carpet rug tacked over it, should cover the floor. The windows should have white curtains, and the walls should be papered with sanitary paper, which can be wiped off with a damp cloth. The beds—single iron ones if possible—should be placed away from the walls and have flat mattresses and very low hair pillows. Light, warm blankets are better than heavy comforters or quilts, healthier and more comfortable. As little gas as possible should be used in the children's sleeping rooms, and that little should be carefully shaded. Nothing is worse for a young child than a light shining in its face while sleeping. Cretonne is the prettiest material for nursery furniture, and cleanliness, sunshine and air the best medicines for the nursery's occupants. In winter a grate fire is a boon. It keeps the room warm and gives perfect ventilation.

Characteristics of European Cities.

An observer, says a correspondent of the Leeds Mercury, has drawn up a little table in which he arranges the principal cities and towns of the world according to a classification which has at least the merit of novelty. Each town is considered from the point of view of the trades which are carried on in it. According to these statistics, in Paris there reside the most tailors, upholsterers, bonnet makers, barbers, advocates and men of letters, men or women. In London we find the most cab and carriage proprietors, engineers, printers, booksellers and—though most people would scarcely credit it—cooks. In Amsterdam we find the most are dealers and money lenders. Brussels is celebrated as the place where the largest number of boys smoke. It is in Naples that we find the most street porters. We see the largest number of beer drinkers in Berlin. Florence possesses the most flower sellers, and Lisbon is celebrated as containing the most bailiffs.

How He Read It.

The other day Mr. Toole entered a dairy, and in his most solemn manner addressed himself to the man as follows:

"I will take a boy," looking round at the shelves.

"A boy, sir?" asked the dairyman, fairly puzzled.

"Yes, or a girl," answered the actor.

The man, thinking him some lunatic, said, "Pardon me; this is a milk shop."

"Come outside," said Mr. Toole, and taking the man by the arm he led him to the door and pointed to the sign.

"I'll take a boy and a girl," repeated the humorist, with not a ghost of a smile. "Read what your notice states, 'Families Supplied in Any Quantity.'"—London Tit-Bits.

Trainer Allan Wilson is of opinion that Mr. Jos. Duggan's filly Mayonaise, the sister to Merrythought, is the best of the three-year-olds in training for the Queen's Plate. "I leave out Vicar of Wakefield," he says, "because he is four years, but this filly can beat all the three-year-olds, sure."

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS.

George Lovell, one of the richest of New York bookmakers, died on Wednesday.

Sarnia defeated Detroit at curling last week by 18 shots.

John Roberts, the English billiard champion, will soon visit America again.

Six American cyclists are making a tour of Mexico, and will be given a grand reception.

A return curling match Saturday between Petrolia and Sarnia was won by the former, the score being 60 to 51.

A lot of valuable trotting stock was sold by Mayor Erratt Saturday at his Mountain View farm, near Ottawa.

A hockey match Saturday at Guelph, between local players and Ayr, was won by the latter the score being 11 to 0.

A bailiff has sold the goods and chattels of the London Lacrosse Club for $474, under a landlord's warrant for $15 rent.

There is some talk in New York of building a keel yacht, instead of a centre-boarder, to compete with the Earl of Dunraven's craft.

At a meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen in New York tonight the date of the next annual regatta will be decided upon.

The new English yacht to race for the American Cup will be ready in three months, although the order has not yet been placed. Henderson, of Glasgow, will build it.

A champion Ontario Association hockey match was played at London Friday night between Stratford and London. The game was very closely contested, London winning by 7 to 4.

The National Exhibition of Cycles and Cycle Sundries, which will open in Madison Square Garden, New York, January 18, promises to be the largest ever held in the country.

It is suggested that 300 members of the New York Yacht Club subscribe $500 each to build an America Cup defender. Personal jealousies are interfering with the formation of a syndicate.

A cocking main, held at Detroit early on Friday morning, between Canadian and American birds, was won by the former, the score being 6 to 4. Chatham sports returned with about $700 of American money.

In the second cricket match between England and Australia, which finished on the 3rd inst., the scores were as follows: England, 75 and 475; Australia, 123 and 333. The Englishmen, therefore, won by 94. The match was played at Melbourne.

SPURIOUS ANTI-TOXINE.

A Dangerous Preparation is Being put on the Market.

The New York World says that Dr. Biggs and Dr. Prudden, in an official report, informed President Wilson, of the Health Board, that several preparations of the diphtheria anti-toxine have been put upon the market, and that they have examined one or two of them and have found them to be absolutely worthless. The doctors say that none of the domestic preparations have been prepared with proper guarantees of efficiency, so far as they have been able to learn. They say further that the new remedy requires special laboratories great care in the selection and feeding of the necessary animals, in fact a great outlay, and therefore it follows that the price must be high. Further, all stages of the preparation must be watched by competent bacteriologists.

The great point about the wonderful remedy is its use in the early stages of the disease. If anti-toxine of poor quality and improper manufacture is used, the life of the patient is endangered, not only by the remedy itself but by the delay in getting and using the proper kind of anti-toxine.

The Board of Health says that the only properly guaranteed preparations that have come to their notice are those manufactured in Germany by Scherang and the Farbwerke (Hochst am Main.) They say that these come into this market in very small quantities and that the price is very high. But they urge that the first cost of making the anti-toxine properly means that it must sell at a very high price if genuine. The fact that there is nothing striking in the genuine to distinguish it from the spurious makes the danger the greater.

A QUESTION OF EXPEDIENCY.

The Clergy in the Future Will Not Furnish Local Papers With Sermons.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Ministerial Association held last week, the matter of the advisability of furnishing notes, synopsis or MSS. of sermons by the members of the Association to the local papers was discussed and by resolution the unanimous opinion was expressed: "We deem it not expedient to further provide for the use of local papers any such notes, synopsis or MSS. of sermons."

With due respect for the opinion of the Ministerial Association as a body and likewise for its individual membership, the action the association has taken savors somewhat of the extraordinary.

In publishing, in each Monday morning's issue, brief synopsis of sermons delivered the day before, THE TIMES had in view an object unassailable. It was to enable those people, who by sickness or other causes could not attend divine service, to read of the Word as it was preached—to take to their doors that which they could not go to hear. There are in Peterborough, as in other places, people, who through force of circumstances, cannot attend divine service, yet these people feel the need of religious discourse and gladly read the reports of sermons in the Monday papers. Further than this there are numerous churches, too many to enable people to go to all of them, and thus while many good sermons are listened to each Sabbath, others equally as earnest and far reaching in their results, are missed by some, for the reason that people cannot attend all the churches. The daily paper, by publishing these sermons, makes it possible for the citizen to reap the benefit of them all; and who will gainsay that it is a benefit and a practice to be commended!

The minister, by furnishing the reporter with a prepared synopses of the entire MSS. of his sermon, as the case may be, enables and expedites the publication of a number of sermons. The reporter, while to a certain extent ubiquitous, cannot attend every every church in town, or more than two—one in the morning and one in the evening—while, if the notes are prepared by the minister of each church, every sermon of the day can be published. In the past, the clergy, with one or two exceptions, have kindly and willingly furnished this journal with notes, and thus enabled the easy publication of choice and instructive religious reading. Undoubtedly they did this, recognizing the good results that would accrue. In the face of this the resolution of the Ministerial Association is somewhat extraordinary and without precedent to the knowledge of the writer.

However, THE TIMES does not for a moment question the wisdom of their action, not knowing their reasons that prompted it. The Association, for reasons of "expediency," have decided to furnish no more notes to the local papers, and the question now is: Will the Association raise a kick if the reporters secure their own notes and write up the sermons themselves?

CHINESE SLAUGHTERED.

Two Hundred Killed and 150 Taken Prisoners at Kai Ping.

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 12.—Despatches received here from Kin Chow this morning say that Japanese scouts report that a large force of Chinese are moving down to support the Kai Ping force which has retired towards New Chwag.

At Kai Ping the Chinese numbered 3,000 men and they had 12 guns. About 200 Chinese were killed. The number of wounded Chinese is not known. About 150 prisoners were taken. The Japanese casualties are not stated.

SUPERSTITIOUS PEASANTRY.

Thousands Searching Bohemian Forests for Virgin Mary's Apparition.

PRAGUE, Bohemia, Jan. 12.—A report which was spread among the peasantry of the neighborhood of Branau, to the effect that the Virgin Mary had appeared in a neighboring wood, caused 5,000 persons to assemble in the hope of witnessing the apparition.

The local authorities, fearing a disturbance, ordered the crowds to disperse, and when they refused to do so the gendarmes charged and wounded two of the peasants. But re-enforcements of gendarmes had to be summoned from several points before the authorities succeeded in dispersing the crowds.

A Collegiate Institute Now.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 12.—The Niagara Falls High school has been raised to the rank of a Collegiate Institute and formally opened as such last evening, a number of prominent citizens being present. Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, was present and made a dedicatory speech full of encouragement for the institute. Several other appropriate speeches were made and a musical program was rendered.

Three Days for Manslaughter.

NEW York, Jan. 12.—Mrs. Francis J. Miner, who strangled her new-born babe to death and who pleaded guilty to manslaughter, was today sentenced by Justice Ingraham to three days in the city prison. The sentence is remarkable as being perhaps the lightest ever imposed for the crime of manslaughter. It was not clearly shown that the child's death was not accidental.

Extending Their Business.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—The Massey-Harris Company, of Toronto, are applying for a new charter giving them power to establish branches in foreign countries. This seems to be a move towards establishing the branch in New York State.

FIGHTING IN MADAGASCAR.

The French Attack a Fort with Doubtful Results—Trouble in Bangkok.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—A despatch to the Globe from Port Louis, Mauritius, says news has been received from Madagascar stating that the French have bombarded Fort Faratatra, four miles inland from Tamatave. The Hovas defended the fort, replying to the French fire with well-directed shots from the seven guns comprising the armament of the fort. The advices received at Port Louis give no details of the engagement. Further advices from Madagascar, via Port Louis, say the attack upon Fort Faratatra was made December 23. The Hovas were defeated and retired with heavy loss.

News has been received from Bangkok that a meeting of nobles took place at the palace last night, when a petition was signed requesting the King to appoint a Crown Prince. It is rumored the son of the second Queen will be appointed, he being the eldest of the blood royal. He is now in England receiving his education there.

BUDAPEST, Jan. 11. Emperor Francis Joseph has entrusted Baron de Banffy, President of the Chamber of Deputies, with the task of forming a Hungarian Cabinet.

The Monopoly Extends.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 12.—It has developed that the Standard Oil Company has absorbed the Sun, Craig and Crystal Oil Companies of this city and the Merriam Company of Cleveland, Ohio. Following up this acquisition it has just purchased a large tract in East Toledo, whereon will be erected a large refinery. A big trade in shipments of oil east by lake vessels will be opened up from this port next season.

Saved at the Last Minute.

CHARLESTOWN, S.C., Jan. 12.—Lincoln Grant was under sentence to be hanged at Mountain Pleasant for the murder of Jack Manigault. The sentence has been commuted to life imprisonment and notification of it reached Sheriff Morrison at almost the last moment necessary in order to save Grant's life.

Fatal Collision.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 12.—A collision between a passenger and freight train at North avenue depot on the Milwaukee and St. Paul this morning resulted in the death of two men and the serious injury of many others.

La Grippe's Victims.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Six more deaths from grippe were reported this morning.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

The Business World.

Hiram Rowe, marble dealer, of Collingwood, has assigned. Druggist A. J. Hunter, of Everett, has sold out to C. M. Kingston. H. Trebilcock & Co., London, have assigned to C. B. Armstrong. The bailiff is in possession of John Oxford's confectionery at St. Thomas.

Saturday's Market.

The market on Saturday in point of attendance of both buyers and sellers resembled that of Christmas. Poultry was plentiful but much dearer owing to the fact that the city buyers have commenced visiting the farms. Beef was cheap and the demand was good. Vegetables sold at a slight advance.

More of the Beautiful.

There was a fall of nearly two inches of snow yesterday. The weather, as predicted, turned colder, and a sharp northeast wind made it uncomfortable for pedestrians. The street railway tracks were covered, necessitating several rounds of the sweeper last night. The probabilities are for continued cold weather.

To Honor Robert Burns.

The St. Andrews Society of Peterborough are arranging to hold a concert in the opera house on the evening of January 23, to celebrate the birthday of Scotia's famous poet, Robert Burns, which falls on January 25. Among the talent already engaged is Miss Maggie Barr, a noted singer of Scottish songs, and the Canadian Concert Company. In addition Master Norman Grahame Fraser, of Toronto, a clever Highlander dancer has been engaged. The concert promises to be one of unusual attraction.

McGinity's Big Arrest.

On Saturday night a young man, evidently from the country, made himself conspicuous on George street by uttering a series of blood curdling yells. Officer McGinity heard the noise and approached the author for the purpose of arresting him. But the young man espied the officer and ran as hard as he could up the street. McGinity followed, and when the pursued's hat fell off the pursuer captured it and gave up the chase. The hat was marched to the police station in regular style, and the owner can have it if he applies there.

Furniture.

Nearly every family needs a little additional furniture every year, and it is an advantage to know where you can get what you want and know that you are getting value. A. Clegg has just what you need. He is buying for you every day. Always looking for best values for you, he knows that goods well bought are half sold. If you need furniture you cannot afford to buy until you have seen his stock and learned his prices. Furniture of all grades: Three good kitchen chairs for $1; a good hardwood bed for $2; a good hardwood bedroom suite, oak finish, for $12, etc., etc. Remember the place—437 George street

MR. CURRAN'S DEATH.

A Long Time Resident of Peterborough Passed Away.

The death of Mr. Owen Curran occurred on Saturday morning at his residence in Peterborough from asthma, a complaint with which the deceased had suffered for years. Mr. Curran has been an employee of the Grand Trunk railway, ever since the branch was built to this town. A few months ago he was forced to give up his position on account of ill health, a position which he filled ably and well for 25 years. Deceased was born in Limerick county Ireland, and was in his 76th year at the time of his death.

One son, Mr. John Curran, who is at present employed on a railroad in Florida, survives. Word of his father's death was immediately wired, and Mr. Curran is expected on Tuesday night. The funeral will in all probability take place on Wednesday afternoon.

Deceased was well-known in Peterborough, and much respected. His death is the loss of a good citizen, which will be generally regretted.

THE WEATHER.

Probs.—Cloudy with local snowfalls, turning much colder.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers

The Town Council will probably meet tonight.

The Ratepayers' Association will hold a meeting tonight.

A meeting of Lansdowne lodge, S.O.E. will be held tonight.

The order for a recount in the Toronto mayoralty election has been issued.

There were six tramps at the Police station on Saturday night, and two last night.

Quite a number from Peterborough will attend the fancy dress carnival at Lindsay tonight.

The Young Women's Association met on Saturday night and elected a board of directors for 1895.

James J. Corbett has now attained the highest pinnacle of notoriety. His name now appears in a patent medicine advertisement.

There will be a missionary meeting in St. John's school house on Wednesday night. Two prominent missionary workers from Toronto will deliver addresses.

"All things will come to him who waits,"
But here's a rule that slicker:
The man who goes for what he wants
Will get there all the quicker.

Mr. Josiah Dickey, employed by Mr. Ed. Sanderson, of Smith, while chopping on Saturday, gashed his foot with the axe he was using, inflicting a very painful wound.

Dr. Jebb, the optical specialist, will be in Peterborough, at Messrs. Clarke & Gibson's jewellery store, January 14, 15 and 16. Consultation and examination of the eye and sight free.

Mrs. Baxter, an old lady of 80 years, living about four miles out in the country, met with a painful accident on Friday. In stepping out of the back door, she slipped and fell, breaking an arm. It is doubtful whether she will recover from the accident.

A new invention is out and should recommend itself to church managers. It is a church contribution box that is passed around instead of the plate. The coins fall through the slots of different sizes, and halves, quarters and dimes alight on velvet and make no noise, but coppers and five cent pieces drop on a Chinese gong, which sounds to beat the band.

ANNUAL INSTITUTE MEETING.

It Will be Held in the Council Chambers on Wednesday

On Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute will be held in the Council Chambers. The program has been arranged as follows:

C. A. Savitz, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, "The best varieties of wheat; barley, peas and oats."

Dr. E. Smith, B.A., Brampton, "Essentials in successful breeding."

J. F. Beam, Black Creek, Ont., vice-president of Good Roads Association, "How to construct and maintain roads."

NORTH MONAGHAN—EVENING, 7.30.

C. A. Zavitz, "The Ontario Agricultural College."

D. E. Smith, "How law, learning and labor affect the farm."

J. F. Beam, "Dairy farming as a business."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gossip of People You Know and Those You Don't Know.

Mayor Kendry went to Ottawa last night.

Mr. Samuel Fanning, of Douro, was in town on Saturday.

Messrs. John G. and H. Daly, of Napanee, are stopping at the Snowden.

Dr. Lapp and Mr. R C. Morgan, of Pontypool, spent Saturday in town.

School Inspector J. W. Garvin returned from a two days' trip last night.

Mr. Charles Fairburn, of Bobcaygeon, is registered at the Snowden House.

Councillor James Quinlan, Postmaster R. J. Baird, E. B. Andros, manager of the Bank of Toronto; A. Winslow, of the Ambrose & Winslow Brewing Company, and Lawyer G. T. Baines, all of Port Hope, spent Sunday in town.

THE SCHOOL INSPECTORSHIP.

It may Be Vacant After the Board of Education Meets.

School Inspector J. W. Garvin, left his duties for two days and attended political meetings in North Simcoe. Some of the members of the Board of Education are much incensed because the school inspector has done this, and it is altogether likely that at the next meeting of that body a resolution will be moved that will have for its object the dismissal of Mr. Garvin.

The political meeting at which Mr. Garvin spoke was held in Barrie, and was a McCarthyite meeting in feeling. The Globe, which has a reputation for fairness in all of its reports, strongly portrays Mr. Garvin's reception. A Barrie journal goes for the school inspector tooth and nail.

It is said that Mr. Garvin will be the next Conservative candidate for North Simcoe. If this is so, Mr. Garvin will likely resign the position he now fills, and Peterborough will need a new school inspector, the emoluments of which position render the "sit" a very desirous one.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. C. O. Johnston of Kingston Preaches an Eloquent Sermon.

The George street Methodist Sunday school is one of the largest and most prosperous in the connection. At present it has a membership nearly reaching one thousand and is adding every Sunday additional forces. The superintendent is Mr. John Jeffries, B. A. of the Collegiate Institute staff and Mr. S. R. Armstrong, town clerk is the assistant superintendent.

Yesterday the anniversary services of the school were held and they were largely attended, not only by the Methodist but also many from other denominations.

Rev. C. O. J. Johnston, of Kingston, justly termed the "silver tongued orator of Canadian Methodism," was the preacher. Mr. Johnston is a preacher of exceptionally brilliant ability and with this is his eloquent speaking powers and lucid exposition of the subject he handles.

In the evening he spoke on "Christianity." All Christians, he explained, had life and were life. By this all things were theirs. A man might have purity, eloquence and faith, but if he has not charity, these profited him nothing. Christianity was in the heart and not in creeds. They were all God's children and could not stand on the platform rich with poor and creed with creed. By being a Christian they could enjoy themselves in literature, music and doing things that were good.

Tonight Rev. C. O. J. Johnston will lecture on "Seven different people of whom you are one."

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

DEATH WITH A HAT PIN.

A TRAMP AT OTTAWA'S POLICE STATION TAKES HIS LIFE.

Stabbed Himself in the Neck With a Darning Needle—A Man Killed by Falling Ice—Two Tragedies of Quebec's First City.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—A more desperate attempt at suicide has never been recorded in Ottawa than that of Carl Alkison, a foreigner, who stabbed himself in the neck in one of the cells in the police station a few minutes before 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

On Saturday night Alkison went to the station and asked for lodging. It was accorded him and on Sunday morning he left at about the same time as night lodgers are generally requested to take their departure.

IN HARD LUCK.

Only a couple of hours afterwards, however, Alkison made his appearance at the station again. He seemed to be in trouble. He said he had had no breakfast, and in piteous tones asked Sergeant Moylan what they were going to do with him. In answer to questions by the sergeant, as to who he was and where he hailed from, the stranger replied that he was a Swede and had been employed on the construction of the O. A. & P. S. railway, near Long Lake. He added that he had got into the bad graces of some of his fellow countrymen on the work. They were jealous of him because he tried to sub let a contract from one of the railway contractors. Nevertheless, he intended going right back to work, he said, but was disappointed upon going to the station to find that there were no cars running on Sunday.

He added that he was both hungry and tired, and wanted a place to rest. Taking pity on the poor fellow Sergeant Moylan gave him a lunch that one of the policemen had just left in the station. Alkison then walked into a cell and closing the door after him sat down and commenced to eat his breakfast.

IN A POOL OF BLOOD.

In the course of another couple of hours, Station Constable Robillard, while walking along the corridor happened to look into Alkison's cell. He was startled at seeing the unfortunate fellow kneeling on the pavement floor in quite a pool of blood, his head resting on the wooden bunk beside him.

Asked what was wrong, Alkison simply said he was sick. The constable went up stairs and informed Chief McVeity of the man's condition, and upon entering the cell, the chief found that Alkison had made a determined attempt to end his life. Blood was oozing freely from a small hole on each side of his neck. Two large darning needles were afterwards found in the cell, and with these Alkison admitted having pierced the holes in his neck.

KILLED BY FALLING ICE.

At a quarter to twelve o'clock on Saturday night, Gustin Gisoa, an Italian, who was struck in the afternoon by falling ice from the roof of the Dominion Hall at the corner of Sparks and Bank streets, died at the Water street hospital from the effects of his injuries. He lingered in an unconscious condition from the time of the accident to the last.

HAMILTON'S MAYOR BARRED

From the Position of Chief Constable—Convicted of Assault.

HAMILTON, Jan. 14.—At the meeting of the Police Commissioners on Saturday afternoon, two doctors' certificates were produced stating that Chief McKinnon was still unable to leave his hotel. A resolution was passed regretting that charges of gross misconduct had been laid against the chief constable and requiring him to attend as early as possible. The commissioners will hold another meeting tomorrow.

In the event of the office being made vacant Mayor Stewart is ineligible as the rules read:—"No person shall be appointed on the police force as constable unless he has not been convicted of any offence punishable by confinement in the common jail." This would bar the Mayor out, as he was convicted some time ago of assault.

Lazier & Monck, solicitors for Thomas Gould, state that their client is instructing them in the matter of securing a divorce from his wife. It is understood that this action is the outcome of the McKinnon matter, Gould having stated that it was his wife and her sister who accompanied the chief on his late trip. Private Detective Hodgins, of Toronto, has been working for Gould in the matter. At one time Gould was apparently anxious to take a part in the proposed investigation into the chief's doings but he is reported to have said he would simply let things take their course.

HIS DUSKY MAJESTY

Will Have to be Again Humbled—Human Sacrifices in Ashantee.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 14.—Advices received here from Cape Coast Castle, a town of Gold Colony British West Africa, say that the trouble which has arisen between that colony and the King of Ashantee, on account of the latter refusing to refrain from human sacrifices, is approaching a crisis. The king is said to have been arrogant during a recent interview with the Governor General, Sir William Brandford Griffiths, and the opinion of the white population of the Gold Coast is that another Ashantee expedition is inevitable.

RAIDED BY ROBBERS.

A Gang of Five Swept Through a Town in the Indian Territory.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 14.—A special to the Republic from Hartshorn (I.T.) says:

The town of Wilburton, several miles east of here was raided by a gang of five robbers last night. The principal loser was George Rider, a prosperous full-blooded Choctaw Indian, who did not believe in the safety of banks. The robbers made him give up $2,000 and three of his best horses. Several men were held up for small amounts. A posse of citizens was organized and is in pursuit of the outlaws.

The robbers were masked and there is no clue to their identity although it is thought they are of local talent.

Charged With Bigamy.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 14.—The story that Mrs. Dempster, of Gananoque, now in jail here awaiting trial on a charge of bigamy, secured a package from an American druggist, to take her husband's life is a wild rumor, originating from the fact that Dempster was ill and unable to attend the preliminary examination. No evidence whatever was taken to corroborate the rumor. It is generally considered to be a canard, pure and simple.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

MADAME HENRI JONIAUX ON TRIAL FOR TRIPLE MURDER.

The Antwerp Prisoner Displays Astonishing Self-Possession in the Witness Box and Deftly Parries the Questions of the Attorneys.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—On April 18 last Madame Henri Joniaux, daughter of General Jules Ablay and wife of the chief engineer of bridges and roads for the Belgian War Ministry, was arrested for poisoning her sister, brother and uncle. On her sister's life there was 70,000 francs insurance and on that of her brother Alfred there was 100,000 francs. She is said to have poisoned the uncle, Jacques Van der Kerchove, to inherit her share of his estate.

The prosecution is at the instigation of the English insurance company which held the policy on Alfred Ablay's life. At the time of her arrest popular indignation was very strong against her. The four days' preliminary examination before the magistrate has shown Madame Joniaux to be a woman of great courage and presence of mind, and her self-possession and judgment have almost caused a revulsion of feeling in her favor.

She admitted coolly that she had destroyed papers that would have been damaging testimony against her, but said she did so in a moment of excitement and was sorry. She had pawned and borrowed money of any and all who would lend. She had gambled, and had been accused of cheating. She had won and lost at Monte Carlo. She tried to raise money to help poorer members of the family who were in debt.

HER OWN AND OTHERS' JEWELLERY

She admitted the insurance on the lives of her relatives but claimed they were for the benefit of others, not herself. Two days were spent in showing her great financial strait at each time when a suspicious death took place. Every implicating question she met with protests of innocence sometimes so dramatic as to hold the court fairly breathless with suppressed excitement. She parried with the dexterity of a lawyer and was as strenuous in her denial of minor points as in more important ones. As an example of her astuteness:

THRUST AND PARRY.

The President—In December you went to Paris and afterwards to Monte Carlo. Did you make the journey with your husband's consent or were you ill?

Mme. Joniaux—It is not necessary to be ill to travel. I went to Paris first of all to arrange my brother's affairs and I took advantage of my presence there to go to Monte Carlo.

The President—You gambled at Monte Carlo?

Mme. Joniaux—I played with five franc pieces. Besides, what have all these questions of gambling to do with the case? Do you think me simple enough to imagine you can make money by gambling."

She claimed to be a victim of the morphine habit and claimed that the large amounts she purchased of several chemists just before her brother's death were for her own use. The presiding Magistrate commented that she was promising her creditors an immediate settlement, probably in expectation of the insurance. She replied that she was expecting her husband's salary, and that had she been guilty she would never have given the names of the chemists.

INDIGNANT ELOQUENCE.

Toward the end of the investigation she said: "I am alone here before my judges. I deeply deplore those sad events and the blot which they put on my name. During the long months of this inquiry I have often in the solitude of my cell wept tears of blood, and I would not wish for the greatest of my enemies one tithe of the torture I have endured."

The trial will continue about 10 days longer, but the remainder of it consists mostly of the examination of witnesses, and it can hardly exceed in dramatic interest the events of the four days already past.

"BILL" COOK CAPTURED.

THE DARING DESPERADO AT LAST LODGED IN JAIL.

A Sheriff on His Trial for Three Weeks—The Noted Outlaw Makes no Resistance—A Woman's Awful Leap for Life.

Special to the Times.

MUSKOGEE, Jan. 14.—A telegram was received here today saying that Bill Cook had been captured at Fort Stanton, New Mexico. Although Cook was supposed to be with that part of his gang which has been camping in the neighborhood of Fort Gibson recently, he has not been seen for some time and it is probable the New Mexico marshall has captured the man who for so long a time defied the Indian Territory authorities.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 14.—Bill Cook, train robber, murderer and all round desperado was captured near Fort Stanley, Lincoln Co., New Mexico, last Friday night by Sheriff Perry of Chavis County. Cook when he found that escape was impossible admitted his identity and decided to return to Oklahama without any formality. Perry spent over three weeks in the saddle with only a few trusted aides accompanying him and these did not know the true nature of his trip into the western country.

LEAP FOR LIFE.

BRADFORD, Pa., Jan. 14.—Yesterday morning at 6.45 o'clock this city was visited by a very destructive fire which started in the Sheehan House. The weather was intensely cold and the firemen were greatly handicapped in fighting the flames. Mary Callahan leaped from the second story of the Sheehan House and escaped with a broken ankle and arm. Mary Donine also jumped, but escaped injury. Mrs. McQuiston, residing over Smith's grocery, rushed down the stairs to Main street with her clothing on fire. The flames were extinguished and she will recover. Many firemen had their hands and ears frozen. Robert Sieo is in a serious condition from this cause. For a time the business portion of the town was threatened with destruction. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

THEY ARE REGISTERING.

Students and Paupers are Desirious of Voting.

KINGSTON, Jan. 14.—Both students of Queen's College and the male inmates of the Hotel Dieu here are registering here. The majority of them are Liberals and Dr. Smyth's friends are bound to make a strong protest.

SM. Darthon, Minister of Public Works, has resigned.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

THE MAIL AND EMPIRE NEGOTIATING TOWARDS AMALGAMATION.

The Globe Will Likely Occupy the Mail Building—Insurance Rates Will Be Advanced—A Man Found Dead in a Cellar—Will Fight Hon Mr. Harcourt.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—The Toronto Telegram today says: "Negotiations are now in progress that may end in union on honorable terms between the Empire and the Mail, and the Globe's occupation of the Mail building. It is stated on apparently good authority that the Mail and Empire people are willing that the paper should be known as the Empire-Mail. The Government at Ottawa is said to be doing its best to further the union, and Mr. C. W. Bunting will in the event of its consummation, be provided for, either in the service of the journal or in the service of the country. Mr. David Creighton, the managing director of the Empire, will not suffer by the change if it should take place. He has strengthened himself immensely by the good, hard work he has done amid overwhelming difficulties and his position is secure.

"The Globe fire has created an opportunity for a union on fair terms that may never occur again. The Globe needs a home, and the Mail building would suit it admirably. The Globe needs an entire outfit, and in the event of union between the Empire and Mail, the Mail will have an outfit which its directors would not be unwilling to sell. Only those on the inside can say how the negotiations will result, but negotiations are in progress looking towards a union of the two papers under the name of the Empire-Mail, and for the purchase of the Mail's plant by the Globe and the Globe's occupation of the Mail building."

AGAINST HON. MR. HARCOURT.

North Perth, West Wellington and West Durham are the only petitions against Conservative local members that have not been dropped.

It was almost understood that no proceedings would be taken against Hon. Richard Harcourt, but a prominent Conservative said today that the local Conservatives had determined to fight the hon. gentleman to the last ditch.

RATES WILL BE ADVANCED.

For two hours this morning a committee of the Board of Underwriters discussed the advisability of recommending the Board to immediately advance the rates. The feeling among the members is that an advance is the only manner in which they can make the corporation buy steam fire engines.

A general meeting was held this afternoon, when it is understood the committee's report will be presented. This, it is said, recommends an advance of 30 per cent. on buildings of four stories and over.

DEAD IN THE CELLAR.

Mr. Robert Corlett, a resident of Toronto for a large number of years, died suddenly at the residence of his son, Edmund, [illegible] Ontario street, yesterday. Mr. Corlett, Jr., went down the cellar about 3 o'clock to attend the furnace when he was startled to find his father lying in the coal bin. The old gentleman was taken upstairs, and Dr. Norman Allen was summoned. The deceased had been dead for some minutes before he was found. Dr. Allen said heart disease was the cause of death.

BRITAIN STORM SWEPT.

MANY VESSELS STRANDED AND MUCH LOSS OF LIFE.

Several Vessels Ashore on the Coast of Wales—A Snow Blizzard Raging Over South Devonshire—Snowdrifts Twelve Feet Deep.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A terrible gale accompanied by a heavy snowstorm, is raging over South Devonshire. On the Dartmoor tableland the snow is several feet deep.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 14.—Over 12 steamers have sought refuge here from the fierce gale which is blowing. A terribly heavy sea is running outside the harbor and the shore is strewn with wreckage.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A terrific gale accompanied by a heavy snowfall, prevailed throughout the country Saturday night. The cold was intense, the snowdrifts in some places were 12 feet deep.

The Cunard line steamer Lucania, from Liverpool yesterday for New York, arrived at Queenstown three and a half hours late. Her boatswain's mate broke his leg and was landed at Queenstown, and taken to a hospital. Several vessels are ashore on the coast of Wales.

The steamer Paradox went ashore at the mouth of the River Tay.

The wind has dropped in East Scotland, but the snowfall continues. Vessels are putting into the roadsteads for shelter.

The schooner Halcay capsized today off North Sunderland Point and all her crew were drowned.

Six vessels are ashore near Beaumaris, Anglesey, North Wales.

A coal laden brig stranded at daybreak this morning at Southwold, a town in Suffolk, on the North Sea. Her crew, with the exception of one man, were rescued by a lifeboat. Two of them died after getting ashore.

The Italian barque Columba was wrecked near Grimsby. She had a crew of nine aboard, all of whom were drowned. Another vessel in the Humber foundered and all hands were lost before assistance could reach them. Nothing was found to establish the identity of the vessel.

MASONIC TEMPLE BURNED.

The Craftsmen of St. Kits Lose Heavily by Fire—Public Library in Same Building.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 14.—The Masonic Temple situated on Ontario street was totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock this morning. The ground floor of the building was occupied as a business college, the public free library on the second floor, and by St. George, Maple Leaf and Temple lodges on the third floor. The Masons lost their jewels, regalia, furniture, books, etc. The public library lost all their books. The business college lost everything. The Masonic Temple was one of the finest buildings of its kind in the Dominion. It was three stories high, with tower, iron front and altogether an imposing looking structure.

Insurance on Masonic Temple as follows—$6,000 in Commercial Union, $2,000 in Royal, $2,200 in London.

Fatal Runaway Accident.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. Jan. 14.—Miss Ellie Wright, of Allanburg, when returning to her home on Saturday her horse ran away pitching her head foremost to the ground and fracturing her skull. She died on Sunday.

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 15 1895.

Good morning!

It seems odd when you think of it. A four days have gone past without another million fire in Toronto.

It is rumored that the fleet of Dominion liners hitherto sailing between Liverpool and Canada, which have been purchased by Messrs. Richards, Mills and Co., will next season be engaged in the Manchester Transatlantic cattle trade, via the Ship Canal.

The streets of Toronto are sprinkled by a trolley street car. The city contracts with the street car company to sprinkle the streets, and with the trolley tank the company does it for 65 cents a mile a year. In the hot weather the principal streets are sprinkled every thirty minutes.

The financial troubles in Newfoundland are having their natural results in riots with the police and disturbances that may lead to promiscuous bloodshed, and the unfortunate thing about it all is that the end is not yet. It will be a long while before prosperity returns to Newfoundland, and until that glad time comes there is bound to be many a disturbance. It is to be hoped that there will be no blood spilling before the troubles are over.

In the United States, during the year 1894, 9,800 murders were committed against 6,615 in 1893. The legal executions during the year were only 132, or six more than in the previous year, and there were 190 lynchings, or nearly 50 per cent. more than the legal executions. The number of suicides during the year was 4,912. Millennialists who have studied the subject say that the world must grow worse before the millennium comes.

The "pound party" is a novel way of providing for the poor, while promoting wholesome enjoyment. At one of these gatherings each guest is to bring a pound of something, costing more than the minimum amount, and the packages so contributed are to be auctioned by three gentlemen in turn, who will compete for a prize to be given to the one whose cash receipts are the largest. Prizes will also be given for the largest price paid for any one package and for the most original pound. After the auction the company will be entertained with vocal music.

The import of potatoes from Europe to New York this year has been 11,000 sacks. Last year 59,000 sacks were brought over. The Scotch potatoes are preferred. Large shipments of onions have been received at New York from Germany, but are in such a bad condition that one lot of 600 sacks was condemned, and this will terminate the onion importation for the season. The demand for lemons is a prominent feature in the fruit trade, and 80,000 boxes are expected this week without a break in prices.

THE GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

We agree with our esteemed contemporary in the statement that if there is one thing more than another that the Conservative party is in urgent need of just now it is new blood, and the bright young Conservative: with political aspirations should get themselves ready to take a hand in the game when the cards are dealt for the coming elections. Death has made such sad havoc in Conservative ranks of late, and is so likely to make more at no distant time, that it is obvious that there must be a great many important changes in the personnel of the leaders of the party when the new Parliament meets. It is only stating a generally recognized fact to say that there is not one man on the Conservative side of the House of Commons who is of really conspicuous ability.

The time is therefore ripe for the young man. This is his golden opportunity and if he be wise he will take it at its flood. Whether the Conservatives carry the country at the next elections or whether they do not, they must have fresh material. If they carry the country they will want promising young men in the House to get in training for cabinet positions. If the fortunes of war go against them they will want fighters and leaders for the next contest. However the country may go next year, the new Parliament, so far as Conservative side is concerned, will be a battle of wits, giving the clever fellows a glorious chance to get to the front.

Mr. Stevenson, the present member for West Peterborough, should be elevated to the Senate without delay, so as to make room for a young man of vigour and ability. Mr. Stevenson has done much for the party in the past, and his friends should not be obliged to destroy their knuckels hammering on the door of the Senate for admittance.

Peterborough Conservatives, with Mr. Stevenson in the Senate, ought to nominate Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, who has both character and brains to make his mark. At no time in the history of the party in this place has it stood in more need of the very best man for the position of candidate. Indeed, it will require this to win, for there is no denying the fact that the chances are not so good as they were on the last occasion. This applies with equal force to East Peterborough, as well as several other constituencies in the midland counties.

THE MANITOBA SCHOOL CASE.

Should the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decide in favor of the right of the Manitoba minority to invoke the aid of the Federal Government against the local school law after having previously decided that the provincial act was within the powers granted to Manitoba and in no sense infringed any right which the Roman Catholics had by law or by practice at the time of the establishment of the province, there will be, indeed, no inconsistency between the two judgmnets, but we shall have another of those cases in weich the question of the conflicting jurisdictions of province and Dominion have seemed to be made a shuttlecock in the hands of the courts. One former instance of the same kind which will be in everybody's mind is that of the power to restrict the sale of liquors, several test cases being required before the exact limits of each government were precisely definite.

Of course there is no help for such things. A constitution being a system of rules intended for application in highly complicated circumstances must necessarily depend upon the legal tribunals for its interpretation, and this interpretation cannot in any one action be made so complete as to furnish an exposition of all the problems that may arise. The courts are obliged to confine themselves to the decision of such points as are brought before them.

In the United States a similar experience followed the adoption of their written constitution. The Supreme Court, led by Chief Justice Marshall, in a long series of decisions has given to that document the decree of certainty which now prevails. Of Chief Justice Marshall it may be said that he occupies as high a place as Jefferson himself in the legal and constitutional annals of the country; for the one by judicial interpretation is responsible for almost as much of the substance of the constitution as the other is by having written the Declaration of Independence.

WOMEN PLAYING POKER.

A GAMBLING RESORT WHERE THIS IS DONE IN OTTAWA.

Philadelphia Wants a Boodle Investigation—Nervy Burglars in Brantford—Big Storms in Europe.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—The discovery of a poker club in a fashionable quarter of this city would have attracted little attention had it not become known that the club is composed of women as well as men, who are classed among the leaders in Ottawa's society.

The fact first leaked out through a prominent member of the Civil Service having to mortgage his house to pay for his wife's losses at the gambling table.

Whiskey and water appears to have been the favorite beverage at the club. Some husbands of the women who have membership at this fashionable Monte Carlo have been ignorant of what was going on, a sewing circle or church guild accounting for their wives' absence during the evening they were at play.

WANT A BOODLE INQUIRY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A special from Philadelphia to the Times says: The people in this town, aroused as they have seldom been aroused before, to the corruption in the city government, are crying for a Lexow Investigating Committee. There are a thousand rumors in the air of movements looking to an investigation. Whichever way the people turn there are signs of rottenness and corruption. The political events of the last two days have simply created in everybody a feverish desire to get right down to the roots of what it is that controls the city.

Yesterday it was announced that James Breen, a reputable man, and the president of a telephone company, had prepared an affidavit in which he said that $262,000 worth of stock of a certain telephone company had been distributed to purchase the passage of blanket franchise through the councils. Mr. Breen said today that if he were put under oath in the witness chair by a committee appointed to either by the councils of the courts, or the state legislatures, he would give further details.

BIG STORMS IN EUROPE.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 12.—Over twelve steamers have sought refuge here from the fierce gale which is blowing. A terribly heavy sea is running outside the harbor and the shore is strewn with wreckage.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—A terrific gale, accompanied by a heavy snow storm, is raging over South Devonshire. On the Dartmoor tableland the snow is several feet deep.

NERVY BURGLARS.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 12.—The house of Geo. Williams, one mile west of Burford village, was entered by three burglars last night.

Williams came home and found the intruders. He was told at the point of a revolver that he was not running the house at the moment.

He gave the alarm, and some neighbors coming to the rescue, the thieves were driven off.

The police are on their track.

DOCTORS TESTIFY.

Hendershott's Wounds Described in Court—The Middlemarch Murder.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 12.—The preliminary trial of the Hendershott case was resumed yesterday, and a great many witnesses were examined. Miss Edith Welter, who was engaged to be married to W. H. Hendershott, the dead man, said that he told her his $11,000 insurance was to be made over to her after their marriage. After the body was discovered William Welter drove her to St. Thomas. On the way she asked him if he would be in the city again on a certain day.

He said, "Yes, if I'm not in gaol."

She answered, "There's no danger of that."

He replied, "I don't know what they'll do. I left Will Hendershott lying in a pool of blood, and there was time for some one to scatter the blood around."

She then said, "If the worst comes to the worst have Osler. I don't think you did it, but if you did I could see you hanged." And he answered, "I suppose you could."

Dr. Frank O. Lawrence, of this city, read the report of the post mortem examination of the body of deceased made by him, at which four other physicians were present. The edges of many wounds were clear cut and well defined. The doctor advanced the opinion that these were not caused by the tree; an axe could have produced them.

Dr. T. W. Duncombe thought the head might have been struck by the tree without completely crushing it, if the earth beneath was very soft but the wounds could nearly all have been caused by some blunt instrument.

In the opinion of Dr. E. W. Gustin, the coroner, an accident could not possibly produce all the cuts, although it might cause some of them. The larger portion of them, he had no doubt, were caused by some instrument, such as an axe.

Carnegie Men to Unite.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 12.—There is much excitement among the workers at the Carnegie works here. A mass meeting has been called for Sunday morning for the purpose, it is said, of forming a labor union among the men. President Garland and Vice President Carnegie of the amalgamated association will address the meeting, which gives promise of being largely attended. Last night 1,000 hand bills were circulated among the men in the mill announcing the meeting. Today's developments will be anxiously awaited by all concerned.

HARRY GREEN'S WAY

HE PLAYED HIS FAVORITE GAME ON MR. SMITH OF CHICAGO.

Four Aces Will Always Beat Four Kings, but In This Case There Was Another Hand, Held by an "Outsider," That Was In at the Showdown.

Do you know how to play poker? If you do and chance to meet an old man who looks like a stockman from Montana, with money to burn, just looking for a good time, don't. If you do, you will be sorry.

A well known business man, who at one time kept a furniture store on State street and has retired from business, paid $1,400 for his experience with the Montana stockman.

As every one knows the furniture man, he may as well be called Smith. Mr. Smith, since he is not engaged actively in business, has been spending a share of his time in a down town bucket shop every day. One morning while Mr. Smith was watching the market and listening to the voice of the caller a stranger who "happened" to sit next him engaged him in conversation.

"Wheat is dull today, isn't it?" said the stranger.

"Yes," drawled Mr. Smith.

The ice had been broken, and the stranger, whose appearance indicated that he was a westerner, became communicative. He told Mr. Smith he had just come from Montana and was taking a little rest. He declared he had enough money to have some fun and pulled a big roll of fifties and hundreds out of his pocket to prove it.

"By gosh, I will have a good time, and if I don't it won't be no fault o' mine," said the Montana man as he got up to take a walk about the room.

Mr. Smith paid little attention to the incident until a man who had just entered and was leaning against the wall, and who had seen the stockman display his money, stepped up to him. He asked Mr. Smith if he knew the "old fellow." Mr. Smith said he did not, but the man had told him he was from Montana and had a good deal of money.

"Yes, I saw it," said stranger No. 2. "And do you know I think I could get it if we could get him into a poker game?"

After considerable persuasion Mr. Smith condescended to ask the stockman if he would play a little poker.

"Well, I don't mind," said the stockman, and arrangements were made to play in a down town hotel in the evening.

In the meantime the stranger had a quiet talk with Mr. Smith. He told him he was a professional gambler and knew how to "fix" the cards. They were to get the old man's money and divide the spoils. The plan was as follows: A deck was to be fixed up in which were two hands. Mr. Smith was to get four aces and the stockman four kings. The hands were to be sprung in the stockman's own deal. Stranger No. 2 fixed the cards and said: "Now, you keep the cards on your lap, and when it is the granger's deal I will attract his attention when he gives the cards to you to cut, and at that moment you substitute this deck for the one he hands you. But we must have another man. We can't play three handed."

Mr. Smith knew a great many men, he said, but they were all business men, and all of them were too busy to play. At the stranger's suggestion they started out together to look for the fourth man. They dropped into the Saratoga hotel, and stranger No. 2 saw a man who appeared much bored sitting near the window.

"Perhaps he will play. Shall I ask him?"

"Go ahead," said Mr. Smith.

Stranger No. 3 said he played poker, but not for money or with strangers.

No. 2 produced the card of an Iowa firm. "That's my card," said he.

"You're all right, then," said the stranger.

Mr. Smith then said, "I'm Mr. Smith, and every one around here knows me."

The stranger was still a little shy, but finally yielded to Mr. Smith's persuasions and agreed to sit in the game. The stockman was found in the barroom of the hotel. The quartet went around to a Monroe street hotel, and the game began.

The game dragged along for awhile without incident. After an hour or so it came the stockman's deal. He shuffled the cards clumsily and handed them to Mr. Smith to cut. At that moment the stockman was seized with a fit of "sneezing," and stranger No. 2 gave Mr. Smith a signal to run in the "cold deck." He did it successfully. In the deal Mr. Smith got four aces, according to programme. He made a good bet, and the stockman, as he expected, raised him handsomely. But to Mr. Smith's surprise and gratification the Saratoga hotel stranger also staid. No. 2 dropped out, of course.

He bet with confidence, and so did the stockman, and, to Mr. Smith's continued delight, the stranger kept coming in. He didn't raise any bets, but just staid.

The betting was lively and lasted until Mr. Smith came to the end of his pile and had $1,400 on the table. He was kicking because he didn't have more, but had to call for a show.

"Well, I am sorry for you, my friend," said the stockman, "but I have four big kings," and he started to rake in the pot.

"You needn't feel sorry, old man," exclaimed Mr. Smith triumphantly. "I have four aces. The money is mine. Did you think I was bluffing?" and he started to grab the money and checks.

"Hold on, hold on!" spoke up No. 3, "Ain't I in this? I've got a straight flush."

It was like a voice from the tombs to Mr. Smith, and the game broke up.

An adjournment was taken to the bar, but the straight flush man and the stockman got away as quickly as possible, leaving Mr. Smith and his friend. His friend proceeded to give Mr. Smith a terrible roasting.

"Confound you," said he, "I thought you said you knew how to play poker. You've made a nice mess of it. Here we are broke, and the makeshift that we picked up gets all the money. We might just as well have had all that stockman's money and the other fellow's too!"

Mr. Smith's friend talked in this strain until Mr. Smith was convinced that he was a double distilled idiot and knew nothing about the noble American game. Then Mr. Smith's friend bade him a sorrowful and indignant good night and left, leaving him to wonder how the outsider got the straight flush.

If Mr. Smith had only known that the stockman was Harry Green, one of the smoothest confidence men and gamblers in the world, all would have been different. He has played that same kind of a game for 20 years and in that time has caught many a fish. Stranger No. 2 was his Baltimore partner, Fred Porter. He and Harry Green made barrels of money years ago on the big Atlantic liners, and stranger No. 3 was a well known Chicago gambler who came in for a share of the "divvy."—Chicago Tribune.

NOT THE SAME GIRL.

But She "Was Glad" Time Hadn't Made Any Changes In Her.

The following anecdote has both a comical and pathetic side. What a long time 50 years is in the life of a human being! And how far apart, how unlike in tastes, feelings, opinions and habits men and women can become who in childhood slept under the same roof, attended the same school and dreamed of nothing but of being friends forever! A gentleman whose "courtly manners" were mentioned in all the newspapers when he died, a few years after this incident, fancied in his old age that he wished to see his boyhood friends and most of all the fair young girl whose love long years before he almost, but not quite, had dared to ask.

He forgot country manners and called at half past 11 in the forenoon. He was asked to walk "right out into the kitchen," as there was no fire anywhere else.

His early admiration stood before him in a worn calico dress, no collar and a wide and not faultlessly clean apron. Her half combed grizzly hair was tucked under a rusty black lace cap trimmed with faded purple ribbon. She had no teeth, and a huge pair of silver bowed spectacles were pushed up on her brown, wrinkled forehead.

Fifty-two years before they had parted with a kiss, and he had been intending to meet her with one, and thus bridge the chasm of years, but he changed his mind when through his gold bowed glasses he took in the picture before him.

Wiping her hand on her apron, she gave him a hearty handshake and bade him "sit right down," adding that they were "killing hogs and trying up lard," but if he would "stay to dinner" she would have "a fire put in the front room."

Of course he declined the invitation, and for his own comfort as well as for his convenience he determined to make his call short. Still he must say something complimentary before leaving, but what could he say?

Just then the lard boiled over, and with a shrill cry to her daughter to "come quick" the woman jumped up and caught hold of the kettle. The smoke and perfume were in themselves far from agreeable, but they were grateful to the caller, as they gave him a chance for the desired compliment.

"Your step has lost none of its elasticity since the evening we sauntered together along the banks of the R," he said, "while this"—holding out his gold headed cane,—"is needed to support mine."

"Yes," answered the woman, "I'm as spry as a kitten, and I have thought ever since you've been here that I was glad enough time hadn't changed me as it has you."—Youth's Companion.

COOKS AND THEIR DRINKS.

Why the Boss of the Kitchen Goes on an Occasional Spree.

"You ask if she is a drinking woman, ma'am?" said the proprietor of a restaurant to a lady who had inquired about the character of a cook. "Why, yes, to be sure, she has her sprees, but she always sobers up enough to do her work well. I gave her a recommendation as a first class cook, and I didn't think it necessary to say anything about her drinking, for they nearly all drink. They need it to keep themselves up, because they swallow so much hot air. We give them spirits on principle, and other houses do the same."

Various reasons have been given for the intemperance of this class. It is said to be due to the tasting of sauces, etc., flavored with spirits, to the lack of appetite which the constant sight and odor of cooking produce, and the consequent necessity for stimulants to give strength to continue work, or to the exhaustion of the system by the high temperature, which produces a craving for spirits. Whatever the cause, it is pitiable to know that many contract habits that blight their lives and entail a miserable old age.

Women who cook for small families and whose work is not exhausting are not specially prone to the excessive use of stimulants. The trouble is with those who in hotels, restaurants, large boarding houses, etc., are in the kitchen and over the stove from morning to night. Undoubtedly there are temperate women among these, but many are intemperate.—New York Tribune.

Netting Malay Tapirs.

Colonel Charles B. Hicks has arrived in this city after spending two years in the orient. The colonel has been hunting tigers and wild boars with the rajah of Jodpour, and has also been pursuing tapirs in the Malay peninsula. He said:

"In starting out after tapirs we take a flat bottomed boat, with a bamboo house on it, lights in the stern and equipped with a crew of natives. Thus provided the hunter sails up the river. Now, there is a leaf of a peculiar tree in Malay, which, if burned, emits an odor which can be smelled for miles and miles. The smell draws the tapirs. So no tapir hunter omits to keep a supply of these leaves.

"We were supplied with nets, and whenever a tapir was caught in a net we had a lively time. The tapir would flounder and fight. It took the best skill of the natives to hold him till he could be towed to land and secured. However, the natives such as we employed had had so much experience that they managed the work well.

"If we ever came unexpectedly upon old and young tapirs together, the old ones would immediately kill their young to prevent their capture."—San Francisco Examiner.

Keep the Feet Warm.

It is the great secret of health, I firmly believe, to keep one's feet warm and dry and then not to coddle oneself otherwise. So far as I have been able to observe, the feet require different treatment from all the rest of the body. Woolen is good for the feet, but beware of it elsewhere. Father Kneipp is undoubtedly right in forbidding flannel next the skin in the form of underclothing. It makes most people tender and gives some of them the [illegible]. But the writer has seen no people who have adopted woolen stockings who have not been glad of them, all this on the supposition, of course, that people do wear shoes, for if they could discard them utterly and go barefooted, as they do in Worishofen, no doubt that would be better still.—Boston Transcript.

Buried In Her Best Bonnet.

Being buried in a sealskin sack is not half so droll as the Boston woman ordering she should wear a [illegible] particularly becoming bonnet on her last journey, an order, too, that was religiously carried out by her family when the time came for burial.—Boston Journal.

A Wondrous Story

CAN BE VOUCHED FOR BY SCORES OF HECKSTON PEOPLE

Terrible Condition of Mr. John Irvine

FRIENDS EXPECTED HIM TO DIE

Medical Men did not Understand His Case.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND MADE A PERMANENT CURE

A wonderful story comes from Heckston, Ont. It is full of comfort, assurance and glad, welcome news for the sick and those whom physicians cannot cure.

Mr John Irvine, of Heckston, Grenville Co., Ont., writes as follows:—

"Three years ago I had a severe attack of "la grippe," which left me in a very weak and debilitated condition. The next autumn I had another attack which left me in a very bad state. My health was nearly wrecked. I had no strength, and felt tired all the time. I was so weak that my legs would not support my body, and I have often fallen to the ground when trying to attend to my work both in the field and in my barn, and would be compelled to lie wherever I had fallen, until I could muster sufficient strength to rise.

My appetite was all gone, and when I would try to eat in order to gain strength, I would suffer untold misery for hours. It seemed to me that I was slowly starving to death.

I tried different doctors, but did not derive any benefit from their treatment. My friends thought I was going to die, and I verily believe I would have died had I not tried your Paine's Celery Compound. I bought six bottles, and can conscientiously say I received more benefit from it than I ever dreamed of; it was worth more to me than one hundred dollars worth of medicines from the doctors. I began to improve in health before I had finished the first bottle; and to-day I am completely restored to health. I can do as good a day's work as I ever could, can now eat any kind of food without experiencing trouble afterward, and can sleep as well as when I was a boy.

"I have not had to use any of the Compound for months, which convinces me that the cure is permanent. I feel it my duty to let every sufferer know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me, and it seems impossible for me to say all I should in its favor. My wife, who has been a sufferer for years with chronic rheumatism, was greatly benefitted by the use of your medicine. I send you this testimony unsolicited."

A COLD WAVE.

It is Coming This Way from the West—Chicago Gets a Touch of It—The Mercury Falling Rapidly—Lives Lost in Omaha.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Reports from Iowa, Illinois and the northwest show that the mercury is from 10 to 15 degrees below zero. A heavy snowstorm prevails in Northern Michigan and Wisconsin, which will be of great benefit to lumbermen.

OMAHA, Jan. 12.—The Missouri Valley was swept yesterday by a cold wave of unusual severity. A repetition of the blizzard of seven years ago, in which many lives were lost, is feared. The wind reached a velocity of 30 miles an hour last night, accompanied by snow in some sections. There will probably be great suffering among the destitute people in Western Nebraska.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 12.—One of the most remarkable and sudden declines of the mercury occurred here yesterday, a change of 30 degrees being recorded. This morning at nine the thermometer registered 10 degrees below zero.

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 12.—Snow began to fall shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon and has been coming down ever since, there being now six inches of snow on the ground. The thermometer registers 6 below zero.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The thermometer here registers 10 degrees below zero. A brisk wind and a dense fog of smoke add to the discomfort. A fine dry snow is falling this morning.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Jan. 12.—A heavy snow storm traversed the upper peninsula from west to east yesterday and lumbermen are feeling much more cheerful.

The promised cold wave is on the way and tonight will see a zero temperature. The ring of frost is closing in on Toronto rapidly and the furs that were soaked at the Thursday night fire will just about be dry in time to do service tomorrow.

A ROSETTED COMMUNITY.

An English Parliamentary Election as It Was In the Olden Times.

At the time of which I write borough elections were carried on with those characteristics which have been graphically described by Dickens in his familiar account of the election in the little "borough of Eatanswill" as well as by Mr. Samuel Warren in the return of Sir Tittlebat Titmouse by the worthy and independent electors of Yatton.

In the Ludlow election there were three candidates, one Henry Clive, or "Warming Pan Clive," as he was called, being put forward by the Clive family to keep the place "warm" for a younger member not yet of age. "Warming Pan Clive" was a perfectly unknown individual, but he came before the people of Ludlow with all the best qualities and characteristics of a country gentleman, and with—what was of more consequence to the free and independent electors of this ancient borough—a purse full of money supplied for election contingencies by Earl Powis of Powis castle and the Hon. Mr. Clive of Oakly park. The second Tory candidate was Lord William Paulet, a younger son of the Earl of Winchester. Lord Paulet was unknown to the electors of Ludlow. He was deaf in the left ear and had the unenviable reputation of being a kleptomaniac. His only claim to the "vote and interest" of the Ludlow people was the fact that he was a friend of the Clives and had been sent to secure their vote by the Tory committee of the Carlton club. Their opponent was a strong Whig, Colonel Salway, whose family were highly respected townspeople, and who was himself a colonel in the British army.

In those days electioneering candidates adopted certain colors—for Clive scarlet and purple, crimson for Paulet, sky blue and yellow for Salway. Every draper and mercer in the town, according to his party, was commissioned to supply, free of charge, any number of rosettes at the expense of the candidate, and during the contest there was not a man, woman, child or baby of the 5,000 individuals who constituted the town and borough of Ludlow who did not display the colors of their respective party.—Evan Stanton in Home and Country.

Swore Himself In.

General Sir Evelyn Wood, in his reminiscences of the Crimean in 1854 and 1894, tells a story of a fighting general who, during the conflict was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible, his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from 'the army in Flanders,'" which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command, and her majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, your majesty,' was the apt reply; 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"—Westminster Gazette.

Motherly Love.

"Isn't it horrid," said the Circassian beauty, "to think of the fat lady wedding the ossified man so soon after her first husband's demise?"

"Yes, I know," replied the two headed girl, "but she says that the baby has taken a fancy to cutting his teeth on him."—Indianapolis Journal.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile frequently travels long distances by sea. It has been seen 1,000 miles from from land, and it is possible that these sea going crocodiles have given rise to sea serpent stories.

When asked for his married experience, La Bruyere replied, "Few wives are so perfect that they do not give their husbands cause at least once a day to repent of matrimony."

CHINESE SLAUGHTERED.

Two Hundred Killed and 150 Taken Prisoners at Kai Ping.

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 12.—Despatches received here from Kin Chow this morning say that Japanese scouts report that a large force of Chinese are moving down to support the Kai Ping force which has retired towards New Chwang.

At Kai Ping the Chinese numbered 3,000 men and they had 12 guns. About 200 Chinese were killed. The number of wounded Chinese is not known. About 120 prisoners were taken. The Japanese casualties are not stated.

WILL BE MORE DIRECT

At the Suggestion of the C. P. R. the C. N. & P. Changes its Route.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the C. N. & P. Railway, a letter was read from Sir William Van Horne suggesting that the route to the eastern terminus be changed, so as to take a more direct course east to the C. P. R. By carrying out this suggestion the line would be shortened something like three miles, and in a course almost parallel with the C. & O.

This suggestion coming from the C.P.R. people is considered of great importance by those thoroughly acquainted with the new road, and is said to be a strong indication that the C.P.R. is actually becoming interested. Some time ago it was frequently stated that in due time the C. P. R. would use the new railway as a part of their main line from Montreal to Toronto and this last move certainly points that way.

The directors evidently have the same idea, and at the meeting on Tuesday appointed a committee composed of Mr. Hector Cameron, Mr. George Guillet and Mr. R. Mulholland, with Mr. Riddell, the solicitor for the Company, to close the business with Mr. Bowen and the C. P. R. The affairs of the Company are now so well arranged that it is not thought necessary to call the directors together again until the check for the $10,000 is in the hands of the treasurer.

Street Railway Men's Strike in Brooklyn Inaugurate this Morning.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 14.—The trolley car strike began when the last night car was housed, which was shortly before 4 o'clock this morning. Not a single day car is running on any road in Brooklyn, with one exception—the Coney Island and Brooklyn.

The elevated trains, although the service has been nearly doubled, are unable to carry the people, and during the working hours this morning these cars were crowded to suffocation.

When the electricians employed in the four power houses in the city went to take their night shift, at 6 p.m. last night, they were asked by the foremen if they would be willing to take places on the cars as motormen and conductors this morning. To a man they replied "No." Then they were told there was no more work for them. This, the first act in the lockout, threw some 900 men out.

The strike is the greatest Brooklyn has ever seen since Master Workman Martin Connelly's order was at once observed by 6,000 men. Plenty of men—the Company says 2,000—applied at the City Railway Company's office this morning for work. They said they would take out cars if there were good protection. The Company at once applied to the police for protection. If the police cannot give it, the Federal Marshal and the United States troops will be called on.

The railway companies have contracts to carry mail. If these cars are interfered with, the marshals and troops, the companies say, will co-operate with the police.

All the police reserves are on duty. The companies involved in the strike are the Brooklyn Heights Traction Company, one of the largest railroad companies in the east; the Atlantic Avenue Railroad Company, which is now the Long Island Traction Company, and the Brooklyn and Newton Railway Company. Over 600 miles of trolley lines are tied up by the strike.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

It is Reeve Pearce.

The recount for the Reeveship of the Norwood election took place yesterday before His Honor Judge Weller. The result was a confirmation of the first returns which gave Mr. Pearce a majority of 3 votes over Mr. John Finlay.

The Citizens Object.

A Frenchman has started a pool room in Ashburnham. The young lads of the village have been frequenting it to such an extent that the good people are incensed, and have largely signed a petition to the council to remove the evil.

A Church Burned

The pretty little Presbyterian church at Madoc was burned to the ground early on Monday morning and is now a total loss. The building was valued at $10,000. There was an insurance of $6,000. A resident who attended the fire, Alexander Morrice by name, had his leg badly broken by falling timber.

The Rig Upset.

The delivery sleigh belonging to the Metropolitan grocery store was upset at the corner of Aylmer and Rubidge streets last night. The driver was dumped in the snow, but not injured. The horses broke loose from the sleigh and ran quite a distance, dragging several feet of the tongue of the sleigh which was broken off by the upsetting.

Mark Your Seats.

Secure your seats now for the event of the season. Plan of hall and reserved seats for the Burns Anniversary Concert to be held in the Opera House on Wednesday evening, January 23rd, now open at the Peterborough Bookstore. Grand special engagement of five artists of established reputation in a double programme of high order, under auspices of St. Andrew's Society.

Curler's Excursion.

The Peterborough curling club will hold its annual excursion to Toronto this year on January 23rd. A strong team numbering between 40 and 50 will represent the curling prowess of this section on Toronto ice. The rates have not yet been fixed but will be announced later on, and will be low enough to induce a large number of citizens to take advantage of the trip to visit the Queen City.

The Franchise Again.

A Committee of the Whole Council met in the clerk's office last night and again discussed the conditions which the town will surround the granting of the franchise to the new power company. A report was drafted to be submitted at the next council meeting, which will be held towards the end of the week. The statutory meeting of the new council will be held at 11 o'clock next Monday morning with a regular meeting that night.

Seven Different People.

Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Kingston, lectured in the George street church, last night, on "Seven Different People, of Whom You Are One." The seven different people, as named by the Kingston divine, were the prodigal, crank, workingman, slave of liquor, politician, woman of today and Christian. During the evening Mr. A. E. Dixon presented the report of the school, which showed the number of pupils on the roll to have been 869. The statement of the treasurer, Mr. J. S. Knapman, was satisfactory, and the receipts exceeded the expenditure by over $169.

The Business World.

The general stock of A. J. Durocher, Belle River, has been sold to J. L. Beaumer & Co. at 50 cents on the dollar. Louis Vengauten's jewelry stock at Chatham will be sold by the bailiff on Wednesday. S. E. Stephenson, jeweller, of Elora, is in financial difficulties. A chattel mortgage against the hotel property of Noah Liebler, Hanover, has been foreclosed. Photographer Barber, of Listowel, is offering to compromise at 25 cents on the dollar. Crozier & Fleming, general storekeepers at Orangeville, are offering to compromise. L. Tallifer, dry goods, etc., Ottawa, is effecting a compromise at 70 cents on the dollar. MacEwan & Co., general storekeepers, of Sudbury, have compromised with their creditors.

Furniture.

Nearly every family needs a little additional furniture every year, and it is an advantage to know where you can get what you want and know that you are getting value. A. Clegg has just what you need. He is buying for you every day. Always looking for best values for you, he knows that goods well bought are half sold. If you need furniture you cannot afford to buy until you have seen his stock and learned his prices. Furniture of all grades: These good kitchen chairs for $1; a good hardwood bed for $3; a good hardwood bedroom suite, oak finish, for $12, etc., etc. Remember the place—427 George street.

SCHOOL INSPECTOR GARVIN.

The Facts Regarding His Trip to North Simcoe Riding.

School Inspector J. W. Garvin has been placed in a false light before the citizens of Peterborough, and the province as well, by an incorrect and biased report published in a Toronto daily, of a political meeting which he attended in North Simcoe. In all fairness to Mr. Garvin it is right that certain facts should be made known relative to his visit to North Simcoe, in order that his position may be seen in its true light.

Inspector Garvin was made the subject of an outrageous attack by the Barrie Advance, a journal for which all clean newspapers will hereafter blush. That paper assailed Mr. Garvin without just cause, violently and scurrilously, using language unfit for the columns of a respectable newspaper. Mr. Garvin was, grossly, misrepresented and maligned. He was portrayed as a man unworthy of either the confidence or respect of the people. The cause of all this was due to the fact that Mr. Garvin held political opinions at variance with those of the editor of the Advance.

Mr. Garvin wrote a letter to the Advance refuting the glaring falsehoods made and defining his true position. He demanded nothing but a right that would have been conceded by any fair newspaper, when he asked that this letter be published. However, its publication was refused—and used, or portions of it, for the purpose of further misrepresenting the School Inspector.

Mr. Garvin attended the recent political meeting in North Simcoe to set himself right before the people of that section in whose midst he was born and brought up, and to refute the libelous statements of the Advance. He was well received by the large assemblage, was given a most patient hearing, and made a forcible and eloquent speech.

Inspector Garvin did not require the permission of the Board of Education to leave town for a few days. It is ridiculous to presume that a gentleman occupying his position should have to ask leave of absence for such a short period. During his regime in Peterborough school work, Mr. Garvin has been absent from his duties but three days, and two of those were spent in attendance upon a convention. In no place in Ontario is a School Inspector required or expected to ask for leave of absence. The School Inspector has devoted thirty Saturdays to school work since he assumed the position in Peterborough, and in the face of this, any complaint on account of a couple of days devoted to his personal affairs, would be most ungenerous and paltry, and beneath the dignity of the Board of Education.

A JUST SENTENCE.

Thomas Ratford, a Depraved Character, Gets Six Months in Goal.

Thomas Ratford was sentenced to six months in goal in the Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of vagrancy. The case was one brought to the attention of the police by the Children's Aid Society through its agent, Mr. Miller, who displayed great energy and commendable zeal in ridding the town of a man of Ratford's depraved nature.

Ratford, according to his own story, has been living with a family named Kearns on Patterson street since last June, and during that time paid little or nothing for his board. The Kearns family consists of mother and father and six small children. The father is a cripple, capable of earning very little and not enough to support the family. Application was made to the town relief officer for food and fuel. Upon investigation the fact that Ratford was living with this family, literally taking the food out of the children's mouths, was discovered. The relief officer refused assistance until Ratford left the place.

The investigation prosecuted by the Children's Aid Society revealed a shocking state of affairs. Ratford, it seems, stayed at the place against the will of Kearns, whose wife evidently had "the say" in the miserable home. The Society's agent testified that there was only one bed in the house. Ratford said there were two. He and the two little boys and the father occupied one, and the mother and the three little girls the other. Neighbors testified that ever since Ratford had entered the house there had been frequent unseemly rackets at night, until the place became generally known as disreputable.

It came out in evidence that Ratford on one occasion was ordered to leave the house by Kearns, and he did so living for several days around the locks. He admitted that Mrs. Kearns brought him his meals while there.

A more depraved character has not been in the police dock from some time. The six months' sentence was none too harsh for a person of Ratford's depraved nature.

LINDSAY SCORCHED.

The Business Portion Again Visited by Flames.

At 3.30 Sunday morning a fire broke out in the Keenan block, foot of Kent street, Lindsay, immediately adjoining the Britton Brothers' building, and utterly destroyed the confectionery store of E. S. Soanes and the establishment of G. W. Blair, merchant tailor. Both shops are completely gutted, and the contents a total loss. The Canadian Post printing office, in the same block, escaped the flames, but had their premises literally flooded with water. In the third flat, immediately over Soanes' store, are situated the rooms of the C.M.B.A., which suffered severely from fire, smoke and water.

A narrow lane divides the Keenan block from the new Opera house. The latter sustains a small loss through burned windows and sash. The fire brigade did good work as usual, and confined the fire to its narrowest limits. The losses and insurance are as follows:—On Soanes' confectionery stock, $720 in the Gore Mutual, loss total; on Blair's tailoring store the loss will be only partial, as some of his best goods were safely removed during the progress of the fire; he is insured in the Waterloo Mutual for $1,000.

A Metal Breadboard
THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly cleanse them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-savers imaginable. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it, and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread-board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

MOWAT CANNOT PROHIBIT

PROVINCES NOT EMPOWERED TO PASS A PROHIBITION LAW.

A BLOW TO TEMPERANCE.

The Decision of the Supreme Court—Even the Marter Bill Cannot Be Passed—The Local Option Law is also Declared Unconstitutional.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—The Supreme Court met this morning, when there were present Judges Taschereau, Fournier, Gwynne, Sedgewick and King. Judgment was given in the constitutional case referred by the Governor General in Council, involving the question whether the Provincial Legislature had power to totally prohibit the liquor traffic. By a majority of three to two the Court decided that the Provincial Legislatures had not the power.

Seven questions were submitted in the reference, which, with the answers given by the Court to the Court today, read as follows:

1. "Has a provincial legislature power to prohibit the sale within the province of intoxicating liquors?"

To this the Chief Justice and Judge Fournier answered yes, and Judges Gwynne, Sedgewick and King no, so that the judgment of the court is no by three to two.

2. "Has the legislature such jurisdiction regarding such portions of the province as to which the Canada Temperance Act is not in operation?"

The court answered the question the same as the first.

3. "Has the Provincial Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the manufacture of such liquors within the province?"

The Court was unanimous in answering this question in the negative.

4 "Has the Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the importation of such liquors into the province?"

Answered unanimously in the negative.

5 If the legislature has not the jurisdiction to prohibit the sales of such liquors irrespective of quantities have they power to prohibit the retail sale?"

This important question was answered in the negative, the Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting.

6 "If the local legislature has a limited jurisdiction to prohibit sales subject to the limits provided by the Scott act?"

The court answered no, the Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting.

LOCAL OPTION UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Seventh—Has the Ontario Legislature jurisdiction to enact the Local Option Act?

Answer—No, the Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting.

In the case of Huson vs. the Township of South Norwich, decided some time ago, the question of the validity of a by-law prohibiting the retail sale of liquor within the township under the authority of the Ontario Local Option Act was involved. The liquor dealers in that case appealed on the ground that the Ontario Local Option Act was ultra vires. The court dismissed the appeal, Gwynne and Sedgewick dissenting. In that case the court held by a majority that the Ontario Local Option Act was constitutional, whereas today, in the prohibition reference the majority of the court held that the act was unconstitutional.

NEWFOUNDLAND CRISIS.

Confederation With Canada Looked Upon as an Avenue of Hope.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 15.—Manager Jas. Monroe has completed arrangements for reopening the Rope walk which employs 700 men. This is the first break in the dark cloud and is welcomed. Active measures of relief for the poor are in operation. All pressing cases have so far been met but the destitution is spreading. Confederation with Canada is rapidly rising in public favor. A Royal commission to prepare the way and to arrange terms is regarded as inevitable.

It is reported that the Government here is in correspondence with the Canadian Government regarding the terms for Newfoundland's admission into the Canadian confederation. The whole question, it is understood, will be presented to the colonial legislature next week. The Governor is in constant cable communication with the Imperial authorities.

COLLIERY DISASTER.

One Hundred Miners are Entombed in a Hanley, Eng., Mine.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Diglake colliery at Hanley was flooded this morning while about 240 miners were at work. The water came from a part of the mine which had been closed for some time. It swept through the workings with tremendous force, carrying with it timbers, cars and tools. The men nearest the shafts were rescued and others fled to remote workings were they would be above the level of the flood, although cut off from the shafts. It is thought that about 140 of the men were saved and that the rest were drowned. The estimate is only approximate as nobody knows how many of those below ground are still alive. Engines have pumped up water for hours and the flood in the mine had subsided greatly at 11 o'clock.

G. T. R. Men Put on Short Time.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 15.—There was considerable excitement in Grand Trunk railway circles this morning when it became known that the workmen employed in the round-house and mechanical repair shops had been placed on short time. The employees in the freight and some of the other departments expect to receive a similar order in a few days. Business here has been rather slack for some time and but little freight is moving at present.

Another Bomb Exploded in Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—A bomb was exploded at night in the Rue Monceau, near the residence of a magistrate who was concerned in the Ravachol enquiry. The bomb was filled with shot and scrap iron and charged with dynamite. The explosion made a great deal of noise, but it did no damage beyond shattering a few windows in the neighborhood. No arrests have been made.

BANISHING CANADIANS.

Two More Arrests Will Follow in the Engineer's Case.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 15.—Two more arrests are likely to follow that of Herbert T. McLeod, the Canadian engineer, who was taken into custody on Saturday afternoon on a charge of illegally obtaining naturalization papers. These are witnesses who testified to the length of residence of McLeod. Both these witnesses, Dr. J. G. Harper and Miss Jean N. Lawrence, are former Canadians, and neither are supposed to be residents of the United States. The legality of the naturalization papers issued on the testimony of a woman is questionable. McLeod's case came before the United States Commissioner today and after one witness had testified the case was put over till tomorrow to permit McLeod to prepare his defence. It is understood that his father telegraphed to him from Canada this morning, advising him to retain counsel and fight his case.

MENACED WITH TORTURE.

A Girl's Narrow Escape at the Hands of Masked Men.

HAMILTON, Jan. 15.—A bold robbery occurred in Barton township, about two miles from the city, over the mountain top, on Saturday evening. A house occupied by Miss Murray and her brother was entered by four masked burglars. During the absence of Mr. Murray, the four men burst in the door and ransacked the premises. Unable to find money or valuables which they believed to be concealed in the house, they threatened to roast the woman unless she told the whereabouts of the money. Miss Murray protested there was none in the house, but the burglars would not believe this story, and after taking off the woman's shoes and stockings they tied her to a chair preparatory to roasting her feet. Miss Murray's pleadings saved her, and the robbers decamped after securing $4 in money.

STRIKE IN BROOKLYN.

NINE THOUSAND STREET CAR EMPLOYEES HAVE GONE OUT.

According to Present Prospects It Will Be a Long Fight—Only Elevated Roads Carried Passengers Yesterday—A Riotous Mob.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 15.—The trolley car strike began when the last midnight car had been housed, which was shortly before 4 o'clock this morning. Not a single day car on any road in Brooklyn, with one exception, the Coney Island & Brooklyn, was run out this morning. The elevated trains, although the service has been nearly doubled, are unable to carry the people, and during the working hours this morning these cars were crowded to suffocation. When the electricians, employed in the four power houses in the city, went to take their night runs at 6 o'clock last night, they were asked by the foreman if they would be willing to take places on the cars as motormen and conductors this morning. To a man they replied "no." Then they were told there was no work for them. This, the first act in the lockout, threw some 900 men out. The strike is the greatest one Brooklyn has ever seen. Master Workman Connolly's order was at once obeyed by 6,600 men. Plenty of men (the company says 2,000) applied at the city railway company's office this morning for work. They said they would take out cars if they were guaranteed protection. The company at once applied to the police for protection. If the police cannot give it the Federal marshals and the United States troops will be called on. The railway companies have contracts to carry mail. If these cars are interfered with the marshals and troops, the companies say, will co-operate with the police. The mail cars did not go out this morning. The first attempt of the strikers to use violence took place in Flatbush at 10.15 o'clock. At that time the company decided to take out a car for the purpose of going to the Post office to get United States mail. Police Sergeant Zimmerman and two policemen guarded the car. The United States mail flag floated from both ends Before the car had gone one hundred feet 150 strikers, shouting, jeering and threatening, surrounded the car. The car got to Waverly avenue, one block. There the men stopped it. Finally the car got started. It got as far as Grant street, when the strikers stopped it again. Finally Sergeant Zimmerman sent for the reserves, who charged on the strikers and dispersed them. The car then moved slowly down town. Men followed it all the way, however, some stones being thrown.

President Lewis told a friend last night that the fight would cost the Brooklyn Heights Company at least half a million dollars.

An attempt to move a car on the Atlantic avenue line, bearing the inscription "U. S. Mail," was prevented by 500 strikers this afternoon, with clubs, stones and other missiles. A squad of 25 police, with drawn revolvers, finally caused the mob to retreat. A mail car will start tomorrow morning, and all the police captains in the district are ordered to see that it is not molested.

Trial of Anarchists.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 15.—The trial of sixteen anarchists, charged with blowing up the house of the Burgomaster of Liege on April 22nd, began at Liege this morning. The prisoners are also charged with attempting to blow up the Church of St. Jacques in Liege. Their leader, Gogoshonsky, alias Baron Sternburg, disappeared after the burgomaster's house was blown up, and was subsequently arrested by the Russian police. It is supposed he is now imprisoned in Russia.

Gatling Gun Howard.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 15.—Arthur L. Howard, formerly of this city, but now of Montreal, better known as "Gatling Gun Howard" was married on Thursday evening last, in this city, to a Mrs. Margaret Dundas, of Brownsburg, Que. Mr. Howard has had a great deal of newspaper notoriety during the past ten or twelve years, his greatest degree perhaps being his command of a battery of gatling guns in the Northwest Territory during the famous Riel rebellion.

Dervishes after Italians.

ROME, Jan. 15.—Private advices from Massowah say an overwhelming force of Dervishes is besieging the Italian garrison at Kassala. The garrison, which is 1,000 strong, recently made a sortie, but the soldiers were repulsed and driven behind the fort-works. Gen. Baratary has collected all the troops available and started from Keru to relieve the beleaguered garrison. The wires between Agordat and Kassala are cut, and the fate of a company of infantry, which started a short time ago to convey a quantity of ammunition, provisions, etc., from Agordat to Kassala, is unknown. The Government is withholding all official news from Massowah.

CHAPTER OF SUICIDES.

A BANK CASHIER STEALS $90,000 AND DIES BY HIS OWN HAND.

A Rash Act of a Mother Whose Mind Became Unbalanced by Christian Science Doctrines—A Young Man Blows Out His Brains.

DOVER, N.H., Jan. 15.—Isaac F. Abbott, cashier of the Dover National bank, is a defaulter, and the amount of the defalcation is estimated to be about $90,000. He was also cashier of the Five Cents Savings bank, and was city treasurer. Abbott's bond was issued for $20,000 by the North American Guarantee Co. of Montreal, which has been apprised of the default. At 3 o'clock this afternoon just before U.S. Marshal Campbell arrived at the house of Isaac Abbott, for the purpose of arresting him, a brother of Abbott heard the report of a pistol, and rushing to his brother's room found him lying on the floor with his face covered with blood. Life was extinct.

Abbott left in his brother's possession a statement of his defalcations in an envelope addressed to Examiner Dorr. That gentleman refused to make the statement public. The first suspicion that Mr. Dorr, the bank examiner, had of the defalcation, was the discovery of a note for $10,000 among the bank's resources, signed M. Nelson. This led to the questioning of Mr. Abbott on Friday night, with the result that he locked the vault with everything inside and adjusted it so that it would not open until today. The name of Mr. Abbott's young housekeeper is Miss Mertie Nelson, and it was her signature that appeared on the note. The entire available funds of the city are locked up and the city clerk can issue no more cheques at present. The School Board money and Waterworks department funds are also in the bank. Fears are entertained that the bank is worse off than was expected this morning. Abbott was not considered extravagant. He lived in an elegant house, which was built with his wife's money and cost $30,000. He was never known to gamble and only made short business trips out of town. He was a member of the Washington street Baptist church and was one of the principal backers of Rev. Frank K. Chase, who made a big temperance crusade several years ago.

A YOUNG MAN'S SUICIDE.

MONCTON, N. B., Jan. 14.—The community was shocked today to hear that Arthur L. Campbell, son of Mr. John Campbell, of the Intercolonial railway office, had shot himself through the heart while in bed. At an early hour this morning the household was startled by the sound of a pistol shot, apparently in the room of the unfortunate young man. His mother hastily made her way to the door, and she was horrified to find her son breathing his last. A 32-calibre revolver, which had been used by the young man to end his life, lay beside the bed.

A MOTHER'S SUICIDE.

WINDSOR MILLS, Que., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Hammel Moore left her home, near Windsor Mills, about 3 o'clock this morning. She took her baby, of eighteen months, with her and, walking down to the river, which runs very swiftly at that point, plunged in. She left a note on the table for her husband, who slept in another room, saying that God had called her. Christian science doctrines had unbalanced her mind. The body has not yet been recovered.

FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

THE GLOBE WILL MOVE INTO NEWLY RENTED QUARTERS AT ONCE.

A Bowmanville Lad Commits a Succession of Robberies in the Homes of Friends Who Gave Him Shelter—Notes of the Provincial Metropolis.

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—With his head swathed in bandages and unable to talk, his jaw being broken, Perry McWain, charged with stealing $5, an overcoat and a watch, stood up in the Police Court here this morning. He pleaded guilty to the theft of a silver watch and chain from F. J. Stephen, soldier at the New Fort, on a previous occasion, but denied it this morning. He was allowed to change his plea and was remanded for a week.

His career as an alleged thief is remarkable for its meanness. He came from Bowmanville and upon his arrival called upon former fellow townsmen, from whom he solicited loans. He was in many cases asked to spend the night, accepted the invitation, and then proceeded to rob his benefactors.

Levi Scheuer, 249 Booth avenue, lost a gold watch and E. Williams, 6 Dermont place, lost another; Mrs. Dalzell, 24 Hanover place, $3.50; Mary Reddy, 57 Teraulay street, $5, and J. Nicks, 45 Lombard street, an overcoat. Detective Duncan succeeded in recovering all the goods except one watch.

PAID FOR HIS FUN.

Patrick Gorman made things hum round the Toronto Opera House last night, and knocked people about in a playful manner until soothed by a tap on the head from P. C. Bond's baton.

His rowdyism spoiled the last act of "Faust." He was fined $1 and costs by the Magistrate.

THE GLOBE RENTS A HOME.

The Globe, which has been publishing its paper at the Empire office, today rented a commodious building on Richmond street west, near Yonge street, and placed orders for presses and linotype machines with the Montreal company. This sets at rest the stories about changes in the newspaper situation here by the purchase by the Globe of the Mail.

More Troops for China.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Times' correspondent in Kobe telegraphs under date of Jan. 8: It is reported that several transports have left Ujina with a portion of the third Japanese army. It is expected that the embarking will be completed by the 11th. The Emperor gave an audience to the commanding officers on the sixth. The transports will rendezvous at Chemulpo and are expected to land troops at two places on the Shan Tung coast, south of Wei Hai Wei. The Times correspondent in Hong Kong says that Admiral Freemantle has gone with the fleet, presumably to follow the Jap's movements.

Earthquake Shocks.

PRINCETON, Ind., Jan. 15.—Two distinct earthquakes were felt here at 9 and 10 o'clock last night. At a small town, about a mile from the city, the shocks were severe, and they did much damage to houses. They were preceded by a rumbling noise.

A Handsome Lady's Opinion

My head of hair, as you may observe, is perfect. Yours, if not, may become so by using Tully's Chemical Hair Grower. It will do just what is represented—it makes the hair grow when coming out; it cleanes the scalp of dandruff; restores the color when turning grey; prevents baldness, and is an elegant dressing, and the price is reasonable. 50c. a bottle. I am sure that there is no better preparation. Sold only at

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 15 1895.

Good morning!

Up to the hour of going to press this morning no serious fire had occurred in Toronto last night or yesterday.

If the members of the new Council desire to convince the hundreds of electors who marked their ballots in their favor that they have made a mistake they cannot do better than to let things go on in the same old groove.

The Times Job Department recently received an extensive order for printing from a large concern in the Prairie Province. The establishment where this journal is printed is one of the most complete in the Dominion, bar none.

Ill luck seems to be hanging on the coat tails of the Conservative party these days. Premier Bowell is ill with a bad cold and irritated throat, his advanced age making it necessary for him to take especial good care of himself. There never was a time in its history when the party needed new blood quite so badly as it does now.

The cold weather has prematurely closed the Florida orange season. Authoritative estimates state that out of 3,000,000 boxes of fruit remaining in the state, only 500,000 boxes are in sound condition. The railroads will probably lose at least $500,000 as the result of the freeze, while the growers loss is computed to be nearly $2,000,000.

The great De Lesseps Panama ditch is said to be melanceoly wreck. The wharfs are falling into the water, and acres of machinery are rusting to dissalution. On the isthmus are nearly 1,000 miles with steel track with locomotives, and thousands of dump carts, now half hidden in the tropical growth. Seventy-six great steam shovels stand side by side in the excavation buried in luxuriant vegetation.

Some years ago a tame long-haired goat formed part of the regular crew of a passenger steamer on service between an English port and a continental one. After a time the custom authorities discovered that it wore a false coat, many sizes to large for it. The goat's own hair was clipped very close; round its body were packed cigars, lace, etc., and then the false coat was skillfully put on and fastened by hooks and eyes.

A lady schoolmistress of Valpraiso, Indiana, has hit upon the excellent idea of exchanging letters on geography between her schoolars and the pupils in Canadian schools. Writing to the inspector of public schools at Kingston, Ontario, she announces that the pupils of the fourth and fifth grade in her charge have sent letters on geography for distribution among pupils of similar classes in the Kingston school. The Kingston pupils will in return, send letters descriptive of their local life to the Valparaiso school, and so the two groups of young people will be brought into sympathy with each other, while receiving the best of geography lessons.

HARD TIMES IN KANSAS.

The Governor of Kansas, in the January North American, draws an awful picture of the condition of the Kansas farmers.

To begin with, the aggregate of the real estate mortgages of farms in the State is $167,000,000, while the liens on chattels amount to $47,000,000 more and 10,000 people are driven out of house and home every year by foreclosure.

Nor is there any prospect of improvement. Prices are low and the tendency is still downward. To produce a bushel of wheat costs fifty cents, and the selling price is only forty cents. Twenty five years ago two bushels of grain produced $5; now twelve bushels will not yield the same sum. A few years since a good horse would fetch $75; now eight horses will not bring more than the same amount.

No wonder the farmers of the western states are so ready to move across the border into the Canadian Northwest.

ORIENTAL AMALGAMATION.

There is good ground for the belief that the story that the newspapers published the other day that the desire of the Japanese was to form a Mongolian league against European influence was something more than mere newspaper talk. The Japanese are not the sweet and simple children of the orient that we have all been acustomed to think them. In their struggles with the Chinese they have shown strength, determination and subtlety. For years they had been quietly preparing for a war with China, and when the call came they took the field armed at all points and ready for a fight to the death. If they were schemers in one way they are very apt to be schemers in others.

If the Japanese can bring about an offensive and defensive alliance with the Chinese, the Siames and other oriental peoples, they will make things mightily unpleasant for the rest of the world. They can manufacture almost every article of commerce quite as well in the orient as in England, the States or Canada and they can undersell the products of other parts of the world right and left. The Chinese and Japanese live on next to nothing and are willing to work for next to nothing, too. The purchasing power of money in China and Japan is several times what it is in England or the States. Everything is as cheap as dirt. The havoc they could create in the world's markets if they once forced their way into them would be appalling.

There seems little doubt that the conquest of China is but the first step in a long-headed Japanese scheme to bring the commercial supremacy of the world to the orient. Whether Britain will stand idly by and watch this little game go on remains to be seen, but it is hardly likely that she will. The commercial interests of the western world are too important to be pushed aside by a aggressive and greedy power. For the next few years the part that China and japan will play in the game of nations will be very closely followed; and it may be that the shedding of blood is not at an end.

The Endeavor Herald.

Of those who suffered by the disastrous fire of Sunday morning last the endeavor Herald Company, who occupied premises along with the Brough Printing Co., were, in proportion to the interests involved, among the heaviest losers, their stock being only partially covered by insurance. Everything was consumed save the company's books and the mailing lists which had been placed in the safe. The terrific heat to which the latter was subjected melted everything within that was easily melted, and a part of the mailing list, containing all of the city subscribers to The Herald was lost through its adhearing to the melted paint on the inside of the safe door. The January number of The Hearld was in course of printing and was a total loss. The manager of the company, Mr. N. F. Caswell, with commendable enterprise, has secured more commodious quarters at 35 Richmond street west, in Wesley Buildings, and is putting in a plant of the newest styles of type and machinery. The February number of The Herald will appear in good time in an entirely new and improved dress. A stock of C. E. literature and supplies will also in a few days be ready to meet orders. The Endeavor Herald, which is the official organ of the Christian Endeavor Society in Canada, has established itself as one of the brightest and most widely circulated religious papers in Canada. With the February number the Rev. J. S. Conning, a vigorous and versatile writer and a leading C. E. worker, assumes the editorship, with Messrs. W. S. Leslie, who since its inception had ably edited The Herald, was obliged to resign the position owing to his intended early removal to Montreal.—Globe.

DEATH WITH A HAT PIN.

A TRAMP AT OTTAWA'S POLICE STATION TAKES HIS LIFE.

Stabbed Himself in the Neck With a Darning Needle—A Man Killed by Falling Ice—Two Tragedies of Quebec's First City.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—A more desperate attempt at suicide has never been recorded in Ottawa than that of Carl Alkison, a foreigner, who stabbed himself in the neck in one of the cells in the police station a few minutes before 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

On Saturday night Alkison went to the station and asked for lodging. It was accorded him and on Sunday morning he left at about the same time as night lodgers are generally requested to take their departure.

IN HARD LUCK.

Only a couple of hours afterwards, however, Alkison made his appearance at the station again. He seemed to be in trouble. He said he had had no breakfast, and in piteous tones asked Sergeant Moylan what they were going to do with him. In answer to questions by the sergeant, as to who he was and where he hailed from, the stranger replied that he was a Swede and had been employed on the construction of the O. A. & P. S. railway, near Long Lake. He added that he had got into the bad graces of some of his fellow countrymen on the work. They were jealous of him because he tried to sub-let a contract from one of the railway contractors. Nevertheless, he intended going right back to work, he said, but was disappointed upon going to the station to find that there were no cars running on Sunday.

He added that he was both hungry and tired, and wanted a place to rest. Taking pity on the poor fellow Sergeant Moylan gave him a lunch that one of the policemen had just left in the station. Alkison then walked into a cell and closing the door after him sat down and commenced to eat his breakfast.

IN A POOL OF BLOOD.

In the course of another couple of hours, Station Constable Robillard, while walking along the corridor happened to look into Alkison's cell. He was startled at seeing the unfortunate fellow kneeling on the pavement floor in quite a pool of blood, his head resting on the wooden bunk beside him.

Asked what was wrong, Alkison simply said he was sick. The constable went up stairs and informed Chief McVeity of the man's condition, and upon entering the cell, the chief found that Alkison had made a determined attempt to end his life. Blood was oozing freely from a small hole on each side of his neck. Two large darning needles were afterwards found in the cell, and with these Alkison admitted having pierced the holes in his neck.

KILLED BY FALLING ICE.

At a quarter to twelve o'clock on Saturday night, Gustin Gisco, an Italian, who was struck in the afternoon by falling ice from the roof of the Dominion Hall at the corner of Sparks and Bank streets, died at the Water street hospital from the effects of his injuries. He lingered in an unconscious condition from the time of the accident to the last.

HAMILTON'S MAYOR BARRED

From the Position of Chief Constable—Convicted of Assault.

HAMILTON, Jan. 14.—At the meeting of the Police Commissioners on Saturday afternoon, two doctors' certificates were produced stating that Chief McKinnon was still unable to leave his hotel. A resolution was passed regretting that charges of gross misconduct had been laid against the chief constable and requiring him to attend as early as possible. The commissioners will hold another meeting tomorrow.

In the event of the office being made vacant Mayor Stewart is ineligible as the rules read:—"No person shall be appointed on the police force as constable unless he has not been convicted of any offence punishable by confinement in the common jail." This would bar the Mayor out, as he was convicted some time ago of assault.

Lazier & Monck, solicitors for Thomas Gould, state that their client is instructing them in the matter of securing a divorce from his wife. It is understood that this action is the outcome of the McKinnon matter, Gould having stated that it was his wife and her sister who accompanied the chief on his late trip. Private Detective Hodgins, of Toronto, has been working for Gould in the matter. At one time Gould was apparently anxious to take a part in the proposed investigation into the chief's doings but he is reported to have said he would simply let things take their course.

MASONIC TEMPLE BURNED.

The Craftsmen of St. Kits Lose Heavily by Fire—Public Library in Same Building.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 14.—The Masonic Temple situated on Ontario street was totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock this morning. The ground floor of the building was occupied as a business college, the public free library on the second floor, and by St. George, Maple Leaf and Temple lodges on the third floor. The Masons lost their jewels, regalia, furniture, books, etc. The public library lost all their books. The business college lost everything. The Masonic Temple was one of the finest buildings of its kind in thhe Dominion. It was three stories high, with tower, iron front and altogether an imposing looking structure.

Insurance on Masonic Temple as follows—$5,[illegible] in Commercial Union, $2,500 in Royal, $2,200 in London.

A COMPARISON.

On o'er the pastures, where the mountain flowers
Starring the sward trim garden beds outshow!
On through sweet pine woods, cross the torrents' flow.
On o'er vast bowlder mounds, while still the hours
Make labor lightsome! For above thee towers
Unseen as yet, the peak, on o'er the snow!
Nor heedless tread its smoother plain, for, lo!
The blue abysses yawn, the avalanche lowers!

Scale yonder beetling cliffs, where now the sun
Beats fiercely, how sure steps in walls of ice.
What though with toil worn limb and laboring breath,
Hold bravely on until the height be won.
So runs life's tale—childhood, youth's paradise,
Hard manhood, weary age, the goal of death.

GAMBLING ORIENTALS.

Games of Chance Are as the Breath of Life to Them.

There appear to be three races of men—the Chinese, the Malays and the natives of Manilla, to whom in every grade and under all conditions of life gambling in some form or other is as the breath of their nostrils. The love of it is inborn. They seem unable to live contented lives without the pleasurable excitement that is to be found in games of mingled chance and skill, but among Chinamen generally, and certainly among Chinamen abroad, the gambling is of a very mild type indeed. In most cities where there is a considerable alien Chinese population to be dealt with the necessity for licensing and regulating or at least winking at the existence of their gaming houses is recognized. It is the one pastime in a life of continuous toil, the denial of which would be intolerable and practically impossible.

But the evil never assumes proportions of any more seriousness than our own domestic hand of "Napoleon" or the club rubber of whist or nominal points so long as the authorities confine the games strictly to the Chinamen themselves, a course followed in such cities as Calcutta and Sydney. It is only when the riffraff of other races are allowed to "take a hand" and to utilize the Chinese games, tables and banks for the gratification of their own gambling propensities that anything like widespread mischief is wrought. A Chinaman may, in rare instances, lose his all when gaming among his own countrymen, but if this result does happen he goes next day contentedly back to work and is not, like most ruined gamblers of European stock, permanently incapacitated for honest toil.

If white men lose money in a Chinese gambling house, they are at once illogical, dishonest and contemptible in denouncing the Chinese as the cause of their misfortune. The bush workers inveigh against their Chinese competitors for their habit of gambling, yet it is notorious that the shearers and the roustabouts' huts on the sheep stations are frequently scenes where men are, in colonial phraseology, "lambed down" and fleeced of all their season's earnings by quasiprofessional gamblers, who find the evening game at cards far more profitable and to their taste than the day's work on or around the shearing board. Similarly in the cities the poor Chinaman is denounced for his fondness for fantan or pakapu, played for coppers, while the very men who throw the stone openly frequent race courses and card clubs.—Nineteenth Century.

Childhood's Simple Pleasures.

The exultation which Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin feels over her real childhood, with its copper toed shoes and rag doll, in her chapter on training children, will find an echo in the breasts of many city mothers. It is what many of them fight for for their children as they fight for health in the city's microbe and bacillus laden air.

"How can a real child keep her happy enjoyment in simple pleasures?" said a woman, discussing this point recently, "when every influence to which she is subject is against it? My little girl had a birthday lately, her tenth, and she was thrown into an ecstasy of delight over a little silver pin an aunt sent her.

"She rushed over to show it to her other self, the little neighbor over the way, and returned in a few minutes with the serpent in her Eden. I saw the cloud and soon found its cause.

"'Mamma,' she whispered, coming close to me, 'Kitty thinks my pin isn't sterling. What is sterling, mamma?'

"That's the whole thing in a nutshell. Everything today must represent so many dollars, or it has no value. The atmosphere of life is so surcharged with this strife for the high priced that even the babies absorb it, and childhood, with no discrimination, is tormented by it. It makes my heart ache to think that the birthright of my little ones—the capacity to enjoy without knowing—is being stolen from them, and I must stand by powerless to prevent it."—New York Times.

Would Blow Himself.

The ideas of men who have been living a rough frontier life for years with reference to what constitutes a big spread and what luxury is become strangely modified.

Several miners who had been in the mining districts of Colorado for years were discussing what they would do if they were to become rich or strike it lucky.

"Well," said one, "I know what I'll do. I'll go to New York as straight as the cars will take me, and when I get there I'll make a bee line for Delmonico's, and I'll get the biggest dinner money can buy. I don't care if it costs me $50 or more, I'll have it."

"Now, what do you think you would order if you were to go to Delmonico's for a $50 dinner?"

"Well, I dunno, but I guess I'd have some ham and eggs—yes, I'd just have some ham and eggs."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Duck's Death From Grief.

Mr. E. C. Lanier of Waynesboro tells a pathetic duck story. He owned a pair of ducks, one of which was seriously injured and was put in a pen for protection. The old drake was faithful to his better half and sat around the pen with all the patience of one anxious for the recovery of some dear one. The injured duck died within a few days, and the old drake refused to eat and finally died from grief, for he was apparently in the best of health and was fed regularly. Is there any lover whose eyes fall upon this pathetic love story who would stick to his "duck" so faithfully?—Atlanta Constitution.

The people of tropical countries almost invariably use some form of capsicum with maize as a stimulant to the stomach, maize being more difficult of digestion than some other grains.

A MARYLAND HOME.

FAMOUS WYE MANSION, WITH ITS GRACIOUS MEMORIES.

A Sturdy Domicile and its Outbuildings and "Quarters"—A Land of Mint Juleps and Winsome Maidens—Fred Douglass Visits His Boyhood's Home.

If one might be frisked by the mere magic of a wish away from the vulgar scrambling and the din and all the heartless impertinence of this impatient time back to those ways of pleasantness and paths of peace which were the familiar conditions of old Maryland, he might choose to find himself trundling in an antiquated gig through the long, dim stretch of woods and the double colonnade of locusts and beeches which formed the approach to the "great house" and ended in the graveled drive that belted the noble lawn—from five to seven acres of close, clean sward, dotted with firs and cedars and terraced from end to end. Here stood the sturdy domicile, broad and square, built of bricks brought over from England in the ships that came for tobacco. It was flanked on each hand with offices and strung out to the very edge of the woods with outbuildings—kitchen, dairy, icehouse, overseer's lodge and the "quarter" for the dusky colony of slaves. This latter might be either a group of cabins or a single spacious tenement of logs or stone, affording one big sitting room below, floored with earth and rude dormitories, bunked and blanketed above. On the ground floor the negroes loved to lie around the great hearth, with their feet to the fire, and to sleep that sleep of insouciant beatitude which was broken only by the familiar cry of warning, "Some fool nigger's heel a-burning!"

In the distance was the clumsy windmill for the grinding of the maize which was presently to find itself transformed and famous in coquetries of johnny cake and pone, and flapjacks flattered with golden butter, and beyond, between the willows by the creek, glimpsed and glanced the rippling silver of the bay, with its sleepy coves and inlets dotted with canoes and barges, and with the slender spars of pungies in among the cuddling little isles, where Sambo tonged for "eyesboters" in the sun and the larger fisher took his finny treasures from the weir.

Here was a land flowing with mint juleps and blooming with delectable damsels. Mistress Rebecca Lloyd, beautiful and gracious, greeted the newcomer with a winsome courtesy on the broad piazza, and the grizzled butler, who had "toted" his young missus around so long that there were still times when he forgot himself and called her "honey," brought you the beguiling beverage on a silver salver engraved with the family arms and was distressed if your straw refused to draw. That broad piazza was burned, with the rest of the noble house of Wye, on March 13, 1781, when a British marauding party looted the plantation and the mansion and carried off plate, jewelry and watches, swords, spurs, sashes and cocked beavers, muffs, turbans and tippets, wigs and embroidered waistcoats, plumed hats and cardinals, the whole splendid plunder of brave apparel and dainty bedeckings. The fair Rebecca has long since been choired among the angels, and the grizzled butler sleeps with his toes turned up to the mint, but when I crossed the lawn one kindly day in December I was greeted as graciously by Rebecca's later kinswoman and conducted into the great hall, which never yet, whether in the parent house or in this, was big enough for the hospitalities it has harbored. The grand old manor house gave its body to the flames, but its soul survives in the later mansion, where its traditions of courtesy and kindness are piously cherished.

Near the site of the historic domicile, a fragment of which still remains, stands the beautiful structure, impressive by its proud simplicity, which invites the wayfarer today in the name of eight generations of Maryland worthies who have kept house there since Edward Lloyd I, the Puritan, in 1668, set up his son Philemon to be lord of the manor of Wye and master of Wye House—incunabula majorum. The main building of two lofty stories, including the hall, drawing room, parlor, dining room and chambers, all of noble proportions, is connected by corridors with one storied wings, which are the library on one side and the domestic offices on the other, presenting a pleasing facade of 200 feet, looking out upon the lawn and the leafy avenue, and over the woods to Wye river and the bay.

In Governor Lloyd's time there was a certain steward, or bailiff, at Wye, one Captain Anthony of St. Michael's, at one time master of a bay craft in the service of the governor. This man was the owner of a likely negro boy who escaped from bondage, and by his remarkable powers, acquirements and address became known to the world as Frederick Douglass. In 1881 Mr. Douglass, being then marshal of the District of Columbia, was moved to revisit the scenes of his childhood and his thrall, and one day found himself on the porch of Wye House, where he was received by the sons of Colonel Lloyd, their father being absent, with that courtesy which is extended to every stranger who finds his way thither. When he had made known the motive of his visit, he was conducted over the estate, from spot to spot that he remembered and described with all their childish associations—here a spring, there a hedge, a lane, a field, a tree. He called them by their names or recalled them by some simple incident, and all the glowing heart of the man seemed to go out to the place as he passed from ghost to ghost as in a dream. And then a strange thing happened. Standing mute and musing for awhile, he said slowly and low, as one who talks in his sleep, "Over in them woods was whar me and Mars Dan uster trap rabbits." "Mars Dan" was the governor's son. Was it the man's half playful, half pathetic sense of the grotesque incongruity of the situation, or was it glamour—all the tremendous significance of a phenomenal life compacted into the homely reflection and phrase of a barefoot "darky?"

He plucked flowers from the graves of dead Lloyds he had known and at the table drank to the health of the master of the old house and of his children, "that they and their descendants may worthily maintain the character and the fame of their ancestors."—Dr. John W. Palmer in Century.

His Reasons.

Fags—They say that Dr. Capsule has made a fortune within the last five years.

Gags—Gracious! What a lot of people he must have cured!

"You're away off. He didn't cure anybody. He discovered a new disease."—New York Tribune.

Keweenaw Point, in Michigan, was so called by the Indians. The word means "a portage."

IN A JUNGLE STORM.

You Hear It, but Can't See It Until It Can Also Be Felt.

People who have never been in a jungle talk of the sky as a painter talks of the horizon or a seafaring man of the offing—as if when you wanted to see it you only need use your eyes. But in the jungle you don't see the sky—at least you only see a few scraggy patches of it overhead through the openings in the twigs and leaves. Neither do you feel the wind blowing, nor get burned or dazzled by the sun, nor even see that luminary, except by momentary glimpses about midday, from which it follows that a jungleman does not usually pretend to be weatherwise. If he does, he is even a greater humbug than the rest of the weather prophets. On the afternoon about which we are speaking I remember setting forth on my walk in the still glow of the tropical calm and wondering rather at the intense stillness of the surrounding forest. Then the air grew cooler, and the green of the foliage in front seemed to deepen, and presently there was a sound as of a giant waterfall in the distance. Waterfalls do not, however, grow louder every second, whereas the noise in front did so. Then there was a loud, angry growl, as of a dozen lions. A minute more, and the whole jungle began to roar as if 50 squadrons of heavy cavalry were coming up at a gallop. Then came a drop of rain and a peal of thunder which seemed to make the world stop.

Then the storm began. The sky above darkened; the trees clattered; the brushwood beneath hissed and bowed itself. A deluge of raindrops blotted out the narrow view. Down it came, soaking through the densest leaves under which one fled for refuge, striking the grass and sand with millions of dull thuds, dashing furiously against the leaves as if they were so many hostile shields, streaking the air with innumerable perpendicular lines and hurling itself down with the force of bullets.

In such a downpour one may as well walk and get wet as stand still and get wet. Unfortunately one did not know where to walk to. The "circumbendibus system" presupposes the fact that the wagon wheels and bullock tracks can be seen and noted, but when the cart track is no longer a cart track, but "all turned to rushing waters," such tracks cannot be seen, and unless you have a pocket compass you may as well try to fly as to get back to where you came from. When one reads of travelers lost in the backwoods, they always steer by the sun—and probably very badly—but when there is no sun what are you to do?—Siam Free Press.

CHRONIC CHILLINESS.

The Remedy Suggested Is Outdoor Exercise at All Seasons.

How some people suffer in winter! They are constantly having chills. A feeling of cold water trickling down the back or some local stagnation of blood, with altered nervous sensations, is experienced. The hands, feet, nose or ears are especially likely to give inconvenience. Such individuals cannot get warm even in bed, and, as a consequence, often suffer from insomnia, for sleeplessness is often caused by cold feet. Many such conditions arise from the fear of taking outdoor exercise, because the weather is too cold. Hence the circulation is not kept going, and the blood, vitiated by the close, impure air of the house, has no chance offered it of being allowed to purify itself. The foulest river or stream of water is rendered pure by exposure to the air as it comes along, and after a run of a few miles becomes fit for consumption. Why, then, will delicate people deny the stream of life an opportunity to purify itself as it courses through their veins? Here is the secret of how to keep warm in winter—outdoor exercise in pure air.

Many individuals mistake the feeling of cold for "catarrh." But feeling cold and "taking a cold" are different things. A shiver from exposure to cold—indeed a half frozen condition—is not in itself likely to end in a so called "cold," so long as the exposure has been in the open air. But we hold that by breathing the impure air of badly ventilated rooms a chill may be very easily contracted that will end in a "cold."

In cold weather we distinctly recommend the ordinarily healthy man or woman to try the effect of outdoor exercise, especially when the feeling is strong that it is too cold to go out of doors. Exercise under such circumstances will usually act as a tonic to the whole frame and brace up the nervous system, the special function of which is to regulate the heat of the body. The skin should be freely exposed to the air before dressing in the morning, and after the morning washing or cold tepid bath rub the body into a glow with a coarse towel, and you will be very nearly cold and waterproof.—Philadelphia Times.

Studying to Please.

He had been particularly fortunate in his business and felt in the mood for tipping the waiters at his hotel rather liberally. As a result, every time he entered the dining room half a dozen willing waiters rushed for him like football players in a big match. This came to be annoying after awhile, so he called the head waiter to him and said:

"Now, see here, I don't want all the waiters in the place bothering me every time I get something to eat. Settle on one man and let him attend to my wants."

Then his eye roamed around at the assembled attendants, and without any particular reason he said:

"There, let that fellow with a wart on his nose look out for me."

So it was settled, and for some time the designated waiter was on hand. One day, however, the man with money found another attendant at his table. He motioned to the head waiter.

"Didn't I tell you to let me have the waiter with a wart on his nose?" he demanded.

"Yes, sah, but this one will be better, sah. He has two warts on his nose."—Philadelphia Press.

Life Worth Living.

Those people who say that life is not worth living find it so because they do not go to work to make it worth living. Why does sadness overpower them? Is it so much harder for them than others to see sin and suffering? What right have they to add their weight to the world's burdens? Is it a sign of intellect to be cowardly? And do these people not dream that the spiritual power which makes such an intellectual condition impossible is vastly superior to any power that the intellect alone can attain?—Elizabeth Peabody.

Plaintive.

"A human life," said the sentimental young man, "is a poem—tragic, comic, sentimental, as the case may be."

"Yes," sighed Miss Pennigh, "and so many of us are rejected manuscripts."—Washington Star.

THE LATEST FAD.

New Microbes and Disease Germs Have Become Parlor Talk.

It has become very fashionable nowadays to talk about microbes, bacteria, disease germs, etc. Everybody is on the alert about them. The reason for this is that scientists have discovered that almost every disease has its own special germ, and if that germ falls on favorable soil it grows, like any other seed. That is why in times of epidemics people are so careful about cleanliness, so these germs may not be carried from one place to another, and so that even the wind may not blow them here and there. Strangest of all the discoveries about these germs, however, are those made by Dr. Sternberg, proving that many of them lurk in the bodies of people themselves, only waiting favorable opportunities for development. Thus the germs for pneumonia are in your own mouth, waiting to go down into the lungs when your vitality is reduced. The germs for lockjaw, too, are everywhere about, only they cannot come to anything if there is plenty of oxygen about, oxygen burning them directly up, which is why a deep though small wound will cause lockjaw, when a wound near the surface will not do so. All this proves how important it is to keep well, so none of these germs have a chance to grow. A doctor told me he had seen some of these germs introduced into the blood. When the blood was healthy it didn't mind the germs any more than a boy minds a snowball; the germs disappeared. When the blood was not healthy the germ affected it, changed its color, etc. After this no one will feel like saying they caught a disease from anybody else, seeing that it lay in themselves all the time. So there will be no reason for blaming other people and outside conditions for the troubles we have in ourselves, something most of us are always wanting to do when things go wrong.

A Naughty King.

If all the stories are true which are told about the little King of Spain, he must be a very willful little boy indeed and quite determined to have his own way in everything. One cannot greatly blame the little king for his waywardness, because the rules of his country are such that the word of the king is law, in many things, whether the same king be young or old, little or big. So little Alphonso must be pardoned if he is a "spoiled" child.

One day Alphonso and his governess were out driving, when suddenly the governess noticed that the little king was not acknowledging the salutes of his subjects.

"I am too tired to bow to them," exclaimed he, pettishly, "and I am not going to do it."

"But you must acknowledge their salutes," insisted the governess, "because you are their king, and it is one of the customs for a king to bow to his subjects."

"I shall not bow to them!" exclaimed Alphonso, loudly.

"Then you cannot drive in the carriage with me," replied the governess, kindly but firmly, for she feared that Alphonso would offend his subjects.

"Then you may get out and walk!" exclaimed the naughty little king. Then, calling to the coachman, he cried:

"Halt, Carlo! This lady wishes to go on foot."

Feminine Gaits.

It is a ridiculous notion that one's gait should be regulated, measured and prescribed by the whims of fashion. Last winter the girl who was au rigueur held her waist stiff and bent forward at an angle of 35 degrees, stepping with an elasticity that suggested the possibility of a coiled wire springs in her shoes. To speak politely there was a sweet precipitation in her movements, but it was conducive to anything but grace. Sensible women walk sensibly, that is, natural and from the hips, with a certain amount of precision, perhaps, but evenly and lightly.

Next to a low voice there is nothing more indicative of refinement and good breeding in a woman than a light step. It is strange that a small woman weighing ninety pounds often comes down stairs as if she weighed a ton, while the silken foot fall belongs to the woman who tips the beam at 200.—New York Herald.

THE VALUE OF PLAY.

Four Hundred Public Playgrounds Lately Opened in Germany.

Inspector Hughes, of Toronto, in the Educational Review, has a very interesting paper, entitled "The Educational Value of Play." It describes the systematic efforts which have been made in Germany during the last twenty years to teach children to play. The Germans took the idea originally from the English, but, as is often the case, they have improved upon their own teacher. The beginning of the new era was marked by the appointment by the Government of a large committee to visit England to watch English children, youths and men playing, and to report the game which, in their opinion, would be most attractive to German people and could be adapted most easily to their tastes and habits. The committee reported, and their recommendations were officially circulated throughout Germany. The country was evidently ready for the movement. Already over 400 cities and towns have opened public playgrounds. Most of these playgrounds have been provided at the public expense by the cities and towns in which they are situated, but some of them have been opened by people of wealth, who have become deeply interested in the movement. In a few cases money has been left by will for the purchase and maintenance of playgrounds by gentlemen who were convinced that the best thing they could do for the world they were leaving was to help their successors to be happier by making them stronger and more energetic. These playgrounds provide attractions for all ages. There are sand-heaps fresh every day for the babies and little children, and the necessary equipment for attractive and interesting games suitable for children, youths and adults. It is of the utmost importance that our young children shall be trained to play, not only that their health and tempers may be improved, but that they may form the habit of playing and thus develop a love for play, and a play tendency in character.

From the first the movement has been essentially educational, although it is not directly connected with the work of the schools. Each playground is in charge of a "play leader," who has under him a number of assistant leaders. The "play leader" is usually a teacher, and the regulations issued by the Government provide that he must be a trained educator. The "play leader" is on duty on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, when the schools have half-holidays; and on other days from four to six. The most popular games so far are the various running and ball games for the warm weather, and skating in winter. I hope they may learn the Scotchman's game of curling, too. The German people are entering upon a new era in the development of physical, mental and moral manhood and womanhood by the cultivation of the tendency to vigorous play.

AQUATICS.

Van Vliet and Baltz, the champion pair-oared and double scull crew, may go to Henley this year, having resigned from the Vesper boat club of Philadelphia and joined the Pennsylvania barge club. Some members of the Vespers made it unpleasant for them when they discovered that it was from Van Vliet that some evidence was had to convict Sculler Hedley of the Vespers of violating the amateur rules. The result was Hedley's disqualification at Saratoga the night before the regatta. The captain of the Vespers says he is glad the stars have left and that his club has a crew in training fit to take their place. If so, he has the best team that ever came out of the Schuylkill boat house.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Law Association.

The following officers have been elected by the Peterborough Law Association: President, E. B. Edwards; vice-president, G. M. Roger; secretary, J. W. Bennett; treasurer, A. Stevenson; trustees, W. H. Moore and R. M. Dennistoun.

Dangerously Ill.

Mr. James McKim, a prominent Oddfellow and Forester and an employee of the William Hamilton Works, is critically ill at his residence on Macdonald street with inflammation of the lungs. Very little hopes are entertained for his recovery.

C. P. R. Delayed.

The 7.40 C. P. R. passenger last night was three hours late and did not reach Peterborough until 10.40. The delay was caused by an accident. At Locust Hill a freight was derailed, on account of a broken truck, and it was several hours before the track was clear to enable other trains to pass. The 11.40 train was on time.

Mark Your Seats.

Secure your seats now for the event of the season. Plan of hall and reserved seats for the Burns Anniversary Concert to be held in the Opera House on Wednesday evening, January 23rd, now open at the Peterborough Bookstore. Grand special engagement of five artists of established reputation in a double programme of high order, under auspices of St. Andrew's Society.

Otonabee Agricultural Society.

At the annual meeting of the township of Otonabee Agricultural Society the following directors were elected:—Messrs. Andrew Nelson, T. Walsh, D. Cruickshank, J. Smithson, James Elmhirst, Wm. J. Miller, Wm. Shearer, R. Wood, J. M. Drummond, George Eason, P. Drummond, T. Thompson, D. Moore. The directors chose the following officers:—President, A. Weir; Vice-President, M. Kennedy; Secretary-Treasurer, A. Shearer; Auditors, James McNeil and R. English. The financial statement presented showed a very satisfactory balance on hand.

William Robinson Committed.

In the Police Court yesterday morning William Robinson had an adjourned hearing on a charge of perjury. The prisoner, it will be remembered, was a witness in the Cavanagh case a week ago, and swore that he did not sell any liquor on a specified day. Two other witnesses afterwards swore that they bought liquor from Robinson on the day in question. A charge of perjury was then made and Robinson was arrested. He has been confined in gaol over a week. The Magistrate yesterday committed the prisoner for trial at the next Court. It is likely he will have a hearing before Judge Weller in a week's time.

St. Andrew's Society Concert.

The Burn's anniversary concert to be given under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society in the Opera House on the evening of January 23rd, promises to be one of the most refined and entertaining of the season. The array of talent secured is excellent, reflecting credit upon the judgment of the committee of arrangements. Of the talent engaged the name of Miss Maggie Barr, the famous and sweet singer of Scottish ballads, is noted with satisfaction. No elocutionist in Canada enjoys a more favorable reputation than Annie Louie White, whose style is peculiarly her own, at once magnetic and engaging, and ever entertaining. Mr. George Fox is a violin virtuoso of sustained merit. His rendition of difficult compositions is characterized by smooth and graceful execution. Master Norman Graham Fraser is a charming Highland dancer. His work never fails to create enthusiasm. Mr. William Hewlett, pianist, is an artist of considerable skill and his excellent playing will be a pronounced feature of the concert.

EVENTS TODAY.

Annual meeting of West Peterborough Farmers' Institute.

Statutory meeting of Peterborough Central Exhibition Company.

Meeting of Board of Directors of Young Women's Association.

Hockey match tonight between a Trinity college (Toronto) team and the Peterboroughs.

AFTER A GRANT.

The Horticultural Society Will Make a Demand for Financial Aid.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society, which was held in the Council Chambers yesterday afternoon, it was decided that the society would not look after the park the coming season unless the Town Council made a grant of $500.

President George Burnham presided at the meeting and presented the following report on behalf of the directors:

To the Members of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society:

GENTLEMEN,—The Directors beg to submit the following report:

The annual show having been held at an earlier date than in former years, was the best in the history of the society. We regret to have to inform you that there was a falling off in the membership last years, owing no doubt to the canvas not having been so thorough as in the year before. The society also suffered a loss in the diminution of the government grant. The directors beg to report that the committee appointed at the last annual meeting waited on the Town Council and asked for a grant of $500, but was unable to secure the amount and consequently your directors were unable to carry out the necessary improvements in the park. It will be advisable for the meeting to consider whether it will be in the interest of the society to look after the park in the future, if the grant required is not given by the Council.

Your directors advertised for tenders for the care and planting of the grounds for the coming season. Mr. Mason's tender was accepted on the condition that the society secured the necessary grants. The grant given by the County Council terminated in 1891, and it will be necessary to take steps to have the grant renewed if possible.

On account of the absence of Mr. Lewis, the treasurer (pro tem.) is unable to present the financial statement at this meeting.

GEORGE BURNHAM,
President.

After considerable discussion it was deemed advisable to ask the town to make the grant of $500 and a committee was appointed to wait upon the Council to lay the matter before that body. The committee consists of: Messrs. J. R. Stratton, W. H. Hill, Adam Hall and John Burnham.

The usual grant of $75 from the county council will be asked for. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President .... Dr. Geo. Burnham
1st Vice .... James Stevenson, M.P.
2nd Vice .... D. W. Dumble
Secretary .... J. H. Cobb, jr.
Treasurer .... W. H. Hill
Auditors .... W. H. Hill and Adam Hall

Directors—Rev. V. Clementi, J. R. Stratton, W. H. Manning, J. H. Cobb, Adam Hall, Wm. Ford, J. H. Cobb, jr., J. H. Roper, F. J. Lewis, T. E. Bradburn, John Burnham, M.P.

DANGEROUSLY INJURED

Mr. Aaron Comstock Thrown Violently Against a Telegraph Pole.

Mr. Aaron Comstock, the well known furniture dealer, is lying at his home in a very critical condition, the result of an accident that befell him yesterday morning.

While driving in a cutter with his son on Charlotte street, a sharp turn at the corner of George street upset the cutter, the runner of which caught in the track. Both Mr. Comstock and his son were thrown out, and at the same time the horse became frightened and made a wild break at running. Mr. Comstock had hold of the lines and retained them, the horse dragging him along the street at a furious rate.

When nearly opposite Mr. Comstock's warehouse the animal suddenly shied to the side of the street. The sudden swerve threw Mr. Comstock violently towards the sidewalk and his head struck a telegraph pole with much force, rendering him unconscious. He was immediately surrounded by those who had witnessed the affair and quickly removed to his house.

Drs. King and Halliday attended the wounded man. His wounds, as far as can be determined at the present time, consist of severe cuts and bruises on the front of the head, a cut on the ear, and a fracture of the skull. The extent of the latter can only be determined by symptoms which will require a certain length of time for development.

Late last night Mr. Comstock was slightly better, resting easy and was conscious. Immediate serious results are not feared, although complications may develop in a few days, a possibility that his many friends in Peterborough sincerely trust will not be realized.

A few minutes before the accident, Mr. Comstock received a telegram containing the sad intelligence that his only sister had died in Chatham. Mr. Comstock's brother died only last summer.

A Metal Breadboard

THE WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN USED to kneading dough on the old fashioned wooden breadboard knows what a bother it is to get them clean and how cumbersome and heavy they are. When they begin to crack or check it is almost impossible to thoroughly clean them, and they may easily become dangerous conveyances of disease. It was left for a woman, of course, to remedy this state of affairs, and Mrs. M. M. Everhard, of St. Joseph, Mich., has patented a metal bread board, which is one of the greatest labor-saving inventions. It is light, does not absorb grease, dough does not adhere to it and while it possesses all the advantages of the marble bread board it is much cheaper and, of course, far lighter and easier to handle. If readers want to confer a favor upon their wives that will be forever appreciated, let them send $1 to the manufacturers, 101 Bay street, Toronto, for one of these boards.

HARD ON THE PATRONS.

THEIR MEMBER IN WEST WELLINGTON IS UNSEATED.

There Were Illegal Acts Proven—Too Much "Treating"—A Three-Cornered Fight in Hamilton—Hon. A. R. Dickey Nominated.

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 16.—The West Wellington election petition was opened here this morning before their Lordships Mr. Justice Rose and Mr. Justice McMahon. The petitioner, Thomas McQueen, a retired farmer, sought to have the defendant Tucker unseated and disqualified on account of corrupt practices by himself and by agents with his knowledge.

There were originally 150 charges, which have been reduced to 18. Charge No. 11 was first taken up. It was to the effect that Tucker had said, prior to the election, he would see an account settled for blacksmithing, done on his father's account. Their Lordships held that there had been no violation of the law.

Charges 5 and 10 were then taken up. Ous Hambly, a clerk at White's grocery, Drayton, testified that Tucker threatened to withdraw his patronage from their store unless they supported him, and had not dealt there since the election.

Mr. White admitted in evidence that he said to Tucker that it was only right Tucker should support those who supported him, but that White had promised to vote for Allan.

Several other charges were investigated, including one of treating at a Clifford hotel, which was proven, and the election voided and defendant disqualified.

Tucker, Patron, defeated A. S. Allan, Reform, at the general election in June by a majority of 283, the vote standing:
Tucker 1718, Allan 1435.

TO RESUME THE TOUR.

At the time of the death of the late Premier a number of the Dominion ministers were engaged in addressing meetings in the western part of the province. A number of the meetings, which had already been advertised, as well as a number in the eastern part of the province, which had been arranged for, had to be abandoned. All the meetings which had been announced or promised at that time are now shortly to be held by several members of the Dominion Government. The first meeting will be held at Galt on the evening of Monday, Jan. 28. This will be followed by one at St. Mary's on Tuesday, the 29th; at Listowel, on Wednesday, the 30th; in South Essex, on Thursday, the 31st; at Blenheim, on Friday, Feb. 1, and at Chatham, on Saturday, Feb. 2. The remainder of the meetings will be held shortly after those named in the list already given.

BOOMING CHAPLEAU IN QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, Jan. 16.—The rumors of a general election are being circulated about town; special despatches from Ottawa received today fail to confirm the rumors. In the clubs and political circles the name of Hon. Lieut.-Governor Chapleau is mentioned as the future member of the Cabinet and a leader of the coming election. Government organs in Quebec unofficially give credit to this rumor.

THREE-CORNERED FIGHT IN HAMILTON

The Hamilton Herald says that there is every probability of a three cornered fight in that city at the next election. The candidates mentioned are: A. McKay, M.P., and P. C. Blaicher, Conservative; A. T. Wood and T. H. Macpherson, Reform; A. D. Stewart and William Hendrie, jr., Independent.

COMING CONVENTIONS.

The Liberals of West Elgin will hold a convention on Feb. 12, to choose a candidate for the Dominion Parliament.

A Liberal convention for Macdonald constituency has been called to meet at Portage la Prairie on Feb. 22.

HON. A. R. DICKEY BY ACCLAMATION.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 16.—Hon. A. R. Dickey, Secretary of State, was returned by acclamation.

WARM IN BROOKLYN.

The Street Railway Man's Strike Assumes Angry Proportions.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 16.—It is feared there will be bloodshed if the trolley companies try to run their cars today. For the first time since the struggle began, the strikers made open threats that they would kill anybody who tried to take their places. Moreover, reports came to the police that many of the strikers were arming themselves.

Before the police went out on duty today, by order of Supt. Campbell, every man had to offer his revolver for inspection.

Master Workman John J. Harrigan, who is in charge of some of the strikers at Flat Bush, was arrested this morning. He was charged by Frank Sweetbread, an electrician, with having stoned the Brooklyn Heights Railway Company's repair waggon. At 8.20 o'clock this morning two of the cars which the Brooklyn Heights Company had slipped out on the Flat Bush line came back. A crowd of one hundred strikers met the cars and stoned them. The police under Inspector McKelvey charged them, and the strikers retreated. No arrests were made.

TO UNSEAT KENNEDY.

Quo Warranto Proceedings Taken by Ex-Mayor R. J. Fleming.

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—All necessary documents have been prepared, and but few steps remain to be taken to legally test, by quo warranto proceedings, the election of Mayor Kennedy.

These charges are:

1. That polling booths were kept open by Deputy Returning officers after 5 p. m., the legal hour for closing.

2. That rigs were hired and paid for by Mayor Kennedy and his agents.

3. That Mayor Kennedy and his agents were guilty of corruption.

4. That Mayor Kennedy and his agents were guilty of bribery and undue influence.

Section five charges Mayor Kennedy and his agents with having influenced certain of the Deputy Returning officers not to place their initials on the back of certain ballots known to be in favor of R. J. Fleming, and that certain promises of gifts and promises of lucrative employment were made in case they should refrain from marking said ballots.

CASIMIR-PERIER RESIGNS

The President of France Steps Down and Creates an Unpleasant State of Affairs in the Provinces—A Crisis.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Jean Pierre Paul Casimir Perier has resigned the Presidency of France, announcing his resignation to a specially summoned meeting of the Cabinet last night. The announcement of his action was at first not believed, but as the news spread it was received everywhere with the greatest consternation. Crowds gathered at all the newspaper offices and in the public halls discussing the situation and seeking fullest particulars.

M. Challemel Lacour, President of the Senate, said that he had not yet decided whether the National Assembly to elect a successor to President Perier would be convened on the 18th or 19th. The date will probably be announced today at the meeting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. M. Perier has expressed his inability to solve the problem created by the resignation of Premier Dupuy and other ministers, and regrets that having been drawn within the lines of party struggles he must leave the presidency to be able to defend himself.

WHY CASIMIR-PERIER RESIGNED.

The recently resigned president was sub-secretary of State in the Cabinet that concluded the railway conventions of 1883. According to reliable authorities he looked upon the adverse vote of the Chamber of Deputies on the question on Monday as a personal reflection on him, although he was not a voting member of the Cabinet in 1883. Whether or not this is the true reason for his resignation, it shows that M. Perier will go to great lengths against the Socialistic element whom he regards as stirring up a revolution.

At half past seven in the evening the Chamber was unaware of his intention to resign, although he had privately informed M. M. Challemel-Lacour of his perplexity. The announcement of his resignation created quite a sensation among the Deputies.

SEVENTY-FIVE PEOPLE KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

All But Three Members of the Butte Fire Brigade Killed at a Fire—One Hundred and Fifty People Injured as Well A Fearful Catastrophe.

BUTTE, Mont., Jan. 16.—Precisely at 9.55 o'clock last night the fire department responded to a call from box 72, which proved to be the call of death to nearly the entire department. The fire was supposed to be in the store of Kenyon Connell, or the Butte Hardware Company's warehouse. Both contained powder.

The men had barely started to work when their was an explosion which shook Butte to its very foundation. The powder in the warehouse blew up, spreading death and ruin to all who were near. All but three of the firemen were killed.

MUTILATED BODIES.

As soon as the stun of the shock passed away, while some ran in terror, other spectators immediately began pulling the mutilated bodies of the firemen and injured from the proximity of the flames. From all over the city people began moving toward the fire and the crowd increased within five minutes.

Just then a second explosion almost equal in volume to the first heightened the terror and spread death and desolation among scores of citizens. Parts of bodies were buried hundreds of feet away. A man near the Northern Pacific water tank was almost struck by the leg and thigh of a human being, driven with the force of dynamite from the fearful scene.

Five minutes later a third explosion occurred, but it was a mild one, and it is believed that very few if any were injured by it. The disaster had all occurred in 15 minutes—The most horrible quarter of an hour in Butt's history.

A HORRIBLE SCENE.

The scene after the explosions resembled a field of battle more than anything else. The dead were strewn everywhere, and the cries and groans of the injured and dying presented a scene altogether unearthly. Blood and brains were spattered about. Here were legs and arms, yonder were pieces of flesh and entrails. Between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern depots, a space of 300 feet, the ground was literally covered with parts of human beings and with the dead and injured. The scene was one of utter and desolate destruction. Houses in the vicinity were badly wrecked, as if a cyclone had struck them. One of the rescuing corps gathered 27 dead bodies in one place. Eight were in another. Two and three were in groups here and there. The rescuers pulled some of the bodies out still quivering, the remnants of human beings still groaning, while legs and arms had been torn off.

SCORES DEAD, HUNDREDS INJURED.

Every vehicle in the city was brought into service to carry away the scores of dead and the hundreds of injured. The hospitals were filled. The spare rooms in the hotels were taken and private houses were thrown open where it was necessary.

The loss of life is variously estimated at from fifty to seventy-five, and the wounded will probably exceed one hundred and fifty.

ANARCHY IN MONTREAL.

A Physical Force Army—The Mayor Receives A Visit and a Warning.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—About four thousand unemployed workingmen were at the City Hall this morning, and a deputation introduced by William Darlington, interviewed the mayor. Darlington, who is a prominent labor leader and organizer, stated that he had been asked to organize a physical force association. Three hundred anarchists could be mustered in Montreal just now.

The Mayor appointed Friday next for a public meeting to discuss the matter.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Break Jail.

BUFFALO, Jan. 16.—Two Canadian pickpockets named George Stone and Robert Cameron attempted to break jail. They procured a table knife in some mysterious manner and began sawing the bars on the windows which overlook the railway tracks. The saw was soon discovered by Detectives Sullivan and Geary, who made an examination of the room where the prisoners were confined during the day.

The Premier's Health.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell the Premier, was greatly improved in health today. This afternoon he went out for a drive, the first time he has been out of doors since his return from Halifax.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Chairman Cahill, in presenting the report of the Finance Committee, stated that the unusually large number of accounts which would be presented was the result, no doubt, of the advertisement which had been published, asking that all persons having bills against the town should put them in at once. The report was as follows:

The Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 17 1895.

Good morning!

Admiral Freemantle, commanding the British squadron in Chinese waters, was a short time since ordered, by force if necessary, to block any attempt on the part of the Japanese fleet to ascend the Yang-tse-Kiang river. It is now reported that the Admiral has received instructions to follow the movements of the Japanese at sea. The situation in the East, from an Imperial standpoint, is becoming critical.

Thirty-three fatilities have been reported for the last season in the Alps, which is less than the average. Four persons met their deaths by avalanches or falling stones, six by exposure to the weather, fourteen missed their footing and fell down precipices, three were killed by lightning, one fell into a glacier fissure, one lost while seeking edelwiess and four cases are unexplained.

Mr. Maclean told the East York convention that the Liberal party is the greatest enemy this country has to-day. It is doubtful if a dozen men even at a Conservative convention can be made to believe such rubbish as that. On the contrary, such an offensive and unfounded assertion must go far to convince the friends of the member for East York of total unfitness for the position he occupies.

Some years ago a five-day passage across the Atlantic was thought to be madness. Now it is seriously proposed to build ships that will do it in three and a half days. Several shipowners have said that the paying limit had been reached in the Lucania and Campania, and no larger boats would be built. Mr. Glynn, chairman of the Liverpool Dock Board, replies that the talk about the paying limit had been reached in the Lucania is ridiculous. Twenty years ago the boats employed in the Atlantic trade were 220 feet long. Now they are 600.

Some of the papers are reviving the story that a general election will be brought on before another session of Parliament, not because there is any particular reason for appealing to the country now, but because "they say" that some such move is in contemplation. Before Sir John Tumphson's death it was freely stated that this was the programme, but after Sir Mackenzie Bowell's elevation to the premiership the talk was that he would want to hold office for at least one session before going to the people. The point of the whole thing is, of course, that everything politically is at sixes and sevens at present, and with so much uncertainty in the situation, all the guessers are wearing their brains thin in the endeavor to find out just how the cat will jump. It is perhaps doubtful if the members of the government themselves have any very clear idea as to what the programme is to be, but it is significant that there has been no talk of an immediate revival of the Ministerial stumping tour.

THE NEXT ELECTION.

We agree with the Hamilton Herald that there seems to be no good reason for the assumption in some quarters that it is the intention of the Premier and his supporters to bring on a general election before another session of Parliament is held in order to dodge the Separate School question. The Privy Council may or may not intend to decide that the Dominion Government has jurisdiction in the Manitoba Schools matter. At any rate the decision is not yet forthcoming, and it is necessary that it should be immediately acted upon when it is, assuming that it will be along the lines hinted at. And nothing is so obvious as the fact that the Government needs time to collects its wits.

Sir Mackenzie, shrewd politician and all that he is, needs to get his hands well on the ropes before coming out of the fastnesses. He is too new as Premier to be sure of his ground, and will naturally want to find out more about it before taking a step that may be all right or may be all wrong. Sir John Thompson had been in harness long enough to get thoroughly into the drift of things, but it is hardly expected that a new comer, no matter how extended is his political experience may have been in other directions could step into office of First Minister and go quietly on from where Sir John left off.

It is hard to tell, of course, how things may go, but there does not seem to be sufficient ground for assuming that there will be an election before the House mests The programme is more likely to be a short session with an election following close on its heels. This will give the Conservatives time to catch their wind and mature their plans, and Sir Mackenzie will feel all the more confident with the prestige of a session of Parliament behind. It will give him confidence in himself—and inspire his followers with confidence—and no one who has not been through a political fight knows how important a thing confidence is.

In the meantime those who think a general election is imminent will have their notion confirmed by the fact that it is officially announced to-day that the Ministerial stumping tour is to be resumed.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for February.

In the February number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly the momentous conditions and prospects confronting Nicholas II., the young Czar of Russia. "On the Threshold of a Reign" are the subject of a peculiarly well-informed article by Valerien Gribayedoff. This is richly illustrated with pen drawings by the author, and a large number of rare portraits. Closely associated with the great Eastern Question, also as well as possessing a highly picturesque interest of its own, is M. de Blowitz's account of "A Trip to Bosnia-Herzegovina." Theo Tracy tells the fascinating "Story of the Silkworm," charmingly illustrated with photographs specially taken for the purpose in the famous silk-raising districts of Friuli, in Northern Italy. The breezy log of "A Yachting Cruise in Scotch Waters," with numerous sketches of the same, is contributed by Commodore John MacRae, of the Broklyn Yacht Clubs. Other notable illustrated articles in this brilliant number of FRANK LESLIE's are: "Wonders of the Edison Kinetoscope," by Antonia K. L. Dickson: "Among the Veddahs of Ceylon," by F. Fitz-Roy Dixon; "The Mechanism of the Stage," by Arthur Hornblow; and Irvin Allen's delightful Winter paper, entitled "The Best of Seasons." Short tales of uncommon excellence are "Dely!" by Nora K. Marble; "The Mystery of the Forty-second Street Murder," by Champion Bissell; and "The Story of a Nail," by Charles V. Cusachs.

SLANDER.

A whisper woke the air—
  A soft light tone and low,
  Yet barbed with shame and woe;
Now might it only perish there,
  Not further go!
Ah, me! a quick and eager ear
  Caught up the little meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear,
  And so it wanders round.
From ear to ear—from lip to ear,
  Until it reached a gentle heart,
  And that—it broke!

Low as it seemed to other ears,
It came—a thunder crash to hers,
  The fragile so fair and gay—
That guileless girl so pure and true.
'Tis said a lovely humming bird
  That in a fragrant lily lay,
  And dreamed the summer morn away,
Was killed but by a gun's report
Some idle boy had fired in sport!
  The very sound a death blow came!

And thus her happy heart that beat
With love and hope so fast and sweet
  Shrined in its lily, too,
  For who the maid that knew
But owned the delicate flower-like grace
Of her young form and face?)
  When first the word
  Her light heart heard,
  It fluttered like the frightened bird,
Then shut its wings and sighed,
And with a silent shudder—died!

CHAPTER OF SUICIDES.

A BANK CASHIER STEALS $60,000 AND DIES BY HIS OWN HAND.

A Rash Act of a Mother Whose Mind Became Unbalanced by Christian Science Doctrines—A Young Man Blows Out His Brains.

DOVER, N.H., Jan. 16.—Isaac F. Abbott, cashier of the Dover National bank, is a defaulter, and the amount of the defalcation is estimated to be about $60,000. He was also cashier of the Five Cents Savings bank, and [illegible] city treasurer. Abbott's bond was issued for $50,000 by the North American Guarantee Co. of Montreal, which has been apprised of the default. At 3 o'clock this afternoon just before U.S. Marshal Campbell arrived at the house of Isaac Abbott, for the purpose of arresting him, a brother of Abbott heard the report of a pistol, and rushing to his brother's room found him lying on the floor with his face covered with blood. Life was extinct.

Abbott left in his brother's possession a statement of his defalcations in an envelope addressed to Examiner Dow. That gentleman refused to make the statement public. [illegible] Dow, the bank examiner, had of the defalcation, was the discovery of a note for $30,000 among the bank's resources, signed by [illegible]. This led to the questioning of Mr. Abbott on Friday night, with the result that he locked the vault with everything inside and adjusted it so that it would not open until today. The name of Mr. Abbott's young housekeeper is Miss Mertie Nelson, and it was her signature that appeared on the note. The available funds of the city are locked up and the city clerk can issue no more cheques at present. The School Board money and Waterworks department funds are also in the bank. Fears are entertained that the bank is worse off than was expected this morning. Abbott was not considered extravagant. He lived in an elegant house, which was built with his wife's money and cost $20,000. He was never known to gamble, and only made short business trips out of town. He was a member of the Washington street Baptist church and was one of the principal backers of Rev. Frank K. Chase, who made a big temperance crusade several years ago.

[illegible]

MONCTON, N.B., Jan. 16.—The community was shocked today to hear that Herbert Campbell, son of Mr. John Campbell, of the Intercolonial railway office, had shot himself through the heart while in bed. [illegible] the household was startled by the sound of a pistol shot apparently in the room of the unfortunate young man. His mother hastily made her way to the door and she was horrified to find her son breathing his last. A 32 calibre revolver, which had been used by the young man to end his life, lay beside the bed.

A Mother's Suicide.

[illegible], Ont., Jan. 16.—Mrs. [illegible] left her home, near [illegible] Mills, about 2 o'clock this morning. She took her baby, of eighteen months, with her, walking down to the river, where [illegible] plunged in. She left a note on the table for her husband, who slept in another room, saying that God had called her. Christian science doctrines had unbalanced her mind. The body has not yet been recovered.

NEWFOUNDLAND CRISIS.

Confederation With Canada Looked Upon as an Avenue of Hope.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 16.—[illegible] has completed arrangements for reopening the Rope walk which employs [illegible] hands. This is the first break in the dark cloud and is welcomed. Active measures of relief for the poor are in operation. All pressing cases have so far been met but the destitution is appalling. Confederation with Canada is rapidly rising in public favor. A Royal commission to prepare the way and to arrange terms is regarded as inevitable.

It is reported that the Government here is in correspondence with the Canadian Government regarding the terms for Newfoundland's admission into the Canadian confederation. The whole question, it is understood, will be submitted to the colonial legislature next week. The Governor is in constant cable communication with the Imperial authorities.

COLLIERY DISASTER.

One Hundred Miners are Entombed in a Hanley, Eng., Mine.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Diglake colliery at Hanley was flooded this morning while about 200 miners were at work. The water came from a part of the mine which had been closed for some time. It swept through the workings with tremendous force, carrying with it timbers, cars and tools. The men nearest the shafts were rescued and others fled to remote workings where they would be above the level of the flood, although cut off from the shafts. It is thought that about 100 of the men were saved and that the rest were drowned. The estimate is only approximate as nobody knows how many of those below ground are still alive. Engines have pumped up water for hours and the flood in the mine had subsided greatly at 11 o'clock.

Earthquake Shocks.

PRINCETON, Ind., Jan. 16.—Two distinct earthquakes were felt here at 9 and 10 o'clock last night. At a small town, about a mile from the city, the shocks were severe, and they did much damage to houses. They were preceded by a rumbling noise.

THE WALLED HERD.

STRANGE STORY OF AN INACCESSIBLE BAND OF CATTLE.

A Pyramid of Bones Marks the Spot Where Their Ancestors Fell Over a Precipice Twenty Years Ago—Dwell In Safety Where Man Has Never Trod.

In the wildest portion of the west, 71 miles northwest of Meeker, where, in 1879, the Utes massacred the Meeker family and every one at the agency, is the most wonderful cattle ranch in the world. Within a space of five miles in length and three miles in width roams a herd upon whose sides the branding iron has never been placed and around whose horns the lariat has never tightened. But a score or even fewer of them have ever seen a man or horse or other animal of their kind, and, in fact, their kin except at a distance of nearly 800 feet high above them. Ute Indians call them "p'check up," or old buffalo. And yet if an Indian who has seen them should be asked about it he would laugh and shake his head, and all the information obtainable would be, "P'check-up; 'em red; no ketch 'um!" There are more than 1,000 of this band, and yet no man owns them, nor is there a man, white or black or copper colored, who has ever been able to possess a single hoof of these fat and tempting beeves.

The cattle are in a prison. Out of it there is one method of escape, but to travel this road means death to the adventurous one. There is no way to get in except it be by use of a rope 1,000 feet in length. As the Indians say, "Heap big fall; no ketch 'um; no other away." On the two long sides of the oblong space in which these cattle roam rise precipitous and even overhanging rocks for 800 or 900 feet—yawning, black and insurmountable. At either end seethes and rushes the Yampa or Bear river. For miles above and miles below it plunges and struggles on in its headlong haste to reach the arms of its parent, the distantly [illegible] deeper Green river. Like the wonderful [illegible] of Colorado, this home of the imprisoned herd has no likeness in the world. It recalls in its inaccessibility the marvelous [illegible] of the valley of verdure, into which Mayne Reid's adventurers only found their way by the assistance of the balloon.

The story of the way in which these cattle came there is as strange as their existence is curious. Over 20 years ago, when the government troops were pursuing the Mormon murderers of the innocent victims of the Mountain Meadow massacre, the Danites, or Avenging Angels of the Mormons, fled for their lives into what was then literally the wilderness. A few of those who had been the blindest followers of Lee, the Mormon fiend incarnate, whose hands were red with the blood of women and children, found in their wanderings a pretty valley of [illegible], which flows from the Wasatch range into the Green river. They struck their stakes, built their [illegible] and [illegible] had a vision, which told him there to stay. They could hardly have chosen in all Utah a more fertile or more isolated spot. They called it Ashley, and about them have since gathered others of their sect until where the refugees posted their pickets on the lonely heights of the then unknown, has grown a thriving village. It is 140 miles from the Union Pacific railroad south and 140 miles north of the Rio Grande Western. Until within a few years past it has been isolated entirely, but now it is but 30 miles from the Ute reservation, and furnishing supplies for the agency forms quite a business for the community.

It is a tenet of the Danites that robbing or theft from a gentile is no crime. So [illegible] it be only a cunning trick [illegible] John Wyckliffe, one of the Mormon [illegible] of the new town, and his three sons made a night sortie on Henry's ford in Wyoming and carried away 800 head of cattle ranging there. This was in 1874. The owners of the cattle discovered their loss a few days after they were gone and started in pursuit.

The thieves and the stolen herd had reached a mesa of inviting grass at sundown one day and halted to camp for the night. A terrible storm arose. The lightning flashed incessantly, and the thunder pealed and crashed with unremitting fury. The four men desperately held the terror stricken cattle by riding around them constantly and chanting some weird tune. But the wild fearfulness of the furious storm excited the brutes beyond measure. They snorted and groaned, every moment growing less subject to control. All at once, as if by one mad impulse, they stampeded.

John Wyckliffe and his sons met their fate amid the lightning's glare and the thunder's roar. They endeavored to head off the stampeding herd. Instead they and their horses were swept on and driven in the terror to escape the charge of the maddened animals over the brink of the awful precipice which frowns up from the waters of the Bear. After them plunged the whole fright crazed herd, and down to the bottom of the fearful fall went horses, riders and horned creatures. Out of this strange plunge of life to what was seemingly certain death to all a few of the herd were not killed. Those which had gone ahead formed a cushion of death. Maimed, stunned, but still invested with a spark of life, when the dread storm was over the living cattle crawled out from the mass beneath them and formed a nucleus for the herd which now roams at will within its rocky confines. On the bank of the river, stretching back a few hundred yards, grow succulent grasses, and upon this the cattle have propagated and thrived. In looking over the edge of the precipice one can see that they are small and as wild and agile as deer. They have been shot at to see the effect and have learned to regard the appearance of a man, whether Indian or white, as a menace from which they flee, clambering over rocks and through underbrush in the chase to a point of concealment.

The place where the thieves and their horses and the herd fell is plainly marked by a pyramid of bones, which rises to the height of 20 feet. The ghastly reminder and relics of the human and animal victims of the terrible leap shine forth white and glistening when the sun is high and smites that spot with its full glare. The progeny of the surviving animals from the fall are fat and sleek, though, and have their sunny beds, deerlike, where they lie for warmth in the winter, and to them the monument of skeletons is no source of disquietude. There is no fierce mountain lion or more dangerous bear, nor, in fact, any other animate thing within this cow garden of Eden. As yet, too, no man has been able to reach or disturb them.—San Francisco Examiner.

POETIC JUSTICE.

We've heard of the summer girl too much.
We are tired of the modes and styles
By which she endeavors to lure and clutch
Unwary youth in her wiles.

Why hasn't the poet extolled in rhyme
The girl who discreetly goes
Away from town for a quiet time
And to get a rest from her beaux?

Why doesn't he sing of the maid whose soul
Is attuned to nature's tone,
Who prefers by herself through the woods to stroll
And to gaze at the moon alone?

Why cannot we chant of these girls that take
Two gowns and a sailor hat
And hie them away to some deadly lake
Which never a man is at?

Why shouldn't the poet adopt this plan
For a change? I will tell you why:
Because he's in general a truthful man,
And he doesn't like to lie.
—Henry Wood in Home and Country.

LUCK.

He got in at Ipswich with seven different weekly papers under his arm. I noticed that each one insured its readers against death or injury by railway accident. He arranged his luggage upon the rack above him, took off his hat and laid it on the seat beside him, mopped his bald head with a red silk handkerchief and then set to work steadily to write his name and address upon each of the seven papers. I sat opposite to him and read Punch. I always take the old humor when traveling. I find it soothing to the nerves.

Passing over the points at Manningtree the train gave a lurch, and a horseshoe he had carefully placed in the rack slipped through the netting and fell with a musical ring upon his head.

He appeared neither surprised nor angry. Having stanched the wound with his handkerchief, he stooped and picked the horseshoe up, glanced at it with, as I thought, an expression of reproach and dropped it gently out of the window.

"Did it hurt you?" I asked.

It was a foolish question; I understood so the moment I had uttered it. The thing must have weighed three pounds at the least. It was an exceptionally large and heavy shoe. The bump on his head was swelling visibly before my eyes. Any one but an idiot must have seen that he was hurt. I expected an irritable reply. I should have given one myself had I been in his place. Instead, however, he seemed to regard the inquiry as a natural and kindly expression of sympathy.

"It did, a little," he replied.

"What were you doing with it?" I asked. It was an odd sort of thing for a man to be traveling with.

"It was lying in the roadway just outside the station," he explained. "I picked it up for luck."

He refolded his handkerchief so as to bring a cooler surface in contact with the swelling, while I murmured something genial about the inscrutability of Providence.

"Yes," he said, "I've had a deal of luck in my time, but it's never turned out well."

"I was born on a Wednesday," he continued, "which, as I daresay you know, is the luckiest day a man can be born on. My mother was a widow, and none of my relatives would do anything for me. They said it would be like taking coals to Newcastle helping a boy born on a Wednesday, and my uncle, when he died, left every penny of his money to my brother Sam as a slight compensation to him for having been born on a Friday. All I ever got was advice upon the duties and responsibilities of wealth when it arrived and entreaties that I would not neglect those with claims upon me when I came to be a rich man."

He paused while folding up his various insurance papers and placing them in the inside breast-pocket of his coat.

"Then there are black cats," he went on. "They're said to be lucky. Why, there never was a blacker cat than the one that followed me into my rooms in Bolsover street the very first night I took them."

"Didn't he bring you luck?" I inquired, finding that he had stopped.

A faraway look came into his sad eyes.

"Well, of course it all depends," he answered dreamily. "Maybe we'd never have suited one another. You can always look at it that way. Still I'd like to have tried."

He sat staring out of the window, and for awhile I did not care to intrude upon his evidently painful memories.

"What happened then?" I asked, however, at last.

He roused himself from his reverie.

"Oh," he said, "nothing extraordinary! She had to leave London for a time and gave me her pet canary to take charge of while she was away."

"But it wasn't your fault," I urged.

"No, perhaps not," he agreed, "but it created a coldness which others were not slow to take advantage of."

"I offered her the cat, too," he added, but more to himself than to me.

We sat and smoked in silence. I felt that the consolations of a stranger would sound weak.

"Piebald horses are lucky, too," he observed, knocking the ashes from his pipe against the window sash. "I had one of them once."

"What did it do to you?" I inquired.

"Lost me the best crib I ever had in my life," was the simple rejoinder. "The governor stood it a good deal longer than I had any right to expect, but you can't keep a man who is always drunk. It gives a firm a bad name."

"It would," I agreed.

"You see," he went on, "I never had the head for it. To some men it would not have so much mattered, but the very first glass was enough to upset me. I'd never been used to it."

"But why did you take it?" I persisted. "The horse didn't make you drink it, did he?"

"Well, it was this way," he explained, continuing to rub gently the lump, which was now about the size of an egg. "The animal had belonged to a gentleman who traveled in the wine and spirit line, and who had been accustomed to visit in the way of business almost every public house he came to. The result was you couldn't get that little horse past a public house—at least I couldn't. He sighted them a quarter of a mile off and made straight for the door. I struggled with him at first, but it was five to ten minutes' work getting him away, and folks used to gather round and bet on us. I think maybe I'd have stuck to it, however, if it hadn't been for a temperance chap who stopped one day and lectured the crowd about it from the opposite side of the street. He called me pilgrim, and said the little horse was Rollin or some such name, and kept on shouting out that I was to fight him for a heavenly crown. After that they called us 'Rolly and the pilgrim, fighting for the crown.' It riled me, that did, and at the very next house at which he pulled up I got down and said I'd come for two of Scotch. That was the beginning. It took me years to break myself of the habit.

"But there," he continued, "it has always been the same. I hadn't been a fortnight in my first situation before my employer gave me a goose weighing 18 pounds as a Christmas present."

"Well, that couldn't have done you any harm," I remarked. "That was lucky enough."

"So the other clerks said at the time," he replied. "The old gentleman had never been known to give anything away before in his life. 'He's taken a fancy to you,' they said. 'You are a lucky beggar.'"

He sighed heavily. I felt there was a story attached.

"What did you do with it?" I asked.

"That was the trouble," he remarked. "I did not know what to do with it. It was 10 o'clock on Christmas eve, just as I was leaving, that he gave it to me. 'Tiddling Bros. have sent me a goose, Biggles,' he said to me as I helped him on with his greatcoat. 'Very kind of 'em, but I don't want it myself. You can have it.'

"Of course I thanked him and was very grateful. He wished me a merry Christmas and went out. I tied the thing up in brown paper and took it under my arm. It was a fine bird, but heavy.

"Under all the circumstances, and it being Christmas time, I thought I would treat myself to a glass of beer. I went into a quiet little house at the corner of the lane and laid the goose on the counter.

"'That's a big un,' said the landlord. 'You'll get a good cut off him tomorrow.'

"His words set me thinking, and for the first time it struck me that I didn't want the bird; that it was no use to me at all. I was going to spend Christmas with my young lady's people in Kent."

"Was this the canary young lady?" I interrupted.

"No," he replied. "This was before that one. It was this goose I'm telling you of that upset this one. Well, her folks were big farmers. It would have been absurd taking a goose down to them, and I knew no one in London to give it to, so when the landlord came round again I asked him if he would care to buy it. I told him he could have it cheap.

"'I don't want it myself,' he answered. 'I've got three in the house already. Perhaps one of these gentlemen would like to make an offer.'

"He turned to a couple of chaps who were drinking gin. They didn't look to me worth the price of a chicken between them. The seediest said he'd like to look at it, however, and I undid the parcel. He mauled the thing pretty considerably and even examined me as to how I came by it, ending by upsetting half a tumbler of gin and water over it. Then he offered me half a crown. It made me so angry that I took the brown paper and the string in one hand and the goose in the other and walked straight out without saying a word.

"I carried it in this way for some distance, because I was excited and didn't care how I carried it, but as I cooled I began to reflect how ridiculous I must look. One or two boys evidently noticed the same thing. I stopped under a lamppost and tried to tie it again. I had a bag and an umbrella with me at the same time, and the first thing I did was to drop the goose into the gutter, which is just what I might have expected to do, attempting to handle four separate articles and three yards of string with one pair of hands. I picked up about a quart of mud with that goose and got the greater part of it over my hands and clothes and a fair quantity over the brown paper, and then it began to rain.

"I bundled everything up into my arms and made for the nearest pub, where I thought I would ask for a piece more string and make a neat job of it.

"The bar was crowded. I pushed my way to the counter and flung the goose down in front of me. The men nearest stopped talking to look at it, and a young fellow standing next to me said:

"'Well, you've killed it.' I dare say I did seem a bit excited.

"I had intended making another effort to sell it here, but they were clearly not the right sort. I had a pint of ale—for I was feeling somewhat tired and hot—scraped as much of the mud off the bird as I could, made a fresh parcel of it and came out.

"Crossing the road a happy idea occurred to me. I thought I would raffle it. At once I set to work to find a house where there might seem to be a likely lot. It cost me three or four whiskies—for I felt I didn't want any more beer, which is a thing which easily upsets me—but at length I found just the crowd I wanted, a quiet, domestic looking set, in a homely little place off the Goswell road.

"I explained my views to the landlord. He said he had no objection. He supposed I would stand drinks round afterward. I said I should be delighted to do so and showed him the bird.

"'It looks a bit poorly,' he said. He was a Devonshire man.

"'Oh, that's nothing,' I explained. 'I happened to drop it. That will all wash off.'

"'It smells a bit queer, too,' he said.

"'That's mud,' I answered. 'You know what London mud is. And a gentleman spilled some gin over it. You won't notice that when it's cooked.'

"'Well,' he replied, 'I don't think I'll take a hand myself, but if any other gent likes to that's his affair.'

"Nobody seemed enthusiastic. I started it at sixpence. I took a ticket myself. The potman had a free chance for superintending the arrangements and succeeded in inducing five other men, much against their will, to join us. I won it myself and paid out three and twopence for drinks. A solemn looking individual who had been snoring in a corner suddenly woke up as I was going out and offered me sevenpence ha'penny for it, why sevenpence I have never been able to understand. He would have taken it away, I should never have seen it again, and my whole life might have been different, but fate has always been against me. I replied with perhaps unnecessary hauteur that I wasn't a destitute Christmas dinner fund and walked out.

"It was getting late, and I had a long walk home to my lodgings. I was beginning to wish I had never seen the bird. I estimated its weight by this time to be 36 pounds.

"The idea occurred to me to sell it to a poulterer. I looked for a shop. I found one in Myddleton street. There wasn't a customer near it, but by the way the man was shouting you might have thought that he was doing all the trade of Clerkenwell. I took the goose out of the parcel and laid it on the shelf before him.

"'What's this?'

"'It's a goose,' I said. 'You can have it cheap.'

"He just seized the thing by the neck and flung it at me. I dodged, and it caught the back of my head. You can have no idea, if you've never been hit on the head with a goose, how it hurts. I picked it up and hit him back with it, and

BONNET, HAT AND CAP.

She wore a wreath of roses
The day that first we met,
With mighty pin and tiny string
Upon her tresses set.
"Art not afraid of wind and sun?
Thy hair hath nothing on it!"
She smiled. I found her very fair.
"Indeed, this is a bonnet."

I sat behind that lovely head—
'Twas at a matinee—
A vast white hat with nodding plumes
Completely blocked the way.
It hid the stalls, it hid the stage,
I longed to change my place,
For, perched upon the topmost coil,
It almost hid her face.

We met again on Newquay strand.
A wondrous sight were we,
Clad in gay garment, short and scant,
While round us surged the sea.
Alas, my vision sweet was fled!
My dream of love was o'er!
For, unadorned, behold her head—
An oilskin cap she wore!

Men, Women and Smell.

Two physiologists, Professors Nichols and Browne, have been making experiments to show the relative feebleness of women's senses in respect to smell. They took four odoriferous substances—essence of cloves, of garlic, lemon and prussic acid. With these they filled a series of bottles up to a single part in 2,000,000 of water. They then shuffled the bottles and called in 44 men and 38 women, all young and healthy, who, guided by their sense of smell, should arrange the bottles containing each tincture by itself. The results show, as the reporter testifies, that the women were not in it.

The nose of no woman could trace lemon beyond the 100,000 dilution, while men discovered it up to 250,000 limit. Prussic acid could not be detected beyond the 20,000 mixture by women, while men recognized it at the 100,000 part mixture. There were two men, however, with phenomenal noses, who identified prussic acid up to the 2,000,000 limit. The names of these two men have been mercifully concealed. What woman who values domestic peace would marry a man with such a nose for odors? Fancy with what beating heart she would listen for the scratch of his latchkey in the door with the knowledge of a pot that had boiled over in the morning or an old rubber shoe that had got into the furnace with the coal.—New York Sun.

Bastien-Lepage's First Work.

One day a manufacturer of antephelic milk asked Bastien-Lepage to make a sort of allegorical picture intended for an advertisement for his elixir of youth. The artist, making a virtue of necessity, painted a bright, gay picture, after the manner of Watteau's landscapes, with groups of young women dressed in the modern style approaching a fountain where cupids were gamboling. The painting finished, Bastien explained to the manufacturer his intention first of all to exhibit it at the Salon.

The perfumer wished for nothing better, but insisted on one condition—above the fountain was to be placed, on a scroll of all the colors of the rainbow, the name of the cosmetic and the address of the place where it was to be sold. Naturally Bastien refused, and the tradesman, disappointed of his advertisement, left him the picture for his pains. This painting was exhibited at the Salon of 1879 under the title of "Au Printemps."—"Jules Bastien-Lepage and His Art," A. Theuriet.

Misplaced Gallantry.

A judge, riding in the cars recently, from a single glance at the countenance of a lady by his side imagined he knew her and ventured to remark that the day was pleasant. She coyly answered:

"Yes."

"Why do you wear a veil?"

"Lest I attract attention."

"It is the province of gentlemen to admire," replied the gallant man of law.

"Not when they are married."

"But I am not."

"Indeed!"

"Oh, no. I'm a bachelor."

The lady quietly removed her veil, disclosing to the astonished magistrate the face of his mother-in-law.

SLEIGHS FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee recommended that two sets of single sleighs be bought for the Fire Department one for hose and one for hook and ladder The cost would be about $20 per set. The present set were too wide, and could be sold. Councillor Dawson thought one set would be sufficient. Councillor Hughes said it was an unnecessary outlay at this time of the year. The matter will be taken up by the new Fire, Water and Light Committee.

STREET AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Members of the Council:

GENTLEMEN—Your Street and Bridge Committee beg leave to report as follows: Your Committee, as instructed, advertised for tenders for 200 cords of stone for street purposes, and received 12 tenders. Of the tenders received from ratepayers the lowest was for 25 cords at $1.60 a cord, which, however, was subject to conditions as to the delivery of the stone. The next lowest was at $1.65 a cord and your Committee instructed the Street Inspector to take 25 cords of stone from any ratepayer of the town who would deliver them as required at $1.65 a cord, the stone to be all breakable and to include no whinstones or hardheads and to be subject to the inspection of the Street Inspector, the Inspector to report to the Committee when the quantity delivered amounted to 200 cords and the stone to be paid for upon the certificate of the Street Inspector.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

HENRY BEST,
Chairman.

Councillor Hall objected to the report. He wanted the quantity of stone limited to 200 cords. As the report read the committee could order several thousand cords. The report was amended as suggested, and adopted.

Councillor Hall reported on behalf of the Manufacturer's Committee, that the Universal Knitting Company of Weston, was in favor of locating in Peterborough if certain inducements were offered. The company was in a good financial condition and was not looking for bonuses. Their representative, Mr. Close, had recommended that the company remove to Peterborough under certain conditions, and the company now wanted to know what the town would do. Councillor Hall thought the new council should make an effort to come to terms with this company.

Moved by Councillor Roger, seconded by Councillor Dawson, "that it be referred to the Finance Committee to adjust with the village of Ashburnham the claim of the town for fire protection and to report upon terms for the future if such protection is to be continued.—Carried.

Frank LaPlante was voted a rebate of $15 on a pedlar's license on motion of Councillor Hughes. The rebate was strongly opposed by Councillor Dawson, but carried by a vote of 8 to 4.

Councillor Dawson moved that the equipment of the fire hall be insured, and that the Property Committee be instructed to negotiate the insurance.

Councillor White moved, seconded by Councillor Dawson, hat (a clause be inserted in all the contracts of the town, making nine hours constitute a day's work. Councillor Dawson strongly favored the resolution. Councillor Hall thought it was a matter that the dying council should not legislate upon. Put to a vote the motion was carried.

Moved by Councillor Cahill, seconded by Councillor Dawson: That this Council, before its final adjournment this evening, desires to place on the records of the Council the loss the town is about to sustain in closing the services for the ensuing year of Messrs. McIlwaine, Batten, Roger, Hughes, Hall, Kelly and White, who have each rendered valuable service to the town during their respective terms in the Council.

Upon moving the resolution Councillor Cahill said:

"In moving this resolution, Mr. Mayor, I feel every word I say. We are all subject to the will of the people. Of those who are retiring voluntarily it is not necessary to say anything. Of Councillor Roger it can be said he has done good service in the Council. Mr. White has done conscientious work. Mr. Kelly has grown grey in the town's service. In fact, I think, all the retiring members have labored only in the interest of the town and labored well." Councillor Cahill made a very happy speech.

Councillor Dawson endorsed the sentiments of the mover, adding a few felicitous remarks.

In putting the resolution to a vote, the Mayor took occasion to address the five retiring members. He reviewed briefly the work they had done. He was glad to have men in the Council who were willing to devote so much time to the work that had to be done. He was sorry to see them leaving and trusted that in coming years they would again be found in the Council. The Council of 1894 had extended to him every courtesy and treated him with respect and consideration. He thought the principle of constantly changing the personnel of the Council was wrong. It would be more to the interest of the town if six of the old Council could be retained each year, and only six new members be elected. One year's service was only sufficient to enable a Councillor to get an insight into the workings of the Council, and his full usefulness seldom began except in the second year.

Each of the retiring members made brief replies. Councillor White said he believed his defeat was due to the prevalent belief that he had used his influence to keep down the workingmen's wages. His stand on the question had been misconceived by the people and his words misconstrued. Mayor Kendry and Councillor Dawson sustained Mr. White in the statement that he did not seek to reduce or keep down wages.

The Council then adjourned.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting of the Fair Managers—An Excellent Showing.

President George E. Elliott presided at the annual meeting of the west Peterborough Agricultural Society in the Council chamber yesterday afternoon, at which there was a large attendance of the members.

THE FINANCES.

The financial statement of the year was presented, read and adopted. It showed a very satisfactory state of affairs, inasmuch as the expenditures of the year had exceeded the receipts by only $11.60. While the total assets of the company are $2,500 the total liabilities amount to the small sum of $287.87.

From the Agricultural Society of the townships of Smith and Ennismore and the village of Lakefield a report was received stating that the following officers had been elected:

President—Robert H. Braden.
Vice-President—H. O. Garbutt.
Secretary-Treasurer—Wesley Sherin.
Directors—Edward Fitzgerald, Levi Payne, J. H. McWilliams, William Abbott, R. Q. Dench, Edward Elliott, J. R. Fraser, M. D, R. J. Galvin and G. W. Fitzgerald.
Auditors—Andrew Fairbairn and William M. Graham.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President.—Geo. E. Elliott.
1st Vice President.—Wm Rutherford.
2nd Vice-President.—Jas. Davidson.
Directors.—Messrs. Harry Winch, Robt. Vance, T. M. Hunter, Thos. Hall, John Stothard, Dawson Kennedy, A. P. Morgan, R. H. Braden and Jno. H. Garbutt.
Auditors.—J. Fred Davidson and W. J. Hall.

The following gentlemen were made honorary members upon the motion of Messrs. Wm. Collins and J. R. Stratton: The Members of Parliament for East and West Peterborough, the Mayor of Peterborough, Warden of the County, President of the Board of Trade, President of the Street Railway, the Reeve of North Monaghan and Messrs. John Carnegie, John Garbutt, R. A. Morrow and John McClelland.

Mr. Vance of Ida, and Mr. W. J. Westington of Haldimand, were nominated for members of the Agricultural and Arts Association. Mr. Vance was the unanimous choice.

The report of the Directors was read by the president as follows:

To the Members of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society:

GENTLEMEN,—In submitting our annual report, it gives us pleasure to state that this year has been fully up to, and in many respects ahead, of any previous year.

At our last annual meeting we felt warranted in predicting, on account of the operations of the society for 1894, a large surplus of receipts over expenditures. This expectation would have been realized but for circumstances over which we had no control. Our claim to the use of the Driving Park ceased at the close of 1893. Therefore, it was necessary to make provision for supplying its place, and to this end we had to make changes in our own grounds to meet our requirements. It was necessary to provide a horse ring, and this made it also necessary to remove our main building. A practically new third of a mile ring was made and a new grand stand erected. The change, including incidental expenses, involved an expenditure of about $500. This amount used up what should have constituted our surplus. However, these improvements, which are permanent, were only made after careful consideration by your directors. We believe that the money has been judiciously expended, and that the resulting improvements will admirably serve the purposes of the Society for some time to come.

Our expenditure in 1894, including the above improvements and necessary expenditures for successfully carrying on the exhibition and paying the prize list, amounted to over $3,300; and we are pleased to be able to state that all liabilities arising out of these expenditures have been fully met, and we can present you with a clean sheet, but not, however, without drawing upon our reserve fund to a certain extent to secure such a result.

The thanks of the Society are due, and are hereby heartily extended, to all those who in any way contributed to the success of our annual exhibition—to the Street Railway Company for substantial aid in removing the main building and enlarging the horse ring, to the County Council for their annual grant, and to the merchants and hotel men of the town for handsome voluntary contributions.

In conclusion your directors wish to say that their object has been to make the Central the finest exhibition in the Midland District, and the success achieved in this direction has been reasonably realized by the cordial co-operation by the members and the public generally, and to meet the fullest measure of success we trust we can fully rely upon a continuation of the cooperation and sympathy of the citizens of both town and county.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. E. ELLIOTT,
President.

An Engineer in Trouble.

BUFFALO, Jan. 15.—Two more arrests are likely to follow that of Herbert T. McLeod, the Canadian engineer who was taken into custody on Tuesday afternoon on a charge of illegally obtaining naturalization papers. There are two witnesses who testified to the length of residence of McLeod. Both these witnesses, Dr. J. G. Harper and Miss Jean Lawrence, are former Canadians, and neither is supposed to be a resident of the United States. The legality of the naturalization papers issued on the testimony of the women is questionable. McLeod's case came before the United States Commissioner today, and after one witness had testified the case was put over till tomorrow to permit McLeod to prepare his defence. It is understood that his father telegraphed to him from Canada this morning advising him to retain counsel and fight his case.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 17, 1895.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT HAPPENING OF THE DAY.

Is Improving.

The condition of Mr. Aaron Comstock, who was so seriously injured on Tuesday, is much improved. The physicians attending him are hopeful that no complications will develop.

The remains of the late Mr. Owen Curran were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral was very large. Rev. Father Casey performed the burial services both at the house and at the grave.

The Curlers' Excursion.

The return fare to Toronto on January 23rd, which is the date of the Peterborough Curling Club's excursion, is $2, a special rate extended to the club and their friends. A large number will take advantage of the cheap rate and accompany the curlers.

The Lost is Found.

Sometime during the waning days of autumn Mr. Gus. Sawyers lost his valuable dog—an animal of unusual blood, pedigree and sagacity, and therefore much prized. The dog has returned, and like unto the sheep which Little Bo Peep, of the story book, lost, it brought its caudal appendage with it. The prodigal was found on the market square yesterday.

Mark Your Seats.

Secure your seats now for the event of the season. Plan of hall and reserved seats for the Burns Anniversary Concert to be held in the Opera House on Wednesday evening, January 23rd, now open at the Peterborough Bookstore. Grand special engagement of five artists of established reputation in a double programme of high order, under auspices of St. Andrew's Society.

Peterborough Should Secure This.

The Gould Coupler Company of Depew, N.Y., will probably establish a branch factory in Canada, it is said, giving employment to about 180 men.—Railroad Gazette. Has the Board of Trade done anything to induce this company to locate in Peterborough? If not, would it not be a good idea for them to enter into communication with the company and ascertain its intentions.

Committee on Appointments.

The committee on appointments of the Board of Education met last night for the consideration of important business. Among other things the inspectorship was dealt with. The committee took action, but what it was is known only to the members, who decided it was advisable to keep the matter secret until the next meeting of the Board, which will take place on the first Tuesday in February.

Death of James McKim.

The death of Mr. James McKim, whose precarious condition was announced in the Times, occurred early yesterday morning at his residence on McDonnell street. Deceased was in his 29th year and leaves a wife and two children. A short time ago he contracted pneumonia which was the ultimate cause of his untimely demise. He was a prominent member of Peterborough Lodge I.O.O.F. and Peterborough Lodge C.O.F. and also the Machinists union. The funeral will take place at 2.30 tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Oddfellows' to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Port Hope Poultry Show.

The Port Hope Poultry and Pet Stock Association's annual show was opened on Tuesday afternoon by the Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture. Mr. A. G. Gilbert, of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa is also a vistor there. Mr. L. G. Jarvis, Guelph, is judge on fowls, and Mr. J. B. Johnson, Toronto, judge on pigeons. Messrs. Barber & Daniels, Toronto, have a large exhibit of fowls. Messrs. Hare & Bace, Whitby; Messrs. Dustan & Knight, Bowmanville, and many other well-known breeders are represented. There is a marked improvement in the quality of the stock shown. Dressed poultry forms a part of the show and has a very large entry of turkeys, geese, duck and cross-bred fowls. The show will close tomorrow evening.

Furniture.

Nearly every family needs a little additional furniture every year, and it is an advantage to know where you can get what you want and know that you are getting value. A. Clegg has just what you need. He is buying for you every day. Always looking for best values for you, he knows that goods well bought are half sold. If you need furniture you cannot afford to buy until you have seen his goods [illegible]. Three good [illegible] chairs for $1; a good hardwood bed for $3; a good hardwood bedroom suite, oak finish, for $12, etc., etc. Remember the place—[illegible] George street.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Items of Interest Intelligently Presented for Busy Readers

Mr. Alex. Elliott is having the front of his grocery neatly decorated.

The new Council will hold its first regular meeting on Monday night.

The County Convention for Peterborough will be held on February 28th and March 1st.

Applications for the position of assessor and street inspector have been received at the Clerk's office.

Mr. William Algie will lecture on "Burns and His Country," in the Toronto Auditorium, on Sunday, 20th inst.

The question of granting a franchise to the new Light and Power Company has been left over for the new Council to deal with.

The mush and milk surprise party is a popular amusement in most places. Those who make the party swoop down upon the subject of the surprise with a box of cornmeal and a jug of molasses. The mush is set to boil, the molasses is turned into taffy and abundantly pulled, cakes are baked, apples pared and the mush is eaten along with the fresh milk and rich cream.

Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., has written to the Hon. John Haggart, requesting him to hold a political meeting in Peterborough early next month, and in all probability the meeting will take place. The Minister of Railways and Canals will be accompanied by a number of the members of the Cabinet. It will be very interesting to hear what he has to say regarding the completion of the Peterborough and Lakefield section of the Trent Valley Canal, the construction of which is of the utmost importance and interest to the people of Peterborough.

THE HOCKEY MATCH.

Peterborough Overwhelmingly Defeats the Trinity Team.

The hockey match at the rink last night between the first team of Trinity College, Toronto, and the Peterboroughs, resulted in a victory for the home players by a score of 12 goals to 2.

A large crowd attended the match which was spirited from the start, the interest being maintained to the finish. The visiting team played well, but were weak in some points. The game put up by the home players was excellent. The summary is as follows:

FIRST HALF.

Team.	Scorer.	Time.
Peterboro	King	1 minute
"	Wonham	6 "
"	Phelan	1 "
"	King	2 "
"	Wonham	5 "
"	"	1½ "
"	King	1 "
Trinity	Senkler	3 "

SECOND HALF.

Team.	Scorer.	Time.
Trinity	Senkler	4½ "
Peterboro	Phelan	1 "
"	King	15 seconds
"	Phelan	2 minutes
"	Wonham	1 "
"	"	11 "

NOTES.

McMurrick and Senkler played well for Trinity. McMurrick made several phenomenal stops. He is the best goal keeper ever seen in Peterborough.

For Peterborough the only weak spot noticeable was Lefevre, and as this is his first game with the home team it is entirely excused.

Walter Phelan played strong all the way through and did excellent and telling work.

Wonham went after the puck in great style and scored the highest number of times. King played a great game, scoring three times.

The visiting team was royally entertained in the Palace Restaurant parlors after the match.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A Large Attendance at the Annual Meeting Yesterday.

A large number of farmers from neighboring townships attended the annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon.

The principal speaker of the occasion was Mr. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Mr. Zavitz gave an interesting talk on the best varieties of wheat, barley, peas and oats. The information he gave was the result of experiments made in the Agricultural College farm, and was broad and thorough, relating to every variety of the cereals mentioned, known to modern agriculture. He explained the relative value of the cereals, and pointed out the best varieties for the farmer to plant to obtain the best results. His remarks were of the greatest value to the large and attentive audience of farmers, who will doubtless derive much benefit by acting upon the information gleaned.

Dr. H. Smith, B.A., Brampton, followed, taking for his subject the essentials in successful breeding. Mr. J. F. Beam, of Black Creek, Ont., was the last speaker and ably dealt with the question, "How to construct and maintain roads."

In the evening a meeting was held in the North Monaghan town hall. Today a session will be held in Lakefield.
